It is true that I cannot read a sentence one of the letters which came to me especially on my husband's birthday and the anniversary of his death, but yours is such a fine letter. I do want to express my appreciation of your having taken the time to write it. The story of your family is so typically American, it makes me realize why its love.

Dear Mrs. Roosevelt:

I hope that you will read this letter.

Although I realize that you cannot read more than a small portion of the letters addressed to you. For two years I have wanted to write and try to tell you just what President Roosevelt came to mean to me and my most ordinary family during his tenure in public office.

We were a poor family—by any standard of comparison. My father was a railroad section hand with a fourth grade education and a wife and three children to support. He was not an uneducated man—for he was a great reader—with a wonderful memory and was an authority on politics, history, and biblical facts. He taught us to be honest and saw to it that we attended church regularly. But more than that he...
...filled in each of us a desire to get a formal education such as he had never had a chance to acquire. Most children from such a family would have been expected to stop school at about fifteen years of age and help with the family finances. We began to work at such an age, but only part time, and all of us finished high school with high honors.

I entered nurses training and on completion of the course, put my brother through college. After he had received his degree, he in turn helped me through Columbia University. He obtained a good position with Westinghouse Electric and I became an instructor of student nurses in one of the New York City hospitals. Then came the depression, and soon I was the only one in the family who was working. We were no different from hundreds of other American families, and everyone was panic stricken.

Then your husband was elected to the presidency. How well I remember...
As first fire side talk - and how we began to depend on him for inspiration and encouragement. It must be a part of a divine plan - that at such times a superior man always arises to lead the people. President Roosevelt remained to guide us out of the terrible depression - and to lead not only our people - but all the peoples of the World through the horrors of World War II. We felt that we owed him a debt that could never be repayed.

By now I was a Director of a Nurse's training school in LA - helping to train student nurses for service in the Armed Forces. My older brother was serving the country in an important capacity at Westinghouse Electric - and the little brother was overseas - where he spent two years. Like most soldiers he loved the man that had sent him there. My father - now up in his seventies was helping - by serving as a Railroad Crossing Watchman.
Then came the sudden death of President Roosevelt and the end of the war. We all wept at his passing, for he had become to us a symbol of the American way of life. He wasn't just a President; he was a beloved friend of all humanity.

My father is still a railroad crossing watchman in our little home town of Effingham, Illinois—but both he and my mother are highly respected citizens—and so proud of their children. My little brother has almost completed his course at the University of Illinois; our older brother is still in an important position with Western Electric—and I am still training student nurses. As I said before—we are just an ordinary family—but even an ordinary family can contribute a great deal to their country. When there is a great man to show them the way.

Sincerely Yours,

Frances L. Keneipp
