MRS. ROOSEVELT

Refreshing and unexpected in this New York (Financial District) atmosphere of FDR distrust and actual hate has been the reaction to the news of the recent decoration of Franklin Jr. for heroism in the Mediterranean campaign. To your reporter it has been the more remarkable as none of the reactions were solicited but instead were voluntary and wholly sincere.

A banker who has been consistently against the President and the Administration for ten years said:

" The President and Mrs. Roosevelt are to be congratulated on raising fine sons and they must have felt a surge of hot pride when they received the news of Franklin Jr's action. In fact, I've changed my attitude toward those four boys.

" At first I resented the commissions they received but as James in the South Pacific, Elliott in North Africa and now Franklin showed that they were real Americans, I feel guilty about my earlier resentment.

" Along with the sons of shoemakers, tailors, clerks, farmers and every other American they are showing us that our young men are fine and clean and are doing a dirty job by giving it all they have. A man is not human whose spine fails to tingle as he reads about their deeds."

An executive commented:

" Along with the rest of the flower of our manhood the President's sons are certainly doing their part in this war. I felt when I read about young Franklin junior's decorations for gallantry almost as good as if he had been my own son.

" What a wonderful spirit these young men of ours, who were only boys a few years ago, are showing us. Their attitude is simply wonderful and any of us who fail to back them up with the best in us are just as guilty as if we ran away from a front line battle.

" I haven't always squared with the President on many of the things he has done and has left undone but he certainly is to be congratulated for the way his sons are standing up on the battlefronts of this war. It must make him feel proud indeed to know that he sired them and has been responsible for moulding them into the men they are. And Mrs Roosevelt must feel the same way about it. "

Overheard in the New York Subway (Two men who from their clothing may have been war plant workers,)

" " Some guy that Roosevelt Kid."

" You mean the one that got the Silver Star and the Purple Heart?"

" Yeah. It took guts for that."

" It sure did. And that one in the Solomons ain't no slouch. Fighting with them tough guys when he was sick with ulcers. And the one in Africa with the Air Force ain't doing so bad?"

"Yeah. My sister's kid Timmy wrote her that that guy is the real McCoy and all the men in the ground crew say he's Jake."

" Some family heh?"

" It'll do."

" How about the --"

At this point the conversation was lost to your reporter as the two men left the train at an express station.

To your reporter these sentiments brought the feeling that it seems eminently unfair that such people will not take the trouble to write to the President and his wife and let them know first hand what is being said about their sons.

But they won't for the same reason that they fail to vote on election day. Mental and muscular laziness lulls them into the conviction that they are only a few out of millions and that many others will take care of such things.

MEMORANDUM FOR

MRS. ROOSEVELT

In regard to the Equal Rights Amendment, I have always been for it in principle but have felt that a Constitutional Amendment might make it more difficult to prevent the enactment of certain necessary safeguards for women.

Frankly, I am not as much worried about the proposed amendment as I used to be. I am inclined to think the safeguards could always be enacted with or without the amendment.

In other words, I do not think it is a vital necessity in the next Platform but if it is put in I will not weep about it!
