H.M.JR: One of the things I wanted to bring the people up to date on who will be here while I am away is this: I wrote a letter to Nelson on this withholding tax. Have you got the last paragraph?

MR. SULLIVAN: Yes, sir, I have.

H.M.JR: Would you mind reading it? I mean, just tell them briefly what it is.

MR. SULLIVAN: The letter contains estimates that were made as to the amount of office equipment and business machinery that would be required by the Government to administer the withholding tax and required by industry to account for it on their own books. That estimate was made, and it came out that they would need a total of fifty-four thousand additional pieces of equipment for both Government and industry. The last paragraph reads as follows:
"The Revenue Act of 1942, which contains the provisions for a withholding tax has already passed the House and is now in hearings before the Senate Finance Committee. Will you please advise me whether in the event that Congress enacts this plan into law you can guarantee that the above equipment will be available to industry and to the Government in time so that the plan can go into operation on January 1, 1943."

H.M.JR: Now, I just want you people to know that because we haven't heard, and Sullivan is going to be away next week. And then I think that, John, this memorandum of Cann's should be circulated amongst those people here who are interested in this withholding tax.

MR. SULLIVAN: Yes, that is the other question on the employees, you mean?

H.M.JR: No, I got one, July 28, from Cann - Norman Cann.

MR. SULLIVAN: Yes, sir.

H.M.JR: That would be circulated amongst the people. Pretty nearly everybody is interested in this. It is like joint returns last year. I mean, a number of people were interested. This year they are not. But if you would circulate that.

What I am trying to do is - and then this thing, which I haven't read and won't read before I leave, from John Sullivan - there is no date on it, that is funny. It came in yesterday. "The Bureau of Internal Revenue reports 460 complete inquiries on the effect of collection of part of the regular income tax at source" - wasn't that given to me yesterday?

MR. SULLIVAN: Yes, sir.

H.M.JR: In other words, John is available today, and I think that you ought to furnish the people with every­thing that you have furnished me.

MR. SULLIVAN: I have already arranged for copies of that for Roy and Randolph. Harold has a copy of that.
H.M.JR: I don't want you to feel that just putting it on my desk means that I have got time to study this before I go, because I haven't. I want to circulate it so that everybody who is interested in this - and Paul who goes up on the Hill. So anything that you furnish me or anything that I have done this last week in connection with that - I don't think there is anything but what I have mentioned here, is there, except my letter to Nelson?

MR. SULLIVAN: That is all.

H.M.JR: And this thing--

MR. SULLIVAN: I have kept Roy up to date on all of this, but I will get copies for everybody else.

H.M.JR: You know who is interested. Pretty nearly everybody in this room is interested.

MR. SULLIVAN: Yes, sir.

H.M.JR: Now, George, this memorandum from you to me on the Department of Commerce estimate of consumer savings in the first two quarters of '42--

MR. HAAS: Yes, sir.

H.M.JR: Well now, if you haven't already done that - I mean, you are on this committee with White and Blough. They ought to get a copy of that.

MR. HAAS: That is right. I will give them a copy of the complete report, with some other material.

H.M.JR: And, Harry, this preliminary report on expenditure rationing, who has got copies of that?

MR. WHITE: Copies have been distributed, I think, to everyone who I thought might be interested. There are many other copies available. I was going to ask what you would like the next step to be. I presume that there will be comments and suggestions which can be quickly incorporated in that draft and will probably be ready for you when you come back, if we get the comments and suggestions.

H.M.JR: That will be very nice. Well, I made you chairman of the committee as far back as March 16, so will you stimulate it a little bit?

MR. WHITE: All right, I will get whatever there is available. Then we will incorporate it in the report, and that is all we do, I gather, that is, until you take the next step.

H.M.JR: That is right, until I have gotten over my indigestion - mental indigestion.

Viner, you are in on this expenditure rationing, aren't you?

MR. VINER: Yes, I have it. I haven't read the new one yet, but I will read it carefully.

H.M.JR: And make comments?

MR. VINER: Yes.

H.M.JR: Right. Are you in on this withholding tax?

MR. VINER: I don't think so.

MR. PAUL: We have discussed the general idea.

MR. VINER: Yes, but I thought--

H.M.JR: This stuff that I am talking about that is coming in--

MR. BLOUGH: I don't think he has had access to the field study.
H.M.JR: Will you?

Now, at least that takes the responsibility off me for a week.

Mr. Gaston?

MR. GASTON: I haven't anything this morning.

MR. SULLIVAN: The Executive Order on the Processing Tax Board of Review, which has been approved--

H.M.JR: A little louder.

MR. SULLIVAN: The Executive Order abolishing the Processing Tax Board of Review, which has been approved by Larry Bernard, caused some doubts in the minds of Randolph and Huntington Cairns.

H.M.JR: Because they are going to be in Washington.

(Laughter)

MR. SULLIVAN: No, no, I don't think so. I went through it and then I called Larry over at the Coast Guard and talked with him, and I think there is enough doubt. I know Randolph feels that this can be done in the tax bill legislatively, and I think that is the way to do it.

H.M.JR: You are not kidding me on Friday morning, are you?

MR. SULLIVAN: No, and I wasn't kidding you yesterday morning, but this has been approved by the General Counsel's office. Now, they turn thumbs down on it.

H.M.JR: Now comes what?

MR. SULLIVAN: Now they turn thumbs down on it, and say that it can't be done under the War Powers Act because that power is specifically limited to matters that promote the conduct of the war.

H.M.JR: Well, John, why did you tell me yesterday that it would be done tonight?
MR. SULLIVAN: It had been approved.

H.M.JR: By whom?

MR. SULLIVAN: Larry Bernard, acting for Ed.

H.M.JR: And now who changed his mind?

MR. SULLIVAN: Huntington Cairns and Randolph.

H.M.JR: That is the trouble, you see.

MR. SULLIVAN: I don't think it is trouble. I am inclined to believe, Mr. Secretary, that if we had gone ahead we might have gotten into trouble.

H.M.JR: Were you relying entirely on--

MR. SULLIVAN: Entirely.

H.M.JR: Now, we have got--

MR. SULLIVAN: No, I think these fellows are right.

H.M.JR: Well, you know perfectly well you will never get it through Congress.

MR. SULLIVAN: No, I don't know that at all, sir.

H.M.JR: Want to bet on it?

MR. SULLIVAN: I will bet on it a--

H.M.JR: A package of my kind of cigarettes. I am betting a package of Spuds, and you are betting a package of Old Golds.

MR. VINER: Plungers.

H.M.JR: I say that if they put it in the tax bill, this thing of abolishing this - what do you call this?
MR. SULLIVAN: Processing Tax Board of Review.

H.M.JR: That they won't get it through this session of Congress.

MR. SULLIVAN: Now, of course, they may put it through at the end of July 1, 1943.

H.M.JR: No, no. If you are worried now about your bet--

MR. SULLIVAN: I am not worried, only I like to have these things clear.

H.M.JR: I say, if they pass it to abolish it -- I don't care what the date is, I am saying they won't put it through. All right?

MR. SULLIVAN: Sure.

MR. THOMPSON: The chairman of the Board anticipated something is going to happen on it. He cut his estimate fifty percent for next year.

MR. SULLIVAN: They cut the Board from six to three.

H.M.JR: What other good news have you got?

MR. SULLIVAN: That is all, sir.

H.M.JR: If this isn't going through, there is no need of your leaving town. (Laughter)

MR. SULLIVAN: I already arranged for that. I was leaving this afternoon, and because of this I postponed it. I am not going up until eight in the morning.

H.M.JR: Because Frank Knox is having dinner tonight with Admiral King. You have got to get up a little earlier, boy.
MR. SULLIVAN: You didn't think I was trying to catch you on something like that, did you?

H.M.JR: Are you going down there?

MR. SULLIVAN: I am going up with him, yes.

H.M.JR: Good. I am glad you are going. I am serious now. I am glad you are going.

MR. SULLIVAN: Thank you, sir.

H.M.JR: What else?

MR. SULLIVAN: That is all, sir.

H.M.JR: Randolph?

MR. PAUL: We have a joint declaration here which is supposed to put on notice all people who buy from - it is a declaration, a warning that all people - to neutral governments - that the United Nations reserve the right to declare invalid all transfers of property of any description situated in occupied territory. It has been prepared by the State Department, and Mr. White and Mr. Bernstein and I talked it over. We think we ought to approve it.

H.M.JR: Just what will it do, again?

MR. PAUL: It puts neutral governments on notice that all transfers of property in occupied territory may be declared invalid; that is, suppose somebody buys something in Holland or something like that, he may not get good title or title that is recognized.
H.M.JR: It is a tightening up process, is it? Do I sign something?

MR. PAUL: No, we will just advise the State Department. They have prepared it.

Then we have something that might come up while you are away. It has to do with the bonds of certain Philippine corporations. There isn't enough money left in this country to continue interest payments on those bonds, and also the Associated Gas and Electric is a guarantor of the bonds of this Manila subsidiary. Unless something is done, there will be a turmoil about enforcing - there will be suits in all the courts and so forth, and so on, to enforce these obligations; for instance, against Associated Gas and Electric as guarantor. What we think we ought to do is extend the freezing to such an extent that we have practically a moratorium on Philippine indebtedness in the United States. This hasn't come up yet definitely, but I am afraid it might come up while you are away. I talked it over with Bernstein, and there doesn't seem to be any doubt of our power to do it.

H.M.JR: I think it would be, inasmuch as - did the islands come under Interior?

MR. PAUL: Interior and SEC have both agreed that it ought to be done.

H.M.JR: Well, that is all right.

MR. BELL: How about the Philippine Government bonds? Are they included?

MR. PAUL: I don't know.
MR. BELL: They have got plenty of money. They ought to pay theirs.

MR. PAUL: I don’t know. I will have to take that up with—

H.M.JR: Do you see any objection?

MR. BELL: No, not for the type of case he is stating, but I should think the Philippine Government would want to pay the interest on their own bonds.

MR. PAUL: We expected to get in touch with Quezon, but I just wanted to get a clearance on it in case it came up while you were away.

H.M.JR: Supposing I leave it with you and Bell.

MR. BELL: The Philippines have got a hundred and fifty millions in the Treasury that they could use to pay the interest on their bonds.

H.M.JR: I will leave it with the two of you.

While I think of it, Herbert, in your capacity as coordinator of certain Treasury agencies, I would like to see you at eleven-fifteen, John L. Sullivan of New Hampshire at eleven-fifteen, Mr. Elmer Irey and Sullivan at eleven-fifteen. Can you arrange it?

MR. GASTON: Yes, I will. If I might, one thing that I should have mentioned before, you know of this system whereby the manufacture of opium derivatives from the raw opium has been limited to four companies. Only four companies have been allowed to import. Well, now, a very respectable manufacturing house, Penick Company, has taken a Navy contract for codeine, and are attempting to use this as an instrument for chiseling in on the manufacture from opium. They have rather gotten us into a corner because the legal control is only over the import of opium. They have a manufacturing permit and they have served formal notice - made a formal request to the three principal importing houses for crude opium with which to supply this codeine. The three houses consulted Harry, and he advised them not to supply the raw opium since these people didn't have licenses to manufacture it. But, as a matter of fact, they do have licenses to manufacture it. Cairns tells me that we will have to correct that information, and it looks as if we would have to do one of two things: Either let this Penick firm chisel in and have the opium to manufacture the codeine, or get an executive order under which we would control it and withhold the opium from them.

H.M.JR: Are you sure that codeine has opium in it?

MR. GASTON: Oh, yes, codeine is an opium derivative. They have a priority order from WPB or from the Navy which covers codeine or any materials necessary to the manufacture. Well, of course, they could buy plenty of codeine from Merck and Company, from Mallinckrodt or from New York Quinine, but that is not what they are after.

H.M.JR: If they are respectable why shouldn't they?

MR. GASTON: Well, it just raises again this old policy under which the attempt was always to limit the manufacture to a very few houses, principally to three houses. That has been up over and over again, and Oliphant reviewed it and finally reluctantly came to the conclusion that it was all right. But here they have - these people now have us in the legal position, apparently, where they can force us to let them have the opium. Anybody else who got into a similar position who had made a low bid on a contract and got a Navy priority could probably use that in the same way.
Now, it would probably increase the difficulties of enforcement to a certain extent, but I have always been a little bit uneasy about this policy under which we limited the manufacture to those four houses.

Harry has always thought that that was a very great advantage and convenience in enforcement.

H.M.JR: Well, look, talk it over with Paul and the two of you decide it.

MR. GASTON: Well, I wanted - Harry is coming back tomorrow. He was away today. All right, I will get Paul and Huntington in.

H.M.JR: Were you through?

MR. PAUL: Yes, I wanted to see you just a minute about something very confidential.

H.M.JR: All right.

Who is behind you? Oh, little Gamble. He is so small at that distance. What have you got, Ted?

MR. GAMBLE: I have nothing - just one thing, the motion picture people would like you to see Charles Laughton and Greer Garson, Edward Arnold, Abbott and Costello, and possibly one or two other people the week of August 31, just as a sort of promotion stunt, incidental to their September drive.

MRS. KLOTZ: She is marvelous.

MR. GAMBLE: Does that sound as though it would be--

H.M.JR: What date?

MR. GAMBLE: August 31.

H.M.JR: That is Monday?
MR. GAMBLE: Yes. Their drive starts on September first. They would like to have this come, some of the War Activities Committee - sort of a kick-off.

H.M.JR: She was in "Mrs. Miniver," wasn't she?

MRS. KLOTZ: Yes.

MR. GAMBLE: The industry is sending all of these, representing the Hollywood Victory Committee.

H.M.JR: What are they going to do after that?

MR. GAMBLE: Starting on September first they are going to visit three hundred cities and all the members of this Hollywood Victory Committee, eighty or ninety stars, agreed to give up their time in the month of September in the interest of the war bond program.

H.M.JR: I think it is too bad Ferdie can't get in on it any more. (Laughter)

MR. KUHN: I didn't know I wasn't in on it. (Laughter)

MR. BELL: One of the changes while you were on leave.

