BERNARD EDELMAN

June Eighth [1946]

Dear Mrs. Roosevelt,

Thank you for your kind note of June Fifth.

The writer already has a commitment for publishing of this story. I did hope to persuade you to write a brief preface, thus the purpose of sending the manuscript was to permit
you to inspect the character of the work.

If you would consider I should then like to discuss the plan for converting the revenue as stated briefly in my letter to you.

I would like to repeat that the entire program would be treated in the dignified manner it deserves.

May I please have your comments.

Very truly yours,

Mrs. Eleanor Roosevelt
Hyde Park, New York

Dear Mrs. Roosevelt:

The writer has taken the liberty of forwarding 'A Doctor Predicts' for your inspection.

I recently completed this manuscript which has received considerable praise by the few who have read it.

A leading book firm has indicated publishing possibilities and if you will consent to examine the work and recognize some merit I would like very much to offer a proposal.

My purpose is to market this novel and to contribute any and all revenue to the memory, in some form, of our late President.

Although the details would naturally be worked out at some later date pending your findings I hasten to state that I seek no publicity nor would the contribution be made in the writer's name. Further I am prepared to spend fairly substantial funds to assist the entire plan.

May I please have your comments.

Very truly yours,

Bernard Edelman
