Mrs. Eleanor Roosevelt:

I hope that after you listen this music, you will like it. This is just the music and I am sure that someone among the millions of American admires of your husband will write the words for it, making a conviction of the inspiration of a Mexican musician and the words of a North American poet or writer.

This will help to increase the good will between the two countries, when they sing all together to the world the hearty admiration felt by us to that great and generous man, Franklin D. Roosevelt.