H.M.JR: What I would like to know is who meets them at the station in the morning?

MR. GAMBLE: That is Mr. Graves' department. (Laughter)

That is all I have, sir.

H.M.JR: Well, if Mr. Kuhn approves - Mrs. Klotz approves.

MR. PAUL: That might be taken for granted.
H.M.JR.: Let me know who meets them at the station. I am just curious.
What else?
MR. GAMBLE: That is all I have this morning.
H.M.JR.: Who is coming?
MR. GAMBLE: Charles Laughton, Edward Arnold, Greer Garson, Abbott and Costello, and one or two other persons. The only reason for ascertaining now if you will see them is if they know that you are going to meet them, it will be a very impressive party.
H.M.JR.: All right. That is your favorite, isn't it - Abbott and Costello?
MR. GASTON: I don't know, I have never seen them.
MR. SULLIVAN: When are we going to get the Marx Brothers into this? (Laughter)
H.M.JR.: All right.
MR. KUHN: I would like you to see a draft of that statement to the bankers this morning. It is in the typewriter now. I haven't shown the new draft to anyone. Perhaps I had better do that before I bring it in to you.
MR. PAUL: I would like to see one point I discussed with Peter Odegard.
H.M.JR.: I can see you at eleven-thirty.
MR. KUHN: Eleven-thirty, yes sir. You want clippings sent to you up in the Adirondacks?
MRS. KLOTZ: No.
H.M.JR: I get the Times and Tribune up there.
MR. KUHN: You do?
H.M.JR: Yes. I think that is enough. Right?
MRS. KLOTZ: Yes.
H.M.JR: That is enough.
MR. KUHN: That is all.
H.M.JR: Blough?
MR. BLOUGH: Nothing today.
H.M.JR: Viner?
MR. VINER: No.
H.M.JR: Haas?
MR. HAAS: I have nothing.
H.M.JR: Schwarz?
MR. SCHWARZ: No.
H.M.JR: If somebody doesn't hear Schwarz' song pretty soon - has anybody heard it?
MR. SULLIVAN: It is good.
MR. SCHWARZ: I just didn't want you to say you didn't have a chance at it.
H.M.JR: Do you sing it or play it? (Laughter)
MR. WHITE: Can you sing it now? (Laughter)
H.M.JR: I mean, how does one hear it? I can't play the piano.

MR. SCHWARZ: I will get a record.

H.M.JR: Have you got a record?

MR. SCHWARZ: I will get one.

H.M.JR: There is a song in New York--

MR. WHITE: Can you dance, too? (Laughter)

MR. SCHWARZ: Sure, can you? I will get a record, Mr. Secretary. Kate Smith is going to sing it.

H.M.JR: Harry is going to die. (Laughter)

What else?

MR. SCHWARZ: That is all.

H.M.JR: I know if somebody doesn't relieve him of that song--

MR. SCHWARZ: I got relieved last night.

H.M.JR: Did you? To whom?

MR. SCHWARZ: The Navy band.

H.M.JR: Any other news?

MR. SCHWARZ: Thanks, no.

H.M.JR: I hope it is better than Howard Dietz's, anyway.

MR. SCHWARZ: It is. (Laughter)
MR. WHITE: The first step in success is to have confidence.

MR. SCHWARZ: I waited a long time and I got it.

H.M. JR: White, have you got a song?

MR. WHITE: If I had I would have sung it before.

(Laughter)

You asked for this this morning.

H.M. JR: I thought the song - we might have it in black and white, you see?

MR. WHITE: I see.

MR. SCHWARZ: Technicolor.

H.M. JR: Did you get it, Schwarz? I said we would like it in black and white.

MR. WHITE: He is giving me the lyrics, now.

(Laughter)

You might be mildly interested in the fact that the directors of the China Defense Supplies, Incorporated have been changed, and Dave Corcoran and Larry Morris have been dropped, or resigned, I don't know which. They are not on the Board of Directors now. There is another group.

H.M. JR: Who goes on in place of them?

MR. WHITE: A William S. Youngman is president and director; Donald Harding is assistant treasurer; Gullander, assistant treasurer; Whiting Willauer is secretary; and Sze is a director, and Ho is another director.
H.M.JR: Any significance?

MR. WHITE: I don't know.

H.M.JR: Sammy Klaus isn't busy. He can find out for you. Have you seen Sammy, incidentally, Randolph?

MR. PAUL: Yes.

H.M.JR: Did you satisfy him?

MR. PAUL: In fact, we are sending him up to New York on a project this week.

H.M.JR: Good. Anything else?

MR. WHITE: There is a brief matter. It may be that there may be a directive given by the Foreign Funds to force the Swedish Government to sell a certain amount of silver.

(Lt. Comdr. Stephens entered the conference.)

H.M.JR: Well now, you will have to talk with me about lunch. Cabinet is at noon today.

MR. WHITE: The thing has been cooking for several months and the Swedish Government is raising objections. The State Department has approved it, but there are objections, and so on. It is coming to a head. It may possibly be that we ought to sell unless they do it voluntarily. It has been in the vault for over a year.

H.M.JR: What else?

MR. WHITE: That is all.
H.M.JR: Harold, I will see you a little later. I have got - as a matter of fact, if you don't mind waiting, then, I would like to see you right after Paul gets through.

Mr. Bell?

MR. BELL: That committee that was suggested yesterday at the State Department, is there anything to be done on that, or just let it go until we hear--

H.M.JR: Well, the Under Secretary of War was to have let me know yesterday, and he didn't. I would just as leave sit back and wait until we do hear from him.

MR. BELL: I picked up the colonel last night on the way home that first brought the message over, and he asked if anything had happened on the thing. I told him the first thing was yesterday, and he said they were quite worried down the line to think nothing was being done about it because they considered the cable rather urgent when they got it - he and General Carter.

H.M.JR: You might tell Hall what the decision was.

MR. BELL: Who?

MR. BELL: I did. I told him there would be nothing doing, he could forget it.

H.M.JR: No, no, but the way I decided we would do it, you see.

MR. BELL: That is all right. That can be done very quickly.

H.M.JR: They can get them ready?
MR. BELL: It will have to be a separate operation. Now they put the numbers and the seals on together. They can do two operations.

H.M. JR: They could?

MR. BELL: Yes.

H.M. JR: And can be ready?

MR. BELL: We can have some within twenty-four hours.

H.M. JR: What else?

MR. BELL: We have been discussing, you know, the new type of nickel to save metal, and we have had a lot of difficulty with the people who run slot machines, particularly those that are run by electric contact. We haven't been able to get anything out of them, and it may be that we will have to move pretty fast because the coins are getting short. I assume it is all right for us to go ahead.

H.M. JR: Yes.

MR. BELL: Is there anything on the proposed press release that I gave you, the rate on discount of American currency in foreign countries?

H.M. JR: I wouldn't do that now.

MR. BELL: Do you want that to go over?

H.M. JR: Yes, definitely. I just haven't gotten to it. I do want - please make a note of this: Give me at quarter of twelve, in my hands, something on this financing, both on the tap issue and the other, to take over to the White House.
MR. BELL: All right. You gave me some time ago this question of the JDC communicating with--

H.M. JR: Shanghai.

MR. BELL: Shanghai. They came in and we went over the problem with them rather carefully, and then they went to see Welles. I think they are pretty well satisfied with what we are up against in establishing a precedent, and it appeared that they had a job to do in coming down and presenting it. Their board of directors has given them a task, and they were satisfied with the hearing.

Now, Welles was having the report studied that came from abroad some time ago, to see whether or not this could be handled through the International Red Cross. I called him day before yesterday, and he said he hadn't yet determined the question and he would let me know. So it is still hanging fire a little, but I think the people are pretty well satisfied.

H.M. JR: Well, I wish you would call Welles again Monday. Would you? Call him twice a week until you get something on it.

MR. BELL: All right. On the Byrd report, that was my fault. You remember we were going to take it up one morning, and then this memorandum from the President came in and the financing, so I just laid it aside. The report has been published. It has gotten very good publicity. I talked to the Budget about it, and they said they had had no opportunity to comment on it any more than we did.

There is a paragraph in it which he tried, I think, to be fair. He says, "The Committee does not claim sole credit for these reductions. Some of the agencies themselves have cooperated in bringing them about. The Budget Bureau has worked diligently in reducing non-essential expenditures and in paring down budget recommendations. Many members of Congress as individuals and as members of the Committee have made invaluable contributions, and of course Congress has been the final authority. That is in place of what he had in it, handing a compliment to McKellar.

H.M.JR: This is the formal report?

MR. BELL: This is the formal report. He has now sent you copies of the final report as printed.

H.M.JR: All right.

MR. BELL: That is all I have.

H.M.JR: It is really Wayne Coy's job over there, if they are going to answer it.

MR. BELL: Yes, it was, but they felt that in view of this and the fact that Byrd brought it out right after the Tydings report, which blasted the Budget Bureau, that he really did the President and the Budget Bureau a favor because it took some of the curse off of the Tydings report.

That is all.

MR. THOMPSON: I wonder if you want to fix a time for Mr. Paul's swearing in. The President has signed it.

H.M.JR: He has?

MR. THOMPSON: Yes.

H.M.JR: Well, I think, if this is agreeable to Mr. Paul - Cabinet is at twelve and the President said it would last thirty minutes, so why don't we, if it is agreeable to you - how about quarter of one?

MR. PAUL: May as well have the ordeal over.

H.M.JR: Quarter of one?

MR. PAUL: Yes.

MR. SCHWARZ: Are you going to have pictures, Mr. Secretary?

H.M.JR: Sure. That is all right with you?

MR. PAUL: Sure.

H.M.JR: All right, it will be quarter of one in that room in there.

MR. VINER: Any charge for admission? (Laughter)

H.M.JR: Yes.

MR. PAUL: For relief - it is for relief.

H.M.JR: It will cost you a dollar War Savings Stamp. (Laughter)

I sat next at dinner last night to Mrs. Jesse Jones, who makes these bouquets of War Savings Stamps, and for one hour she told me about it. I kept trying to interrupt her all the time and tell her that I had a little to do with War Savings Stamps, but she wasn't interested and for one hour she kept telling me how she and two Texas girls discovered these things and made these bouquets, and everything else. I just couldn't get a word in anywhere, but it did help pass the time to listen to her talk about her War Savings Stamps; she makes these all the time herself and was very much interested in it.
Now, this thing, Randolph, is a very rare privilege which I am bestowing on you. I will read it to you. A delegate assigned to any other officer in the Department shall be "subject to the general supervision of Randolph E. Paul as Acting Secretary of the Treasury."

This gives you the unique privilege of being able to stay here on Saturdays and act as Acting Secretary.

MR. PAUL: It confirms the privilege I have already had for several months.

H.M.JR: I just wanted you to know that this enables you to be here on Saturday as Acting Secretary.

Who wanted to see me, Paul?

MR. PAUL: Just a second.

H.M.JR: And then Graves.

Conference in Secretary Morgenthau's Office
Friday, August 7, 1942
11:05 A.M.

Present: Secretary Morgenthau
Mr. K. C. Mahindra, Indian Supply Mission
H. D. White

The interview was apparently arranged at the request of Mr. Mahindra who is, Mr. White gathered, in charge of purchasing supplies here for India.

Mr. Mahindra stated that he had been here less than a month. The Secretary asked whether Mr. Mahindra would mind if he would ask him some questions about India, purely to help him understand what is going on. The Secretary said he knew very little about India and that Mr. Mahindra need not answer the questions if he felt the slightest hesitation to do so. Mr. Mahindra replied that he was not a diplomat, he was a businessman and therefore could speak freely and unofficially.

The Secretary asked Mr. Mahindra whether Gandi had not made action impossible on the part of the British Government by saying that if India were granted independence Gandi would try to make peace with Japan. Mr. Mahindra said he was not a follower either of Nehru or Gandi and if he had been, he would not have been selected to come to Washington. Mahindra said he did not agree with their views but he was a businessman and had always kept away from politics. He said Gandi's creed was that non-violence was the only successful way to meet violence. He felt Gandi was completely out of touch with current events, leading a rather isolate existence, reading and communicating little with current events on the outside. He said, however, he did not think that Nehru would make peace with Japan. Mahindra said he did not know what the situation was now, but when he had left India a month ago he did not regard Nehru's position or that of most Indians as being in favor of peace with Japan. With the exception of one Indian leader, who had a small though very vocal following, who had fled to Germany, that the Indians were opposed to peace with Japan. The Indian people have no confidence in Great Britain's promises which were similar to promises made to them by British representatives in the last war. Gandi was even known as the recruiting sergeant in his eagerness to cooperate with the British after those promises were made. But the years 1918, 1920 and 1921 was a period of severest oppressive measures against the Indians and they have not forgotten that.
He said the Indians do not feel that the British can offer them adequate protection. An attack by Japan would merely be a continuation of the Burma, Singapore episodes. He was of the opinion that, had the Japanese gone into India immediately after Burma during May, they could have walked right through India without significant opposition. He thought there were less than 100 planes in India at that time. The Secretary asked how he would explain Japan's failure to take advantage of the situation. He replied that he did not know.

He explained, in response to a question by the Secretary, that the Indians last Spring were afraid of invasion and many people were converting currency into gold. When the situation later eased, some of the gold which had been bought was sold.

The Secretary asked Mahindra what sort of goods the Indians were buying and Mahindra said everything they could possibly get. The Secretary asked him how it was being paid for and he said that formerly they had ample credits in England which they were using, but more recently the goods coming to them were coming under Lend-Lease.

In closing Mr. Mahindra said he hoped recent current developments in India had not created any change in policy with respect to shipment of goods. The Secretary replied he was not informed of any change.
On August three the Treasury reopened the 2-1/2% registered bond of 1962-67 which was originally offered on May 5, 1942. Up to the close of business last night we had received subscriptions totaling $362 million, compared with $882 million received for the offering in May during the two weeks that the books were open. It is contemplated leaving the books open several days longer, and there is a possibility that we will get at least a billion dollars.

