AMERICAN RED CROSS

Rose Field

July 26/47

Dear Mr. Rosecraft

Since I have been a victim of Multiple Sclerosis, & since the tile analysis I have a very time consuming hands. I write a little paper especially now that I am in a Veterans Hospital. I wrote this for you and dedicated it to your beloved husband. I also loved him and his "idols". Maybe you will see my point when you read it.

Yours respectfully
Henry Rose Field

Good-bye Mr. President

Just walk on your way.

Good-bye Mr. President

We'll miss you every day.

May your soul rest in peace,

May we never forsake your trust.

America, remember his fighting words,

We can, we will, we must.

J. ROSEMAN

235 W. 102 St.
New York 25, N.Y.

May 1, 1947.

Dear Mrs. Roosevelt:

I have just finished reading "a Reporter at Large" in an April issue of the New Yorker magazine. And I have read it with great interest and enjoyment as I do any book or paper dealing with Franklin D. Roosevelt, the man.

It is the great depth of his human-kindness and his warmth and his charm that have fascinated me since I listened, enthralled, to his first fireside chat in 1933.

About a year ago, soon after your Hyde Park home was turned over to the people, we visited the grave, the library and the house. It seemed to me that the house was filled with his presence, and I found myself half expecting to see him seated at a table writing, or busy with his stamp collection.

Roseman

yes, he belongs to the people, for whom he so gallantly gave his life - and seeing his home gives one a great sense of satisfaction - and a feeling of nearness to the hopes, ideals and achievements of Franklin D. Roosevelt, the man.

I have been prompted to write to you in this way, in an impulsive moment, after reading the account of your conversation with the reporter, at the conclusion of the article.

With all good wishes, I am

Sincerely yours.

(Miss) Inez Roseman