On August sixth the Treasury offered $1-1/2 billion of certificates of indebtedness bearing interest at the rate of 7/8% per annum with a maturity of August 1, 1943. Subscriptions up to the close of business last night totaled $877 million. The books on this offering will close tonight and indications are that it will be well over-subscribed. One bank in New York subscribed to $150 million, another to $130 million, and another to $100 million. Reports from the country indicate that corporations are also much interested in this certificate for the investment of their short-term funds.
TO Secretary Morgenthau
FROM Mr. Haas
Subject: Recent Changes in Prices and Yields of Government Securities

During the week ended last night, prices of practically all Government securities lost ground. Declines were heaviest on Monday and Tuesday, following the announcement of the offering of an additional amount of the 2-1/2's of 1962-67. Beginning Monday, outstanding bonds of this issue have been quoted at 100 bid, with no asked quotations available. Among other taxable issues, representative declines during the week were 2/32 for the 1-1/2 percent notes of December 1946 and 3/32 for the 2-1/2 percent bonds of 1967-72. The taxable 2's of December 1949-51 (offered in July) were unchanged at 100-4/32.

The offering yesterday of $1.5 billions of 7/8 percent certificates of indebtedness due August 1, 1943, was accompanied by a slight decline in the prices of the two outstanding issues, but their closing prices last night still reflected some improvement from a week ago. The average rate on the weekly offering of bills was 0.372 percent, up fractionally from the previous week.

With the exception of the 2-1/2's of 1967-72, prices of all taxable bonds and notes outstanding on March 19 are now below their levels of that date. Prices of short- and medium-term tax-exempt securities have also declined, while longer-term partially tax-exempt bonds represent the only sector of the market in an improved position relative to the March 19 benchmark.

Purchases by the Federal Open Market Account during the week were unusually heavy, amounting to $281 millions, and consisted of $165 millions of bills, $84 millions of certificates, and $32 millions of taxable notes and bonds. Sales totaled $27 millions of tax-exempt issues and bill maturities aggregated $29 millions, so that the net increase in the portfolio was $225 millions.

Branch 2058 - Room 214½
I would like to recommend that consideration be given to the proposal that the Treasury add to its security offerings a special bond without interest redeemable at par with certain redemption privileges. It should be announced that such securities are being made available to the public because of the expressed desire of many people to make, without profit, a financial contribution to the war effort. The issue might be given an appropriate name so that it would be publicly distinguishable from interest-bearing securities.

This bond issue would give the people an opportunity to express their patriotism on a somewhat higher moral level than buying government bonds with a 2-1/2 to 3 percent interest return.

a) It would satisfy and develop a demand for bonds that was based entirely on patriotic motives.

b) The fact that a growing number of persons would wish to help the Government through investment in non-interest-bearing bonds would make it more difficult for many of the remainder to demand interest on their bonds. The comparison would be an invidious one and persons would no longer be able to boast of buying Government bonds at 2-1/2 to 3 percent interest when they could have made a more sincere contribution to their country's future welfare.

c) It would provide the means whereby some of the foreign funds now frozen might be put to work without cost to the government and without gain to the foreign owner.

d) If we ever need to adopt a forced saving program on a vast scale, it would provide a precedent for a non-interest-bearing security. Having once established the instrument on a voluntary basis, its wider application would present fewer difficulties.
TREASURY DEPARTMENT
INTER OFFICE COMMUNICATION

DATE August 7, 1942.

TO Secretary Morgenthau

FROM Harold Graves

I am sure that you will be interested in looking at the attached.

I suggest that you note especially the item which I have marked on page 3.
Hollywood Sending Army Of Stars to 300 Cities For September Rallies!

DURING our September drive, more than 300 cities will be able to stage huge, million-dollar bond rallies with one or more Hollywood screen stars appearing in person! The stars, the producers, the Hollywood Victory Committee, the Screen Actors Guild and all other studio groups are going all-out to aid personally in our Salute-To-Our Heroes month! In September, there'll be "Stars Over America!"

Treasury Enlists Entire Industry As Spearhead for September Bond and Stamp Campaign!

THE motion picture industry faces the greatest challenge in its history! The Treasury Department has named our entire industry to act as the spearhead in its September offensive to sell $1,000,000,000 in War Stamps and Bonds!

Just as the retailers of America enlisted to lead the July Treasury drive, so is our industry expected to provide the leadership and inspiration for the September campaign.

At a meeting (July 17) of the War Activities Committee, all branches of the industry voted unanimously for the all-out campaign. At that meeting 8,451 theatres were represented by owners or by officers of exhibitor organizations. More theatres were represented than at any other industry meeting in years.

The industry accepts the challenge!

Every studio, every exchange and every theatre— with every executive, actor and worker—must unite to provide every chance to put the drive over the top!

We are to be the shock troops, the bridgehead, the command of the government's all-out September campaign. Every exhibitor is in the front line. This isn't the other fellow's campaign; it's yours!

Through cooperation of the Hollywood Victory Committee, there will be an all-300 movie-star bond rallies in 800 cities! Scores of stars have enlisted for bond-selling tours! A campaign fund has been set up by the War Activities Committee! Already thousands of circuit theatres and independents have, thru their executive heads, pledged all-out support!

The general title of the September drive will be "Salute To Our Heroes!" The slogan will be: "Buy a Bond To Honor Every Mother's Son in Service!"

In addition to the movie-star rallies, it is hoped that there will be at least 2,000 other rallies and demonstrations during the month to sell a bond in salute to every man in service!

No community is too small or too large to fit into the plans of this campaign.

Remember that you, as a theatre-man, are a leader in this drive. You are the part-plug to see to it that every other bond and stamp committee in your community helps put over our movie-month.

Get started at once; prepare for an entire month of high-pressure bond and stamp promotion. That billion dollar quota isn't a push-over!

Sorry!

At the last moment, this issue had to be revised to include the September drive details. Hence, much material on the June-July activities had to be omitted.

5,000 Theatres To Be Mad Official Bond Issuing Agents!
PARADES! HALLIES! BOMBS! BLONDIES! BANNERS!
Spectacular premieres, from coast-to-coast, opened theatre campaigns.

NEW YORK! Movie crowds, avg. 100,000, gather in Times Square and along 42nd Street in New York to wave flags and sign up for war bonds.

BROADWAY! A big rally on 42nd Street, where thousands of people crowded into the streets to display signs and banners.

READING, PA. A good-sized crowd gather in front of the Reading Theatre to sign up for war bonds.

DAYTON! The photograph appeared on the front page of the Dayton Daily News, showing people out in force to sign up for war bonds.

BROOKLYN! Movie crowds, avg. 100,000, gather in Times Square and along 42nd Street in New York to wave flags and sign up for war bonds.

WASHINGTON! In the nation's capital, avg. 100,000, gathered at the White House to wave flags and sign up for war bonds.

PHILADELPHIA! One of the most active and best organized spots in the campaign is Philadelphia, where Avg. 100,000, gathered at the Liberty Bell to wave flags and sign up for war bonds.

PORTLAND! Every exhibitor in Oregon is making the drive with this campaign and driving on every war bond sale to the utmost.

COLUMBIA! Every exhibitor in Columbia, the theatre drive is in progress. In 12 days, avg. 100,000, gathered at the Columbia Theatre, to wave flags and sign up for war bonds.

ALLENTOWN! The Allen Theatre in Allentown, Pa., is the scene of another big rally.

ST. LOUIS! War bond sales are reaching new heights in St. Louis, where avg. 100,000, gathered at the St. Louis Theatre to wave flags and sign up for war bonds.

ALBANY! New York State's capital, avg. 100,000, gathered at the New York State Capitol to wave flags and sign up for war bonds.

ALL THEATRES SELL WAR BONDS

ALBANY! New York State's capital, avg. 100,000, gathered at the New York State Capitol to wave flags and sign up for war bonds.

SHOWMEN LAUNCH WAR BOND AND STAMP DRIVE!
June! In September, there must be more and greater demonstrations!
JUNE SALES HIT $18,000,000; JULY RESULTS UP!

Based on incomplete reports to the War Activities Committee, the sales of bond and stamps in theatres were estimated by Campaign Director Fabian to have reached about $18,000,000 for the first month, June.

Unfortunately, hundreds of theatres selling bonds and stamps failed so far to make their monthly report. To date, less than 6,000 theatres have reported a total of only $6,000,000 in bond and stamp sales.

Scattered reports on July sales to date indicate that an increased sale for the month is to be expected — probably 25 per cent higher than June.

The possibilities still have not been scratched. This is proven by those theatres that have gone after sales actively in true showmanship style. They have sold ten times what the less active theatres have done.

RUSH IN YOUR REPORT ON SALES FOR JULY!

WISCONSIN RAPIDS! The headlines on this war stamp for Wisconsin Rapids Theatre, Wisconsin Rapids, Wisconsin, may be misleading, but they are selling securities. The large black sign is what theatregoers will see first. An excellent hobby idea for your September drive.

COAST-TO-COAST! This huge map is standing in a prominent spot near Secretary Morgenthau's office in Washington. On it are being thumbtacked photos, clippings, printed matter, etc., visualizing what theatres everywhere are doing. Maybe you can find on it something you can sell. Keep your campaign reports coming in to War Activities Committee.

CHICAGO! The Loop district didn't miss the round-the-rocker and Fourth of July daze, because Bill (E. & K.) Halladore's War Stamp-A-Dance Stomp furnished young and old a new kind of excitement. With the permission of the city fathers, an entire block was roped off for this Stamp Stomp. Purchase of a 10c War Stamp was required for each dance. New York's famous Broad Street (Night Club Alley) was the scene of a similar block party staged during July by the retailer's committee.

Because of mild weather conditions, this is the perfect stunt to stir up excitement for your September drive. It's novel, and a natural for extra newspaper publicity. You'll need many clutters to keep the new drive on high, so earmark this one as "must."

JERSEY CITY! Punching the directives full of holes is a popular pastime with patrons of Loew's Theatre, Jersey City. A sign on the wall, jolting the punchboard, says: "Saves tickets for clutters."

ATLANTA! Not since the world's fair in Chicago has the heart of downtown Atlanta been so lively. Giant rally featuring a personal appearance of Fabian, and his band resulted in a skyrocketing of stamp and bond sales. All ranks of these rallies are to date only days after.

Dear Mr. Brown:

Your letter reached the Secretary just as he was preparing to leave the office for a brief vacation. He will not be back in Washington until August 17, and suggests, therefore, that if you have not already done so, you might wish to talk over the income tax plan, of which you speak, with Mr. Randolph Paul.

With appreciation of your courtesy in writing as you did,

Sincerely yours,

(Signed) H. S. Klotz

H. S. Klotz,
Private Secretary.

Mr. Boardman Brown,
151 West 34th Street,
New York, New York.
My dear Mr. Secretary:

I do not want to omit to do anything I properly can to advance the cause of the Pay As You Go income tax plan. I know that you have plenty of other sources of information and comment, but if it would be at all helpful, I would greatly appreciate an opportunity to discuss the plan with you.

Very sincerely yours,

Beardsley Ruml

Honorable Henry Morgenthau, Jr.
Secretary of the Treasury
Washington, D.C.
By dear Mr. Secretary:

Reference is made to your letter of August 3, 1942, in which you ask the assistance of the Treasury Department in organizing a program of action by which unreliable and hostile persons may be prevented from obtaining licenses for the possession, distribution and use of explosives under the Federal Explosives Act of December 26, 1941. You request the loan to the Bureau of Mines, for a period of six months of ten or twelve trained investigators to help organize and direct a program of investigation in connection with this matter.

I regret to advise you that it has been found impossible to comply with your request. A large number of our best qualified investigators have been commissioned in, or have otherwise joined, the armed services and we are experiencing difficulty in maintaining sufficient properly qualified personnel to take care of our own minimum requirements. I would have liked very much to have been able to comply with your request, but men of the type which we would have considered it necessary to assign to your project simply cannot be spared at this time.

I appreciate very much your kind references to the work of our investigative organizations and the compliment implied in your request.

It is possible that this department may be able to help you to some extent by making available the facilities of our Training Division, Treasury Enforcement Agencies. This organization could give advice on procedure in investigations of this manner, preparation of forms, and similar incidental matters. If your department wishes to avail itself of the help of this organization, and you will so advise, I shall be pleased to issue appropriate instructions.

Sincerely yours,

(Signed) H. Morgenthau, Jr.

Secretary of the Treasury.

Hon. Harold L. Ickes,

Secretary of the Interior.

Delivered by Mess. Harmon
8/7/42 at 3:20.
My dear Mr. Secretary:

I am writing to ask the assistance of your Department in organizing a program of action by which unreliable and hostile persons may be prevented from obtaining licenses for the possession, distribution and use of explosives under the Federal Explosives Act of December 26, 1941 (50 Stat. 863). In my letter to you of March 24, I outlined the responsibilities which that act imposes upon this Department. The difficulty of this task, as I there stated, arises from the fact that licenses must be issued by local licensing agents all over the country and must be issued expeditiously in order not to delay industrial activity. I asked then whether it would be possible for your Department to aid the Bureau of Mines, which administers the act, and the local licensing agents in detecting disloyal applicants and licensees by such means as examining lists of applicants and licensees. In response to this letter the Coordinator of Treasury Agency Services arranged a conference with representatives of the Bureau of Mines and the Solicitor's Office of this Department, at which it was determined that the information available to your Department was not such as to be useful in the particular ways proposed. At the same time, the readiness of your Department to assist in any other feasible ways was made clear.

Since this conference consultation with other Federal agencies has made it clear that it will be necessary for this Department to undertake on its own account a program of investigation of applicants and licensees. This means that a staff of investigators must be organized who will be capable of directing and undertaking personal investigations and who will serve in addition to, and in cooperation with, the engineers of the Bureau of Mines assigned to the investigation of the technical aspects of the handling and use of explosives and of compliance with the terms of the act.

The question I wish to put before you is whether your Department can lend to the Bureau of Mines for a period of six months, 10 or 12 trained investigators to help organize and direct an investigation program. Such a group should include employees who have engaged in investigative and enforcement work requiring cooperation with local police agencies, since such cooperation will be essential in carrying out a national explosives control campaign; if possible the group should also include one or more persons acquainted with the activities of enemy agents. This Department will be able to recompense your Department for the services of such employees. Authority for such detail is contained in section 15 of the act, which provides that:

"... The head of any executive department or independent establishment of the Federal Government may cooperate with the Director [of the Bureau of Mines] in the administration and enforcement of this Act and may assign employees to operate under the direction of the Director."

Expert Government investigators are essential in view of the size and complexity of the problem. At present there are 4,500 licensing agents, all of whom should themselves be checked, and over 120,000 licensees, with additional thousands of applicants anticipated. Trained investigators must determine how to restrict and to cover this field and must establish workable procedures which can be carried on by such a staff as they may assemble. The work of the investigators detailed would probably be begun in Washington and culminate with at least one investigator serving at each of the eight regional offices of the Health and Safety Service of the Bureau of Mines, which offices supervise the mine safety engineers, coal mine inspectors and the explosives investigator assigned to each State.

I appreciate the additional demands on the facilities of your Department made by the war. I make this urgent request only because sabotage through the use of explosives must be prevented by every possible means, and because the experience and record of your investigative staff in dealing with smuggling, narcotics, counterfeiting and other forms of law evasion are such as compel me to conclude that the help of men from your Department is essential in organizing a national effort to bar access to explosives by potential saboteurs.

I and representatives of the Department will be glad to discuss the details of this program with you and members of your Department.

Sincerely yours,

[Signature]

Secretary of the Interior.

MEMORANDUM FOR THE SECRETARY.

Mail Report

August 7, 1942.

The past week would seem to have set a low for the year 1942, which still is well above the mail receipt of the same time during previous years. This holds true for the July mail, both Treasury and referred, as is indicated by the following figures on letters referred from the White House during the month: 1942-735; 1941-517; 1937-350.

Our fan mail has been full of suggestions for financing the war effort. Soft drinks, candy, cigarettes and cigars, in the order named, have been most frequently suggested for additional taxation, while other proposals for revenue include transaction taxes, excise taxes on personal luxuries, tax on Labor Unions, increase in postage rate, tax on fines collected by state and local governments, and the substitution of the 10¢ War Stamp for the 3¢ postage stamp.

There have been 4 letters urging excess profits tax on individual incomes, and a number of letters urging higher income taxes all along the line. Several business houses have opposed higher corporation taxes, and there have also been several announcing that they are closing up shop because of current conditions, particularly taxes. The ratio of those in favor of the Sales Tax to those opposed is 5-2. Comments on the car use stamp have decreased.

Thanksgiving and Christmas are already mentioned in connection with sales promotion on Bonds and Stamps. There are many requests for non-interest bearing Bonds, and a number asking that Bonds be accepted as collateral for loans or be made transferable. 3 letters in favor of compulsory payroll deductions for Bond purchases are balanced by 2 objecting to this. General complaints have slightly increased with 15 concerning delays in handling, and 8 on failure to receive interest.

Toward the end of the week letters commending the work of the committee on non-essential spending began to come in. There still are many letters violently critical of Government spending, usually giving instances of local extravagance. There also has been a wave of letters suggesting that the Treasury counterfeit the currency of the Axis nations and drop the "fake" money by plane.

Gwendolyn E. Fordham
Ed. Miller, Worthington, Minn. Herewith enclosed draft in the sum of $536.40, which amount of money was received by a group of local C. St. P. M. & O. Railway employees from the sale of 79,320 pounds of scrap metal collected in this community. This money is being sent to you to buy bombs, with the special request that such bombs be delivered to Adolph Hitler by Air Mail, with the personal regards of all those who helped contribute to the "scrap pile". Please acknowledge receipt of this draft, as we will be listening for the explosion of the bombs.

O. E. M. Keller, President, The Small Business Men's Association, Toledo, Ohio. The contents of your second report, just made, surely comes to us as a ray of sunshine - not only for what has been accomplished, but for the hope that it gives us that the good work of your Committee will proceed and be more and more effective. Small business is probably called upon to make greater sacrifices than other portions of our structure, and it certainly makes these sacrifices easier to take, and makes for unity, when we find that there are those in the Government that are aiming to have the Government follow the same line of sacrifices, and furthermore, that they are succeeding. **

L. Richard Guylay, Citizens Public Expenditure Survey, Albany, New York. The report of the Joint Committeeon Reduction of Nonessential Expenditures, listing the economies in Federal spending since the first of the year, is truly astonishing. Every dollar that has been saved will help to make the eventual load on the American people that much lighter. You are to be congratulated for your part in making these economies possible.

Lionel Wachs, Oakland, Calif. (Enclosing clipping re Canadian forced savings plan.) Please be assured that this thought is only offered to you in a spirit of constructive suggestion, as I am a great admirer of the splendid manner in which you handle our finances. Extending to you my warmest personal regards, I am, Sincerely yours, Lionel Wachs.

Sam Ishkanian, New York Hotel, Washington, D. C. I would like to help the Government in the rubber campaign. Unfortunately I am not a car owner and I do not have any kind of rubber equipment. I feel strongly that each citizen should help in every way he can to help the Government to buy all the available rubber in the world. I wish to do my share to provide the funds for the purchase of rubber and I am therefore enclosing a check for $100 for that purpose. * **

Thomas M. Galey, Owensboro, Ky. Believe me, I am one who is alarmed because of the panicky thinking in Washington. What's the matter with you fellows anyway? * * * Now, you had better not tamper with anything so dangerously vital as the petroleum supply. Do you know that we are in the gravest danger of a critical shortage in the event the War is prolonged? * * * And yet you, damn-it, you trifle about a measly little eighty million dollars by insisting on extracting from the trembling oil industry a denial of depletion allowance. By so doing, you are adding to and abetting the certain shortage which has been engendered by the crude oil price restrictions of the Henderson group. I tell you, Mr. Morgenthau, it's time to call a halt -- it's time to think about the salvation of this country in terms of petroleum supply, the bulwark of our war effort. Petroleum is our very life blood NOW. And you fellows who haven't the vision to understand critical situations outside your immediate problems, had better listen, AND LISTEN WELL.

Letter written by John T. Parkerson, Manager, Washington Bureau of Press Wireless, National Press Building, Washington, D. C., sent to Stephen Early, and referred by him to the Treasury. * * * As a newspaperman of many years' experience, I returned to the States on June 1 from Berne, Switzerland, where I had been in charge of Press Wireless operations during the trying months of the Nazi invasion of Western Europe and the Balkans, and later their assault on Russia. Owing to the uncertainty of conditions in European neutral countries, I felt that as an American, the only assurance I had for the protection of my savings was to maintain them in the currency of my own country. Exchanges fluctuated from day to day, and there were times when we felt that an invasion of Switzerland was only a matter of hours. I realized that if such an event should happen, the only possible means I might have of leaving the country with my family would be by having a supply of American dollars in my possession. Accordingly, I kept my savings in dollars, purchasing them in every single instance from such internationally reputable financial institutions as Credit Suisse and Union Bank of Berne at varying rates, which they currently gave to any and all of their customers. When I left Berne I advised the American Consul that I had an accumulation of personal savings in dollars which I desired to bring to the states with me. He had received no definite instructions from the Treasury Department, but said he did not think I would have any difficulty if I declared my money to the authorities on my arrival in New York, and explained the source thereof.  I said I had come by my money in good faith and proposed to take it back with me; that it was the only money in which I felt that an American, living abroad, could have any confidence whatever, and that I would rely upon my own Government to give me a square deal. He agreed that such was the right attitude to take. When I arrived in New York I went to the Customs officials, counted out my money, turned it over to them, and took their receipt for same, which I now hold. I have conformed in every known manner to the Treasury regulations in the hope of obtaining the release of this money, but in vain and without even the courtesy of an explanation as to what I might expect.  I know of no law under the Constitution which entitles the Government to confiscate the personal belongings of citizens who have always done what they could to serve their country and its best interests, and who are above suspicion. Had I returned to America without a fixed employment, I might have been seriously embarrassed for a livelihood, because my own Government has seen fit to deprive me of the just fruits of my labors over a period of years in the service of American interests abroad. I submit that this is an injustice which calls for attention. As one who feels that he has a just grievance, I beg you to accept my statement for the record.
Favorable Comments on Bonds

Ernest A. Rostel, Information, Estes Park, Colorado. ★ ★ ★
I should like to call your attention to the accomplishment of a group of tunnel workers now drilling a 13-mile irrigation tunnel through the Rockies in Rocky Mountain National Park. A short time ago these drillers, 120 in the group, not only signed up 10% of their wages, but added another 10% to make up 20% of their monthly pay check. We think that this accomplishment is a record worthy of your recognition. Recently Governor Ralph Carr of Colorado cited the entire group, including the contractor, S. S. Magoffin, as "Heroes of the Week" for the State of Colorado -- as probably the largest single 100% group in the nation to pledge 20% of their pay for Bond purchases. In addition, one of the drillers, Stanley Fell, started off the July retail store Bond campaign by purchasing $400 worth of Bonds. The $400 had been saved up for a trip, but Fell believed his country -- our country -- needed the money more for guns and ammunition. ★ ★ ★

J. C. Lamkin, Postmaster, Yazoo City, Miss. Last month I sold Mr. J. A. Bardwell, Sr., his 201st one thousand dollar bond. Mr. Bardwell has been buying these for his grandchildren for several years. (Maturity value of purchases, $201,000). Mr. Bardwell is 85 years of age. Each time that he comes to buy these bonds he always says, "I want to send Mr. Morgenthau some more money so that he can keep up his good fight". The last time Mr. Bardwell was in my office, he made the remark that you probably would never know he was trying to help you, so I thought that I would call the matter to your attention so that you could write him a letter one of these days. I know that the letter would bring joy to the old man.
Unfavorable Comments on Bonds

W. E. McNatt, Downey, Calif. Re: Aleutians. I have been a consistent buyer of Bonds, but as I see our supplies and men sent to Ireland, Egypt and Australia to help "dear ole bloomin' england", and our own shores unprotected, I feel I have enough.  AppARENTLY we are incapable of protecting our own shores as the Japs, despite heroic deeds, so reported, but our forces continue to increase in number.   If you think the more safe on the West Coast is of any particular moment, you have another guess coming. My particular feeling is that so much of our equipment and so many of our men have been sent out of the country that the West Coast is practically undefended. Until something is done about the Aleutians, I'm not buying any more Bonds to send equipment to England and her possessions.

O. C. C. Opsal, Chicago, Ill. On July 25 Miss Katharine Foss of this city went to the National Boulevard Bank, Chicago, to make a deposit in her Savings Account, and, incidentally, withdrew $150 in cash to buy eight War Bonds of the value of $18.75 each. She was referred to a Vice President, a Mr. Donovan, of this bank. He protested and was averse to sell her Bonds of this denomination, using various excuses, among which was that the Government was holding back on the issuance of same and for these various reasons the bank could not sell Bonds of this denomination. This was a rather startling pronouncement to Miss Foss and myself, in view of the great and mighty effort that is being made every day and all over the country. We are most confused as to this situation and would like to have the real true facts from you. Miss Foss and I were most resentful to the attitude taken. Also, for the past few months, three of us have regularly been buying War Stamps at the Lincoln Park Station, Post Office Dept., in Chicago, through depositing pennies for such purpose, and in every case, we are met with growlings, surly looks, and inept statements from the Post Office attendant. These clerks' attitude towards "pennies for the Government and its War effort" certainly does not make us feel any too good in our efforts to do good. ** **
Emil Marohn, Chicago, Ill.  * I am employed at the New York, Chicago, and St. Louis R. R., Chicago Division. We all in Chicago pledged 100% for buying War Savings Bonds. My first Bond of $25 was paid June 15 at the sum of $18.75. July 30 I received this Bond, dated July 29, from the Federal Reserve Bank of Cleveland. I'm losing 1½ months' interest on this. On June 30 I paid another Bond of $50, and on July 15, a $25 Bond. I'm sorry to say that I have received nothing from these last two. Before this campaign, I bought my Bonds at the Post Office without any loss or trouble. I'm willing and will do all I can to help our country to win this war.

Sigmund Schlesinger, Allied Purchasing Corp., N.Y.C. One of the safeguards our Government promises purchasers of War Bonds is that in the event of their being misplaced, stolen, etc., the owner is insured against loss. I have had an experience which is contrary to this. Several months ago, a $50 face value Bond was stolen from me, and my efforts by letter, copy of which is attached, to arrange for a replacement of it have been fruitless. (The following comments are from the letter written by Mr. Schlesinger to the Chief of the Division of Loans and Currency, Treasury Dept., Merchandise Mart, Chicago, Illinois.) The writer has lost a $50 maturity value War Bond, purchased by the above company for his account on April 30, at the Manufacturers Trust Company, 530 Seventh Avenue, N.Y.C., through the Federal Reserve Bank of N.Y.C. Unfortunately, neither the Manufacturers Trust Company, nor the Federal Reserve has kept a record of the serial numbers of the Bonds sold to employees of the above company on this date, and so it is impossible to file the Application for Relief on Account of Loss, etc., to replace this Bond. ** **
Favorable Comments on Taxation

Lewis L. Clarke, N.Y.C.  In my opinion the Washington perspective on the desire for greater revenue is somewhat warped. I have yet to come in contact with any one in the financial world who is not of the firm opinion that the Government would be able to get greater revenue if the capital gains tax was abolished, for it would bring capital out into the open, in going into enterprise and doing things in a constructive way, with the thought in mind that if there should be substantial profits, these profits would be used in further development in enterprise, and in the final analysis, all such enterprises would have earnings. These earnings would be taxed, and in the long run, greater revenue for the Government.  I am merely an humble citizen who has been in the business world for some years, but I cannot help passing on these few lines, as I feel I am bending a constructive effort on lines of your desire for greater revenue, and my desire to lend a helping hand.
C. S. O'Loughlin, South Orange, N.J. Thanks for assuming that I am governed by thoughtfulness in sending in my kick by mail. I am thinking of "me" for when I come to pay taxes, buy Bonds, give to the Red Cross, or any other charity or church, pay interest on what I owe, and then REDUCE MY BACK INDEBTEDNESS, I wonder how in the world it can be that I eat, or my wife or any one dependent upon me. The indebtedness accumulated in the dark ages of the depression can be only cleaned off gradually, but let me ask the U. S. Government, representing me, how I can do that trick. How can I pay old bills and then be taxed for the paying so much that that, plus the interest, takes the wherewithal out of me by which to live. * * * This income of mine comes principally from real estate, and that is plentifully milked before the net gets to me, then my bureaucratic governing father does the same trick, and lo and behold, after he gets through, the debt holder or my creditor won't exercise any more mercy than my paternal Government. * * * Won't you try to have put in the tax bill some relief when old debts are paid . . . and I don't mean those incurred just for the purpose of escaping taxes!

R. N. Moorehead, Fresno, Calif. I wish to tell you my experience with one of your tax anticipation bonds.
I thought it was a good idea, so the first week in Sept.
I bought one for $50. I am a wage worker and I figured my tax would be about that much. At tax paying time in March, I proudly went up with my bond to pay my taxes.
The Collector would not accept it - said he could not use it. Told me to take it back where I bought it (the bank).
I tried to deposit it in my Postal Savings, but "no".
I tried to buy a War Bond, but it was not legal tender;
then the man at the window told me to take it back where
I bought it. I did! The man in the bank acted dumb.
Finally I made him understand I wished the cash. He told me, "Come back in a few days". He gave me the cash but charged me 23%. On the back of the bond it said they would draw interest. * * *
Copy of letter written by L. M. Teed, Amarillo, Texas, to the Collector of Internal Revenue, Dallas, Texas.
I am in receipt of your form 21-A, threatening dire consequences if the fourth installment of my income tax is not paid at once. I note you state a notice was sent me on June 15. If such a notice was sent, the Post Office still has it somewhere, and judging by the way some of my mail is handled, I don't suppose I will ever get it. May I remind you that inasmuch as the Government was supposedly short of funds last March, I made a special effort and paid half of my tax then, and intended to pay the rest of it as soon as possible. You already have my payment in June of another quarter of the tax. * * *
However, to avoid any controversy, I am enclosing the $19.75 and will expect a receipt in full from you. I might state right here that there will be no more half tax payments. Future taxes will be paid by the quarter and only when they are due. In view of your attitude in this matter, it would not appear that early payments are appreciated.

TREASURY DEPARTMENT
INTER OFFICE COMMUNICATION

DATE August 7, 1942

TO Secretary Morgenthau
FROM Mr. Hoflich

Subject: Shipment of Planes to British Forces

1. Ninety-three planes of all types, including 47 combat planes, were sent from the United States to British forces during the week ending July 28, 1942. For the third consecutive week these shipments were substantially below the weekly average of 117 planes during the first six months of this year.

2. Only eight planes were sent to the British Isles during the week. Thirty-six went to the Middle East.

3. For the second week in succession, no pursuit or fighter planes were shipped to the British forces.

4. The first shipment of a naval scout observation plane, the Vought Sikorsky OS2U, was sent to the United Kingdom. This is a closed, two-seated, convertible monoplane. Only two were shipped.

* Total includes planes shipped in 1942 prior to March 17 which are not included in the weekly totals up to that date.
My dear Mr. Ambassador,

I wish to refer to the agreement dated January 3, 1942, relating to the purchase of 40,000 fine troy ounces of gold by the Secretary of the Treasury from the Government of the Union of Soviet Socialist Republics, against which an advance of 90,000,000 was made on January 3, 1942.

I take pleasure in enclosing for your information two copies of the survey report of the United States Assay Office in New York giving an analysis of the gold which was received by the Federal Reserve Bank of New York and was deposited by order of your Government on July 27, 1942 for the account of the Secretary of the Treasury.

You will observe from the enclosed report that the shipment, after settling and upon assay, was determined to contain 40,359.33 fine troy ounces of gold and to have a value of $1,697,790.56. After the deduction of the amount of $41,604.47, representing the settling charge of 9,000.70 plus the 12% handling charge of 7,704.37, the net value of the gold was $60,090,395.09. This amount of gold has been applied by the Secretary against the amount of gold agreed to be purchased by the Secretary of the Treasury under the agreement of January 3, 1942.

Sincerely yours,

(Signed) D. W. BELL
Acting Secretary of the Treasury.

His Excellency
M. M. Litvinov,
Ambassador of the Union of Soviet Socialist Republics.

Enclosure.

Subject: Japanese financial measures in occupied areas outside China.

Measures taken by the Japanese Government regarding the financial administration of the areas Japan has occupied since December 7th in general have followed a similar pattern, although necessary modifications have been made to adapt the techniques used to the particular area involved. The information given below on the major characteristics of Japanese policy and the practices in the different areas, including Thailand, cannot be considered definitive or even reliable since for the most part it is based on Japanese sources. Any information, however, regarding Japanese experience may be useful in helping us to work out similar problems.

PART I

Major Characteristics of Japanese Policy

A. The major characteristics of Japanese policy on the financial administration of the occupied territories have been:

(1) The reorganization of the Bank of Japan to enable it to become the central bank for all the occupied areas;

(2) The opening of a new bank - the Southern Regions Development Bank - to operate in the newly occupied areas;

(3) The attempt to drive local currency out of circulation within a few months after occupation;

(4) The use of military script similar to the domestic currency being eliminated, instead of script similar to the Japanese yen as in Occupied China;

(5) In one case, the Japanese authorities are refusing to accept their own paper currency in return for goods or services;

(6) The prohibition of banking transactions within the period immediately after invasion;
(7) A prohibition against the use of Japanese money in the occupied areas;

(8) Provision for capital transactions within the expanded yen-bloc area;

(9) The providing, if necessary, of financial aid to the local area to effect desired financial changes;

(10) The opening of new branches of already existing Japanese banks and the elimination of foreign banks;

(11) The local military administration is given considerable amount of discretion but the important and basic decisions are made in Tokyo;

(12) The Japanese military authorities have concerned themselves with the problem of fiscal administration, including price control. They seem to operate on the principle that the least disturbance possible is best and attempt to make use of local inhabitants.

B. The reorganisation of the Bank of Japan was decided on in January, 1942 with the aim of its becoming the central bank of the yen-bloc. This necessitated changes in its organisation in order that it could be more capable of carrying out foreign exchange transactions within the yen-bloc. Hitherto, the main function of the Bank of Japan had been to issue bank notes. In discussions in the Diet, it was pointed out that the central banks of other occupied areas, including Thailand, were to utilise the Bank of Japan as the clearing house and balances resulting from trade with the yen-bloc area were to be paid for in Japanese yen, even if the contract was made out in a foreign currency. It was recognised that this might necessitate the adjustment of currency relations and revision of exchange rates within the yen sphere.

C. The establishment of a new bank to operate in the newly occupied areas and to deal with such problems as the reorganisation of industrial enterprises, the support of currency, etc., was provided for in a bill introduced in the Diet in January, 1942. The capital of 100 million yen was to be raised by the Japanese Government. In addition, this bank was to be authorised to issue debt certificates up to a billion yen, which certificates were to be dealt in in the occupied areas in order to allow local capital markets to participate in the financing of the latter part of March, the bank — the Southern Regions Development Bank — was established and later it was announced that it would open branches in the different main centers of the occupied areas. It also was announced that one of the main tasks of the new bank would be to issue military notes. The local military authorities were to supervise the branches of the bank and to fix the amount of expenditures and credit in accordance with principles decided upon by the central office. The Bank, for the most part, would provide long-term credit while local Japanese banks would handle short-term credit and deposit business. The Bank would also have sole control of capital transactions among the newly occupied areas and would provide the means of payment and capital by the use of military notes. Moreover, it seems that the Bank would also accept some deposits and would handle the exchange of military notes into the local currency of the various territories.

D. In China, the Japanese military script was denominated in yen. In the newly occupied South Sea territories, military script is being issued in the local currency unit. In the earliest months after December 7th, the Japanese Government took the position that the local currencies as far as possible would be maintained and that the issuance of military yen would be limited to the greatest possible extent. It was even stated that the planned Southern Regions Development Bank would not have the right to issue bank notes. However, this was not carried out in practice and it was decided that the Southern Regions Development Bank would issue military script and that it would be at par with the local currency. This meant that for some time, the Japanese military notes were in circulation side by side with domestic notes. For example, in the Philippines, for a time, the Philippine peso and American dollar and Japanese military script were all in circulation. Measures have been taken, however, in most areas to drive the old currencies out of circulation and it would seem that it is the intention of the Japanese authorities to maintain in circulation only the Thailand baht and the Indo-Chinese piaster in addition to the Japanese military script. Some indications of what the Japanese were prepared to do is indicated by Japanese statistics on note circulation in Southeast Asia:

Netherlands East Indies — guilder 260 million
Philippines — pesos 160 million
Malaya and British Borneo — straits settlement dollars 162 million
Burma — rupees 127 million

E. Remittances between Japan and the occupied areas were prohibited in the early days of the Japanese occupation, but, in July, Tokyo announced that military authorities were permitting remittances to be made to Japan.
Business on July 1.

Following development bank was reported to be opening:

(2) banking transactions were stopped;
(3) prohibition was placed against disposal of real estate, securities and bank deposits, etc. without the authority of the Japanese military administration;
(4) all commercial and industrial enterprises were obliged to inform the Japanese authorities of all stocks on hand and stocks of certain goods, such as quinine, could not be disposed of without the consent of the Japanese military administration;
(5) salaries and prices, including rents, were frozen as of January 31, 1942;
(6) imports and exports of goods were prohibited;
(7) all employees were requested to return immediately to their places of employment while representatives of transportation enterprises were requested to report personally at Japanese military offices.

In the following months the Japanese eased up on these restrictions and began to make more use of local inhabitants. At the beginning of May, it was reported that the Japanese banks were active and by June 20, the other banks in Java were reported to have resumed operations.

D. Burma

Very little information is available regarding Burma. Recent reports, however, indicate that in Burma the Japanese have made some innovations. They are collecting taxes in the form of labor instead of money, and also have decreed that they, the Japanese authorities, do not have to accept their own paper currency in return for goods or work. This is reported to have caused considerable hardship because the Japanese have flooded Burma with military script, and have driven Burmese currency almost entirely out of circulation. Burmese money left in the country presumably has gone into hiding.
PART III

Thailand

The case of Thailand is considerably different from those of the ordinary Japanese occupied areas in that Thailand still maintains its own sovereignty. However, the Japanese have taken measures to include Thailand in the yen-bloc and some of the most important measures along these lines may be of interest here.

(1) In April, a new bank of Thailand was created to control all Thailand banks, to issue bank notes and to have general control of currency.

(2) Formerly, the Thailand baht had been issued by the Thailand Treasury and had been backed in part by British securities and balances at British banks. Instead of this, the Japanese in June, 1942 extended a 200 million yen credit to Thailand through the Bank of Japan to be used as a special reserve for currency. In accordance with this arrangement, the Thailand Foreign Minister on June 16 announced that all previous relationship between the baht and the pound and the U.S. dollar had been cancelled and in its place Thailand had become part of the yen-bloc exchange.

(3) The rate of the baht as against the yen has been set at 1 to 1. Before the war the exchange rate was baht 100 = yen 159.25. The new rate, therefore, represents a considerable devaluation of Thailand currency.
Information received up to 7 A.M., 7th August, 1942.

1. NAVAL

Last night our light forces made two attacks on a large escorted enemy vessel proceeding up channel from BOULOGNE. During the first, one of our motor torpedo boats was sunk, all crew rescued and another damaged. There are no details of the second attack. A naval mine-sweeper shot down an enemy aircraft off PORT SAID on the 5th.

2. MILITARY

RUSSIA. Russian attacks are in progress in the RZHEV area. The Germans in an eastward advance between the Rivers DON and SAL have reached the area of KOTELNIKOVSKI thus threatening STALINGRAD from the South. The spearhead of the German southward advance is now turning southwards across the River KUBAN north of ARMAVIR.

3. AIR OPERATIONS

FRISIAN FRONT. 6th. Our fighters successfully attacked barges and gun positions in the low countries. Beaufighter of coastal command destroyed a German sea plane off the SCILLY ISLANDS and damaged another.

6th/7th. 231 aircraft were despatched - DUISBURG 216, HAVRE 5, Intruders 9, sea mining 1. Preliminary reports state that six bombers are missing from DUISBURG where weather conditions were variable, scattered fires were seen. About 16 enemy aircraft flew over EAST ANGLIA and three over the EDINBURGH district, night fighters probably destroyed one.

EGYPT. 5th. Two further attacks were made on the concentration of mechanical transport in central sector reported yesterday and other mechanical transport was bombed in the southern sector.

4. HOME SECURITY

6th. TRURO. In the late evening the Royal Cornwall Infirmary was hit by a bomb and evacuated. 10 persons were killed.

6th/7th. A few bombs were dropped in EDINBURGH and at ST. ANDREWS where seven persons were killed. At CAMBRIDGE some fires were started but all were soon under control or put out.

CORRECTION to OPTEL No. 268, para 2.

Should read: "4th/5th. Aircraft were despatched - ESSEN area 38, sea mining 45, "Intruders" 13, and convoy off the FRISIAN ISLANDS 5. 3 bombers missing."
Subject: R.A.F. Activity in July, 1942

1. During July the R.A.F. made nine large-scale night raids on the continent, each involving 200 to 400 planes. Duisberg, one of the greatest inland ports in Europe and a center of many war plants, was the chief target, being bombed four times during the month. The two largest raids were on Hamburg. Saarbrucken, Wilhelmshaven and Bremen were the other objectives of the large-scale night raids. Bombs dropped averaged about two tons per plane, and included a large number of the two ton "block busters".

2. British losses on these night raids ran from 4 to 5 percent of the participating planes, with three exceptions. The air attack on Wilhelmshaven by 255 R.A.F. planes during the night of July 8 resulted in a loss of only five planes or slightly less than 2 percent. After the attack on Hamburg during the night of July 26 by 240 planes (actually only 40 percent of these reached Hamburg, due to bad weather) intelligence reports from England revealed that 36 planes (33 bombers and 3 fighters) were missing. These losses amounted to 15 percent of the 240 planes sent out. The British attributed these high losses to the unfavorable weather and the fact that Hamburg is one of the most heavily defended targets in Germany. The July 26 raid on Hamburg, described below, was the third exception.

3. The July 26 night raid on Hamburg, in which 404 aircraft participated, constituted the largest air attack yet made on Germany, with the exception of the three earlier 1,000 bomber raids. About 680 tons of bombs were dropped, including 164,000 incendiaries. Losses amounted to 30 bombers, over 7 percent of the planes participating.

NEWS EMPHASIS

The battle for the Caucasus dominated news pages and radio broadcasts throughout the week. Headlines extracted what hope they could from its ebb and flow; but, in the main, they conveyed to the American public starkly enough the grim tale of Nazi gains.

Editors generally employed communiques from both Russian and German sources — most of them giving preferred position to the Soviet version. Considerable prominence was also accorded feature stories, such as that by Leland Stowe, depicting the desperation of the United Nations situation. Speculative reports of second front possibilities continued to receive marked attention.

The trial of the Nazi saboteurs zoomed into sudden prominence with the Supreme Court’s hearing of their habeas corpus plea. News stories dramatized the court session and gave conspicuous attention to conclusion of the proceedings by the military commission. There has been much advance heralding of the verdict which the President is to announce.

News of the fighting fronts, apart from the battle for the Caucasus, was led by the RAF raids on Germany. Toward the end of the week, considerable interest was displayed in American and Australian attacks on Japanese bases in New Guinea. The situation in the Aleutians and fighting in China continued to receive secondary attention. The Libyan campaign was relegated to subordinate status. At the end of the week, conditions in India assumed great importance.

There was continued interest in various phases of the economic situation on the home front. The Government’s statement calling for a 48-hour maximum work week was treated as a major development. The rubber tangle, the meat shortage in Eastern cities and the fuel oil situation continued to evoke warm interest.

EDITORIAL ATTITUDES

Reflection

Editorial commentators have engaged in some sober second thoughts on ideas which they propounded with great vigor a week or 10 days ago. They no longer seem quite so certain that a second front must be opened immediately or that cargo planes should supplant steamships overnight.

Reflection on the second front issue was inaugurated by Walter Lippmann. "It is an interesting question," he observed, "whether current debate about the second front gives information to the enemy.... The risks of speculating about future war plans are, therefore, very considerable." Mr. Lippmann approved "speeches and editorials urging the government to help the Russians and the Chinese, and to reinforce the Middle East, and to bomb Germany, and to open another front somewhere." His colleagues continue very vigorously and in great volume to press for these generalized forms of offensive action. They have become somewhat more cautious, however, in specifying the particular mode and locale of the attacks for which they hope.

The prompt action of administration officials in giving a hearing to Henry J. Kaiser's plan for building giant flying boats appears to have allayed editorial fears that the project would be written off without consideration. The comments respecting it continue to be hopeful, even enthusiastic, but they are now more patient, temperate and realistic.
The press was united in opposition to Senator Lee's bill to take the decision in this matter out of the hands of present war production officials; their leadership appeared to enjoy full confidence. The Baltimore Sun's comment was typical: "Decisions in such matters are for military and production experts, not for amateur strategists in Senatorial seats. We must keep the professionals on their toes, but we cannot submerge their studies and strategy under senatorial impulses."

The pressure for a united command remains considerable. Indeed, isolationist attacks on civilian determination of military strategy have been reinforced significantly by the strongly interventionist New York Times. The Times declares: "Both Mr. Churchill and Mr. Roosevelt, it becomes increasingly clear, have tried to plan and direct too much of the strategy of the war themselves.... The Admiral Leahy appointment, under the conditions announced, does not change this situation. What is needed is not another 'adviser', another man to do 'leg work' and 'index' work, but a commander with the power of making all but the most crucial decisions on his own responsibility."

Domestic Affairs

A variety of issues made the general subject of labor a leading editorial topic during the week. Almost all commentators approved the Government's plea for limiting the work week to 48 hours. Many of them, however, seized the opportunity to renew their demands for suspension of the 40-hour week provision of the Wage and Hour Law.

A good deal of editorial comment was devoted to indignant insistence that James Petrillo, head of the musicians' union, be curbed. The refusal to permit members of his union to make recordings was commonly described as tyrannical and frequently employed as a flail with which to whip labor leaders in general.

The War Labor Board came in for a continuing share of editorial ire over its decision in the Remington Rand case. And the Pontiac strike was grasped by a number of commentators as a further occasion for berating labor.

The Supreme Court's hearing of the habeas corpus plea on behalf of the Nazi saboteurs met with warm editorial approval. The New York Herald-Tribune, for example, called it "a stirring demonstration of a democracy's faith in its own laws and convictions." The action taken by the court was anticipated and applauded.

Comment concerning the cost of living decreased somewhat in volume during the week, although there was no sign that dissatisfaction with Government policy in this field had abated. Similarly, the irritation over the rubber and gasoline situations remained apparently unchanged. An overwhelming majority of commentators condemned the Gillette Bill for the establishment of a separate rubber agency as a farm bloc device to create a larger market for grain. But they are insistent upon a thorough investigation of the problem and effective action toward its solution.

India

The developing crisis in India became a leading editorial topic toward the end of the week. There is great uneasiness over the decision of the Congress Party to conduct a non-violent rebellion against British rule. In general, comment was hostile to Gandhi and sympathetic toward the British. The Chicago Sun urged that the United States intervene directly in the Indian impasse, but other papers seem to consider it a United Nations problem in which this country should do no more than furnish leadership.

POPULAR REACTIONS

Appraisal of the News

The Bureau of Intelligence asked a small national sample of the American public, "What do you think was the biggest news of the past week?" About one-third of those interviewed named the fighting on the Russian front, which, as reported above, was actually the dominant subject on news pages and in radio broadcasts. Approximately one-tenth of the sample mentioned the trial of the Nazi saboteurs, which was accorded second place by news editors.

Other news topics received scattered mention as having been of prime importance. Among these were fighting in the Pacific, the possibility of a second front, the bombing of German cities and a variety of domestic subjects. One-third of the whole sample had no opinion as to the week's outstanding event.

The Bureau also asked these people, "Do you think the war news, as a whole this past week, has been generally favorable for our side or generally unfavorable?" The distribution of responses to this question was as follows:

</tr>
<tr>
<td>Unfavorable</td>

</tr>
<tr>
<td>Don't Know</td>

</tbody>
</table>
Most of those who considered the Russian fighting of prime importance during the week regarded the news in general as unfavorable. And conversely, among all of those who considered the news unfavorable, approximately half selected the battle of the Caucasus as of first importance; among all of those who considered the news in general favorable, only one-fifth gave first place to the Russian fighting.

It should be noted that in response to questions such as these, people almost always answer with the most recent news in mind; they are more clearly aware of the latest headlines and broadcast bulletins than of those of preceding days which may have faded from their memories. The interviewing on these questions was conducted on July 31, a day on which almost all morning newspapers gave top position to the Russian front and second place to the saboteur trial.

Confidence in Government Information

Interviewing of the same small sample indicates that a considerable majority of the American public retains satisfaction with Government policies in the handling of war news. Nevertheless, now, as in the past, a sizeable minority believes that the Government is withholding information which it ought to give to the American public.

The sample was asked this question: "Do you think the Government is giving the public as much information as it should about the fighting in this war?" Sixty-five per cent answered yes; 26 per cent answered no; nine per cent said they didn't know.

Second Front

Editorial insistence on a second front to relieve the Russians is strongly reflected in public opinion. A decided majority of the sample interviewed by the Bureau on July 31 answered affirmatively to the question, "Do you think that in the next two or three months the allies should try to land troops somewhere in Europe to attack Germany?" The division of opinion was as follows:

- YES 62%
- NO 16%
- DON'T KNOW 22%

These people were then asked "If the allies do try this attack on Germany in the next two or three months, do you think their chances of success are very good, about 50-50, or that it is more likely to fail than to succeed?" Here are the results:

- VERY GOOD 46%
- 50 - 50 27%
- LIKELY TO FAIL 13%
- DON'T KNOW 14%

As was to be expected, those believing that the chances of success are "very good" were most inclined to believe that the attempt should be made; 85 per cent of them advocated an invasion effort. In addition, 61 per cent of those believing that there is a "50-50" chance of success said that the invasion should be tried. And even among those predicting that an invasion would fail, 20 per cent thought that the effort was worth making anyway.

Conversely, those who believed that we should try a second front were most prone to think that it would be successful; 62 per cent in this group considered the chances very good, while an additional 26 per cent looked upon the venture as a 50-50 gamble.

Among those opposed to making an invasion attempt, there were 16 per cent who believed that it would succeed if tried; and an additional 27 per cent of those opposing the effort thought that it would have a 50-50 possibility of success. Half of this group were of the opinion that an invasion in the next two or three months would be doomed to failure.

Cargo Planes

Press and radio interest in the Kaiser plan for mass production of large cargo planes has apparently made a considerable impression on the public mind. Two-thirds of the sample interviewed said that they had heard about the plan; one-third had not heard of it.

The sample was then asked "Do you think it is practical to build airplanes instead of ships to carry troops and supplies overseas?" The answers, which follow, indicate that the scheme is one which appeals strongly to the popular imagination.

It is significant that the plan was approved by some of those who knew nothing about it. Of those who had heard of the Kaiser project, 81 per cent thought that it would prove practical. In addition, it was considered practical by 59 per cent of those who had not previously heard of it.

Advance Ordering of Fuel

The effort to induce early ordering of coal and fuel oil for next winter is evidently meeting with some measure of success. Almost half of a national cross section of home owners recently questioned had already placed their orders. Another 20 per cent planned to put in their orders before the end of summer.

In some cases, of course, "ordering" may mean only making some sort of arrangement with a supplier. Necessarily this is the case with respect to fuel oil. Even when allowance is made for this, the response seems encouraging.

DEVELOPING SITUATIONS

Opinion toward the United Nations

In an effort to discern trends in American attitudes toward our allies and the problem of post-war international relations, the Bureau of Intelligence in July interviewed a nationwide cross-section of adults. Certain changes of opinion had developed since mid-May, when the Bureau last conducted interviews on the same subject.

American appreciation of the importance of our allies increased slightly. There was also some disposition to be more lenient in exacting payment for Lend Lease shipments. And there were indications that any fear that our principal allies might desert us for a negotiated peace with Hitler is diminishing.

On the other hand, there is a steady suspicion of Russia's post-war cooperativeness and a continuing skepticism of British war efforts — in contrast to the belief that the Russians are doing their utmost to win.

In the interval between May and July, there was a widespread Government campaign to publicize the United Nations concept. This campaign culminated in the celebration of June 14 (Flag Day) as United Nations Day. Only one-fourth of the persons interviewed had heard about United Nations Day; one-fifth lived in communities where the celebration was observed. Identical questions asked in May and July give little indication that publicity regarding the United Nations concept appreciably changed people's attitudes toward our allies or increased their knowledge of them.

Only about one-third of the American public has any knowledge of the Four Freedoms as such; no more than two per cent were able to identify all four of them correctly. Nevertheless, there is an overwhelming public approval of the principles which they embody.

Four-fifths of the sample interviewed thought the United States should join in some sort of world organization when the present war is over. Many think the United Nations may become the nucleus of such an organization and there are indications that people would welcome participation by other nations, including the Axis.

Nearly one-half of those interviewed expressed a belief that the United States should have joined the League of Nations after the last war. Nearly all of these people believe that the United Nations should continue their collaboration in the post-war period. In addition, more than three-fourths of those believing that we should not have joined the League of Nations are now ready to forsake isolationism, at least to the extent of continued association with our present allies.
These findings constitute a summary of a Special Intelligence Report, Trends in Opinion toward the United Nations and the Post-War Organization. Copies of the complete report are available to authorized individuals upon request to the Bureau of Intelligence.

White Attitudes toward Negroes

A majority of white Americans are unaware that there is any such thing as a "Negro problem." Six whites in ten believe that in general Negroes are pretty well satisfied with existing conditions. This was one of the most surprising findings of a nationwide survey recently completed by the Bureau of Intelligence.

In part, this opinion appears to stem from unrealistic notions of the amount of discrimination which exists. Among those interviewed, more than one-half with an opinion on the question believed that Negroes have as good a chance as whites to get jobs in war plants. Almost as many felt that Negroes have as good a chance as whites to get ahead in the armed forces. Most whites also thought that Negroes are generally better off than they were before the war.

Disparaging attitudes toward Negroes contributed to the belief that they are content with their lot. Large numbers of people evidently felt that Negroes need little to keep them happy. Others, who put a low appraisal on Negroes’ character and capabilities, took the position that they are getting just about all that they deserve.

On all questions, as might be anticipated, marked regional differences were evident. But while Southerners were most inclined to feel that Negroes have no just cause for complaint, large numbers of people in all parts of the country were unsympathetic, not only toward their aspirations, but even toward their present rights. Even in the Northeast and in the West, more than half of all respondents felt that white and Negro children should attend separate schools.

Whites appraised the hopes and demands of Negroes with considerable accuracy. They recognized, for example, that what Negroes are most concerned about is improvement in their economic situation. But relatively few whites were willing to make concessions in this area. They were willing, however, to provide better housing facilities for Negroes.

These are some of the significant findings discussed in "White Attitudes Toward Negroes", a special report of the Bureau of Intelligence, dated August 5. Copies of the complete report are available to authorized individuals upon request to the Bureau.

Rank and File Unrest

In Detroit and some other industrial centers a number of straws in the wind suggest that many rank and file members of labor unions are growing dissatisfied and restive.

In part, this feeling stems from a belief that the War Labor Board is slow in settling labor disputes and that many firms are deliberately taking advantage of the situation. Workers maintain that these firms are questioning W.L.B.'s jurisdiction and resorting to various legalistic devices with the deliberate intent of stalling off Board decisions on important issues. Workers believe that they are entitled to prompt arbitration of their claims in return for having renounced their most fundamental bargaining weapon, the right to strike. It is up to the W.L.B., they feel, to make whatever arrangements are necessary to clear cases speedily.

Production interruptions which are now occurring in some plants as a result of material shortages add to workers' bitterness. Rightly or wrongly, they feel that many of these shortages were avoidable, and blame management for their occurrence.

Workers are also resentful over the failure of Congress to do anything about the President's proposal to limit incomes to $25,000 a year.
They feel that some of the concessions they have made, such as the surrender of double pay for Sundays and holidays, and time-and-a-half for work on Saturdays, have simply gone to swell industry's already huge profits. They are sharply critical of the OPA and of Leon Henderson, whom they regard as the spearhead of the attack on wages. Workers are willing to accept wage stabilization, though not wage freezing, but they insist that prices and profits be stabilized simultaneously.

Elements within the United Automobile Workers charge that the failure of other unions to follow the U.A.W.'s lead in relinquishing overtime for Sundays and time-and-a-half for Saturdays, has placed the U.A.W. in a disadvantageous position. A resolution has been introduced in the U.A.W. convention, now in session in Chicago, to rescind the voluntary waiver of double pay unless it is universally applied throughout industry within the next thirty days. Many delegates propose to go further and put teeth in the resolution by abolishing the "no strike" agreement. The final action of the U.A.W. convention on these proposals will provide a clue to the prevalence of rank and file discontent.

The dangerous possibility exists that if labor dissatisfaction is not reduced, workers will turn to more radical methods and more radical leaders.
They may resort to unauthorized strikes, for example, as a way of getting immediate attention paid to their claims. Or they may turn to leaders who emphasize labor's rights, rather than the necessity of making sacrifices for the sake of the war effort. The very threat of this may force their present leaders to take a more extreme stand on many issues.
Farm Labor Shortage

A nationwide farm labor shortage looms on the 1943 horizon, and it may be aggravated by a serious simultaneous shortage of farm machinery. The resentment local labor shortages have caused wherever they have occurred indicates the need for prompt attention to the situation.

So far most farmers have been able to get the machinery they needed. When they have not, they have managed to get along by patching up, by exchanging equipment with neighbors, and by buying used machinery. Next year the shortage of new machinery may be more acute and harder to get around.

Except in certain areas, farmers have also been able to get all the help they needed, although they have sometimes had to look a little harder to find it. When the war began, there were many people in rural areas who were either unemployed or underemployed. The existence of a more than adequate supply of farm labor was a boon to most farm owners: it insured them a dependable supply of cheap help. Some farm operators unquestionably encouraged the accumulation of more farm workers than were needed in particular areas, in order to be able to get their crops out rapidly and inexpensively and to be in a position to take advantage of market conditions.

The war-stimulated demand for manpower in industry and the armed forces has almost completely soaked up the surplus supply of labor in rural America. There is no immediate cause for alarm, but the situation is daily tightening, and farmers are deeply disturbed about it.

After being questioned about such subjects as rationing, farm machinery, repairs and transportation, a group of farmers interviewed in June was asked what other things they thought the Government ought to be investigating. More than one third mentioned the problem of farm labor. Even in areas where labor shortages have not been experienced, many farm people complained of the failure of draft boards to give sufficient consideration to the needs of farmers.

If the problem is neglected or mishandled, the present high morale of farm people is almost certain to suffer. The Food for Freedom program may also be upset, both because farmers are unable to produce as much and because they may be tempted to make ill-advised shifts into crops which require relatively little labor.

Traveling Salesmen

Traveling salesmen in the eastern states are protesting their present gasoline rationing classification, which permits them only 470 miles of occupational driving a month, or 5,640 miles a year.

There are approximately 500,000 traveling salesmen in the states in which gasoline is now rationed. Beyond any question, an overwhelming majority of them are seriously inconvenienced by rationing. They now travel an average of 15,000 miles a year; a survey shows that more than four out of five of them cannot cover their territory satisfactorily by train or bus.

While well aware of these facts, Joel Dean, Chief of the fuel rationing division of the OPA, has ruled that it is simply not possible under present conditions to permit traveling salesmen an unlimited amount of gasoline. Such a step, he points out, would require an additional 1,300 tank cars.

Traveling salesmen do not represent a particularly powerful group.
Many of them will be forced from the road in the near future in any case because of the impending unavailability of the goods they sell. Their protest is important primarily because it is symptomatic of the kind of complaint which is likely to arise from now on as more and more small businessmen are hit by wartime controls.

The Government cannot, of course, permit the claims of protesting groups to impede the war effort. But it can do a great deal to minimize both the number and intensity of complaints by pursuing a skillful informational policy. The protests of traveling salesmen are based in part upon the erroneous belief that adequate supplies of gasoline and tires are available, or can be made available, to meet their needs. A fuller awareness of the facts would unquestionably help to make them feel somewhat better about their situation. Anti-fascist Italian-Americans are disheartened by the Federal Government's apparent friendliness toward Italian leaders they deeply mistrust. They were shocked by the presence of representatives of the Justice and Treasury Departments at a recent New York City Defense Bond Rally held under the sponsorship of Generoso Pope.

Many pro-democratic Italian-Americans feel that this event was as great a mistake as would be a Defense Bond Rally among German-Americans under the sponsorship of Fritz Kuhn. They do not feel that their case against Pope merely on his pre-Pearl Harbor espousal of Fascism, or their conviction that a leader like Pope maintains his position by exploiting his ignorant fellow countrymen. They maintain that Pope is still covertly pro-fascist. There appears to be no question that he has harbored fascists on the staffs of his newspapers; some of his writers have been arrested by... the F.B.I. Veiled divisionist statements continue to appear in his papers. A recent attack on anti-fascists caused particular bitterness among Italian-Americans with sincere democratic sympathies.

Government recognition of men like Pope as leaders of Italian-Americans carries with it the implication of an official endorsement. The endorsement is employed by such men to strengthen their hold upon alien elements. More effective cooperation with the Federal Government could be secured through the encouragement of alien leadership genuinely sympathetic with democratic purposes.

The impression that the Government is not interested in advancing the leadership of anti-fascist Italians has been fostered by its failure to release loyal Italian-Americans from classification as enemy aliens. The protest against keeping all Italian aliens in this category has now been sponsored by Luigi Scala of Providence, a man believed to be fascist in his sympathies by Americans of Italian origin. It is through the championship of such causes that men like Scala and Pope bolster their power and prestige. They will claim credit for any benefits which may come to the Italian-American colony through a change of Federal policy. By recognizing instead the leadership of men who have demonstrated their opposition to Fascism, the Government can more effectively secure the loyalty of aliens who are real adherents of the democratic cause.

Enemy Radio in the American Press

The Germans have consistently been more successful than their Axis partners in making use of American newspapers as vehicles for their propaganda. This success has been accentuated by the recent shift of attention from the Pacific to the European sector of the war.
The relative extent to which American newspapers have drawn upon Axis sources for their news is shown in the following chart:

ENEMY PROPAGANDA

Second Front

The possibility of a second front appears to be very much in the minds of German propagandists. Their dominant theme to the United States in dealing with the subject is complete German readiness for an invasion. But, characteristically working all lines, the Nazis attempt to depict a second front as unnecessary, as well as hopeless.
To bolster the impression of readiness for an allied invasion effort, the German navy is described as "prepared day and night".
Hundreds of new air fields are said to have been constructed "behind the coastal wall of Western Europe". The Atlantic coast is described in general as "a gigantic fortress studded with the best arms available".
Dr. Goebbels attempts to discount the value of a second front for the Russians by claiming that the Nazis have enough troops in the West to meet any invasion, and that no troops will be withdrawn from the East now.

In dealing with the conflict in Russia, Nazi propagandists have shown a pronounced tendency to soft-pedal their successes; they appear to be trying to reduce British and American popular pressure for a second front. Indeed, Nazi commentators accuse British officials of over-pessimistic reports intended to foster second front sentiment in England.
The Berlin radio described German soldiers as fully prepared for another winter campaign in Russia — an outlook echoed in Italy by Virginio
radio and press of Germany's satellites. The German press also follows a policy of caution in reporting the Russian campaign.

Nazi-dominated Europe is being psychologically prepared for a second front. The dominant idea in the campaign is Nazi invincibility.
The Swedish newspaper, Dagens Nyheter, reports that the recent parade of the S.S. in Paris took three hours to pass a single point. Many photographs of defense works have been appearing in the daily and periodical press.

In a Das Reich article, Dr. Goebbels assures the German people that

In a Das Reich article, Dr. Goebbels assures the German people that a second front attempt is doomed to disaster. The British and Americans will not come "with puny forces", says Goebbels. "Possibly they may gain one or two illusory successes to be offered up as an ingratiating present to their Bolshevik allies ..... Then slowly but surely our war machine will come into play and one day we shall see the British marching on Berlin not as conquerors but as prisoners of war."

Nazi propaganda intended for European consumption appears to have the two-fold purpose of allaying traditional German fear of a second front and of dampening the ardor of the conquered peoples who are awaiting a United Nations invasion as a signal for revolt. Recently enacted Nazi measures, such as the one applicable to Frenchmen providing the death sentence for all immediate relatives of those resisting Nazi domination, contribute to the Nazi goal of terrorizing the conquered peoples into inaction in order to keep them from coming to the aid of a United Nations invasion force.

Olive Branch for Russia

Ever since the appearance of the Voelkischer Beobachter article of July 20, 1942 describing Great Britain and not Bolshevism as the primary enemy of Germany there have been a number of peace feelers directed to Russia via German as well as satellite sources. The French radios have been and continue to be most active in this campaign. This week the Antilles radio (Vichy) broadcast a report attributed to the Swedish paper Social Demokraten, that the Nazis after the capture of Stalingrad will offer a separate peace to Moscow. Refusal of this offer will mean a Japanese attack on Siberia, according to the Vichy broadcast. The official Vichy radio broadcasts a report said to have originated in the Swiss paper Gazette De Lausanne, that Russia is about to make an "about face", and that Russian demands for a second front are a "pretext for giving up the fight". The Japanese-dominated Manchurian station, Radio Harbin, also has been taking an active part in the peace offensive against the Soviet Union.

Placing a more official stamp on this peace offensive the Deutsche Zeitung in den Niederlanden of July 29 states that "leading personalities in Berlin consider a separate peace with Russia as very desirable". The Nazis may believe that Russian setbacks have made her susceptible to peace offers. Or they may hope to discourage American and British offensive plans by portraying Russia in a weak and untrustworthy light.

AUTHORITATIVE STATEMENTS

Production

The subjects of ships, steel for ships, and cargo planes to replace ships, continued to gyrate and to give off a spray of contradictions, recriminations and "we-will-study" statements. The key point of confusion seems to be the figure given as the official shipbuilding goal. For 1943, W.P.B. says the goal is 10 million tons, and that there is steel enough. W.S.A. says the goal is 15 million tons and there is not steel enough.

On the cargo plane proposition, Mr. Kaiser had his say before the "Truman Committee" on July 29, and Robert Patterson and Donald Nelson promised full and serious consideration of the plan.

Oil

Further warnings on the fuel oil supply in the Northeast have been issued by the White House and by Secretary Ickes.

Sugar

An O.P.A. release of July 29 warns that the supply situation is worse again due to Caribbean shipping difficulties. This should relieve the pressure caused by rumors of glutted warehouses. At the same time it may produce confusion when considered in the light of Navy statements on convoy success in the Caribbean.

Finance and Taxation

The anti-inflation front has become comparatively quiet, with the exception of a fluid situation on the tax bill in Senate Committee, and some sporadic comment on wages by W.L.B. and others; meanwhile a study by Mr. Rosenman is awaited, and should precipitate a new drive.

Foreign Relations

Mr. Lauchlin Currie made a strong statement in Chungking on July 30, saying in part, that the U. S. Government looks "upon all the Axis powers as a single power and all the United Nations as a single opposing power" and that "victory or defeat of one of the United Nations anywhere in the world today is a victory or defeat for all the United Nations."

Mr. Archibald MacLeish in London, also on July 30, spoke to similar effect, and included a trenchant attack upon isolationists.

India

The statement of Gandhi on August 2, warning that India's "hidden discontent may burst forth into welcome for the Japanese...", together with the statement of the Indian Government on August 4, branding Gandhi and the All-India Congress as appeasers, marked the growing crisis in the Indian situation.
United Nations

The outstanding statement of the week was Stalin's order to the Red Army, July 30, calling for a defensive stand. The Moscow radio is calling for a second front. (on August 2, in particular.) Air Marshall Harris spoke on the British radio in German on July 28, promising "to scourge the Third Reich from end to end..."
Secretary of the Treasury Morgenthau announced last

MEMORANDUM TO THE SECRETARY:

We have been doing some preliminary planning to coordinate governmental warehousing, exclusive of military stores.

At the present time, throughout the United States warehouses of various Government agencies are being operated independently of each other and frequently are located within the same city or area. An Executive Order proposed by the Bureau of Budget now pending approval by the President provides in part that the Procurement Division shall take over warehousing for Government agencies, which includes facilities, personnel, and funds. A very substantial part of the field warehousing is now carried on by the various agencies of the Department of Agriculture.

I have talked with Mr. Samuel A. Snyder, Chief, Division of Purchase, Sales and Traffic, Department of Agriculture, with the thought in mind of bringing him into the Procurement Division as Assistant to the Director, Grade 14, salary $8,500, to do the planning and supervise the operation of coordinating all federal warehousing in the field service where there is a common need for warehousing. After several talks with Mr. Snyder, he has indicated his willingness to join us; and I feel very pleased about it because we need men of his type in our organization. In my opinion, Mr. Snyder is the best qualified procurement man in any of the Government agencies we are buying for now. For many years he has been constantly in touch with the field agencies of the Department of Agriculture on procurement matters. He is essentially a field man, knows field problems and field personnel, and I think he is well suited to take over the responsibility of coordinating all field warehousing and then carrying on the operation after the planning has been completed. The planning and coordination is a detailed job which will probably keep Mr. Snyder in the field more or less continually for the next year or two; and when the job is completed, there should be a substantial savings as well as much more efficient operation than the present system of each agency operating its own warehousing without regard to the other.

I will keep you informed as the program develops.

MEMORANDUM FOR

THE SECRETARY OF THE TREASURY OR
HON. RANDOLPH PAUL

Will you talk with Wayne Coy about this?

F. D. R.
EXECUTIVE OFFICE OF THE PRESIDENT
BUREAU OF THE BUDGET
WASHINGTON, D. C.

AUG 6 1942

MEMORANDUM FOR THE PRESIDENT:

In your message to Congress setting forth a program to stabilize the cost of living, you indicated that you wanted to give the voluntary saving plan a trial but would recommend compulsory saving if this proved necessary. In view of the development of war expenditures and experience with the voluntary saving plan, there is a growing unanimity of opinion, both in and out of Congress, that adoption of compulsory saving will soon become necessary, probably by early next year. I had been of the opinion that the pending tax bill should be disposed of before this question was reopened.

A recent development in the Senate Finance Committee's deliberations on the tax bill suggests, however, the desirability of an early announcement of your intentions. The Committee is seriously considering granting a deduction from the income tax for repayment of debt, for life insurance premiums, and perhaps for purchases of war bonds. While allowances for these purposes would be perfectly proper if made against compulsory savings as in Canada, the case is otherwise with respect to deductions from the income tax. Tax deductions of this character would militate against the principle of equality of sacrifice during wartime outlined in your message. A man who pays off his debts, carries life insurance, or acquires a war bond better his financial condition. This does not justify a reduction of his tax bill. In cases of unusual hardship postponement of tax payment, rather than cancellation of tax liabilities, appears to be the appropriate relief measure.

There is the danger that a temporary emergency may induce Congress to enact a provision which may permanently damage the income tax structure.

Granting deductions from the income tax as relief for debtors and for similar purposes would also greatly complicate the operation of the plan for collection of a part of the income tax at the source, if indeed it did not result in rejection of the whole proposal.

Since I am wholly in accord with the view of the Secretary of the Treasury that early development of machinery for collection at the source is an essential part of the program to stabilize the cost

Attached is a copy of the resolution adopted yesterday by the Retail Advisory Committee together with a suggested letter for the Secretary's signature.

This letter will be used along with the resolution to keep retailers in action during August.

It is important that we secure the letter as the boys were a little "hurt" because they were not included in the press release reporting July sales. Only payroll savings and F & O were mentioned, I believe, I didn't see the release.
WHEREAS the present war in which we are engaged is taking billions of dollars for its proper prosecution; and

WHEREAS from present indications this war will continue for a considerable period of time until victory is achieved; and

WHEREAS the retailers of the United States have met and exceeded a quota set up for them by the United States Treasury during the month of July under the title of "Retailers for Victory"; and

WHEREAS the combined efforts of the retailers of the nation have had a definite and beneficial effect upon the morale of all the people due to the tremendous promotion and publicity put behind this effort; and

WHEREAS such mass retail organization has been perfected in this "Retailers for Victory" drive, because of the whole-hearted and efficient cooperation of store owners, corporation executives, retail employees everywhere, the press of the nation, the radio stations and management stations, and periodicals in every field of publication,

THEREFORE BE IT RESOLVED that the Retailers' Advisory Committee to the U. S. Treasury Savings Staff hereby calls upon all retailers everywhere to continue with their efficient efforts to sell war stamps and bonds and continue to assist in every way possible the financing of this tremendous conflict in which we now find ourselves engaged;

BE IT FURTHER RESOLVED that the Retailers' Advisory Committee to the U. S. Treasury Savings Staff hereby dedicates each and every member to further and more intense activity, to greater cooperation with merchants everywhere in the continuance of the sale of U. S. War Stamps and Bonds; and

BE IT FURTHER RESOLVED that a copy of this resolution be sent to the Secretary of the Treasury of the United States, to all trade associations
The British Prime Minister, Mr. Churchill, has expressed his sincere appreciation and deep gratitude to all the people of the United States for their outstanding efforts and the many sacrifices made in the struggle against the Axis powers. His Excellency, in his address to the American people, has stated: "In the name of the British nation, I would like to extend my deepest thanks and gratitude to all the gallant men and women of the United States who have fought so bravely for the freedom of the world. Your sacrifice and devotion to duty have been an inspiration to us all."

Mr. Churchill went on to express the hope that the bonds of friendship and cooperation established during these critical times will continue to grow stronger and bind the peoples of our two nations even more closely together in the years ahead.

The rise in earnings for July resulted mainly from an increase in the value of gold transactions with foreign countries.

The month to month fluctuation in salaries and other expenses is largely due to the uneven arrival of vouchers, principally from the Federal Reserve Bank of New York. Salary expenses in the first seven months of 1942 averaged about $19,800.

My dear Mr. Secretary,

You asked me some time ago whether I had any information with regard to certain transfers of funds through the Argentine. I regret that so far I have not been able to obtain any evidence of these movements, although careful inquiries have been made. I am informed that a particular rumour which may have given rise to reports of this nature has been checked, but has been found to be baseless. If I am able to obtain any more information, I will at once let you know.

TO THE SECRETARY:

At a conference last week in your office with Dean Acheson, Mr. Armour, our Ambassador to Argentina, and Merle Cochran, you raised the question about uncensored German mail going to South America on Pan-American Air Lines.

Mr. Acheson called me today to say that he had thoroughly investigated and found that that is no longer the case. He says that there were possibly three plane trips in which the mail was not censored, but this was due to the fact that, because of bad weather, the planes did not land at the place where the censoring was performed. A new arrangement has been made under which these planes land at Puerto Rico and the censoring is performed there. There are some Italian passenger planes that go down the coast, but they do not carry any mail.

July 26, 1943

Mr. D. V. Bell suggested to his office and stated that the Russian Ambassador had informed the Secretary of a shipment of gold valued at $2,760,000 which was due to arrive at Nome, Alaska about the end of July. Mr. Bell also said that the Secretary had agreed to see that this shipment was transported from Nome, Alaska to the United States Mint at Denver. He instructed me to prepare a letter to the Secretary of War giving the details of this shipment of gold and to request that the War Department handle the transportation from Nome to Denver.

July 27, 1943

I received a call from Mr. Bell to know when the gold would arrive at Denver. He replied that he did not know when that a shipment was being sent to Denver to take charge of the gold.

July 29, 1943

Mr. Bell called me to his office and asked me to prepare a letter of instructions for Mr. Fulker of the Mint Service who was going to Nome to take charge of the gold shipment.

July 30, 1943

I delivered to Mr. Fulker the letter of instructions mentioned above and spent quite some time providing him with miscellaneous information as to the size of the box, the gold contents and possible situation which might arise in connection with the shipment.

July 30, 1943

I delivered to Mr. Greepa at the Russian Embassy a draft of a letter which the Russian Ambassador was to send to the Secretary in connection with this shipment. Mr. Greepa said that this letter would reach the Treasury tomorrow. He asked if the shipment was insured and I replied that I did not know. Mr. Greepa said that he would speak to the Ambassador tomorrow about insuring the shipment.

July 31, 1943

I called Mr. Greepa and informed him that the letter which the Russian Ambassador was to send to the Secretary had not yet been received. Mr. Greepa said he would check this matter with the Ambassador and that he had not yet talked with the Ambassador about insuring the shipment but that he would shortly.

Aug. 1, 1943

Mr. Greepa informed me that the Ambassador would not sign the letter of instructions to the Secretary as he had cable to Russia relative to instructions about insurance.
I spoke to Mr. B. Bernstein about not receiving the Russian letter and he said to send the matter to him in the morning. I gave Mr. B. Bernstein a copy of the letter and he said he would speak to Mr. White.

August 1, 1925

10:30 a.m. Mr. B. Bernstein informed me that he had spoken to Mr. White and that Mr. White said the matter of the letter would be taken up Monday morning.

August 2, 1925

10:50 a.m. In reply to Mr. Grompke’s inquiry as to the name of the man who was to take charge of the mail at Reno, I told him it was Kenneth B. Fuller. I reported this inquiry to Mr. B. Bernstein who suggested we await developments.

August 3, 1925

9:05 a.m. Mr. Grompke informed me that the shipment was valued at $5,500,000 and was to be insured from the point of shipment to the Denver Mint. I asked Mr. Grompke what sort of insurance was wanted and he replied “General Insurance”. In reply to my question of where the shipment originated, Mr. Grompke said that in English it is “Providence”, north of Boston. I informed Mr. B. N. Bell and Mr. B. Bernstein of this conversation with Mr. Grompke. Later Mr. Bell instructed me to write a letter to the War Department in the morning on the increased amount, and at my suggestion a telegram to Mr. Fuller, giving the new amount, was also included in this letter.

August 5, 1925

9:30 a.m. I called Mr. Grompke who confirmed that the value of the shipment was $5,500,000.

10:00 a.m. I delivered to Mr. Grompke at the Soviet Embassy a draft of a letter which the Russian Ambassador was to write to the Secretary requesting that insurance be placed on the shipment. I explained to Mr. Grompke that in order to obtain insurance it would be necessary to divulge the point of shipment, the name of the ship, the contents of the shipment and the destination, and Mr. Grompke said that this would be all right. Mr. Grompke also requested that he be advised of the cost of the insurance with and without the premium included in the insurance.

11:00 a.m. Mr. Long of the Federal Reserve Bank of New York, who had been requested to secure the insurance market, stated that Mr. Sen of Delancy Big 6 firm had discussed this insurance with the 8 largest underwriters in New York and only 1 of them showed any interest in placing insurance, while the other 7 thought that this was more a military operation than a commercial operation. Mr. Sen said that possibly $300,000 and maybe $1,000,000 at the most in insurance could be obtained on the shipment from the Bay of Providence to Denver. Mr. Sen also said that maybe $1,000,000 and $2,000,000 at the most in insurance might be obtained on the trip from Reno to Denver. He said that if this insurance was to cover during transit a route that was not used much, it would be necessary for the underwriters to get together to check their rates, if any insurance were written. Mr. Sen also said that he had yet to see 16 more underwriters that would probably take 2 days.
I mentioned to Mr. E. V. Bell the difficulty in obtaining insurance and suggested that in the circumstances the Secretary might take delivery of the gold at Rome and then insure the shipment under the "Government Leases in Shipment Act" from Rome to the Sevastopol Mint. Mr. Bell said that he would discuss this matter with the Secretary. Mr. Bell agreed with my suggestion that I discuss with the Maritime Insurance Corporation whether or not it would insure the shipment from the Bay of Providence to Rome.

August 5, 1919

11:45 A.M. I called at the Maritime Insurance Corporation and spoke with Mr. Hamilton, Deputy Administrator in Charge of Friendly Relations, Mr. Himan and Mr. Cartzala to see if the corporation would cover the insurance from the Bay of Providence to Rome. All three of these gentlemen agreed that the shipment was not consistent with the policy of the corporation which is to provide under water lease insurance of the United States. They also mentioned that the war insurance corporation had discussed with the Lease-Lease people the question of insuring Lease-Lease shipments to Russia and that the Lease-Lease people had said the corporation was not to do so. This request for insurance on Lease-Lease shipments had been received informally from the Lease-Lease people's representative. I told them that in view of refusing to insure Lease-Lease shipments the three gentlemen must not think it would be wise to write insurance covering this Russian gold shipment. Mr. Hamilton stated that if for reasons of high policy it was necessary for the corporation to insure this shipment from the Bay of Providence to Rome, that upon instructions from the President, the corporation would be glad to comply with the request.

11:45 A.M. Mr. Long called and said that Mr. Dale felt that if given assurance that the gold would not be transported the gold that insurance up to $1,000,000 to $1,500,000 on each plane might be obtained on the trip from Rome to Sevastopol. Mr. Long and I discussed the possibility of placing this insurance and letting the Russians pay the premium on such insurance as was obtained and to record the uninsured portion of the shipment under the "Government Leases in Shipment Act" if delivery of the gold was taken at Rome.

11:50 A.M. Mr. Dale informed me that Mr. E. V. Bell told him to tell me that the Secretary said to take delivery of the gold at Rome.

11:50 A.M. I discussed with Mr. Bell my conversation with the Maritime Insurance Corporation people and how they felt about placing insurance on this shipment. I also mentioned that if delivery were taken at Rome we could have the Russians pay for as much insurance obtained and place the balance under "Government Leases in Shipment Act". Mr. Bell did not agree to this as he felt it would be better to take delivery of the gold it should be insured wholly under "Government Leases in Shipment Act".

11:50 A.M. I called on Mr. Gomperts at the Russian Embassy and delivered to him our letter of August 5 asking that the Secretary of the Treasury would take delivery of the gold at Rome and that it would be insured for the Secretary's account under the "Government Leases in Shipment Act". I explained to Mr. Gomperts the insurance situation and the fact that by taking delivery at Rome the gold would be transported from there to Sevastopol, Galata and for the Secretary's account and therefore the gold would be placed under "Government Leases in Shipment Act", that any losses between these two points would be payable to the Secretary and that by handling the shipment
1. Fuller stated that the shipment had arrived at the Denver Mint. Mr. Howard said that he had also received a similar telegram from Mr. Fuller. I asked Mr. Howard to advise the Denver Mint that there was to be no publicity about this shipment.

2:19 A.M. The telegram of instructions to the Denver Mint was delivered to the Treasury Telegraph Department.

2:42 A.M. I called Mr. Comes and advised him of the arrival of the gold at Denver.

British Air Commission
August 8, 1942.
Information received up until 7 A.M., 10th August, 1942.

1. NAVAL

A British ship reported yesterday that she was being attacked by a raider 920 miles Southwest of ASCENSION ISLAND. No further details received.

2. AIR OPERATIONS

WESTERN FRONT. 9th. A Mosquito bombed the docks at FRANKFURT. 7 offensive operations involving 17 Squadrons of the U.S.A. Air Corps were carried out over Northern FRANCE and against shipping off the Belgian Coast, one Spitfire is missing. A JU 88 was destroyed by typhoons off the East coast 9th to 10th. 256 aircraft were despatched as follows – OSNABRUCK 192, HAVRE 18, aerodromes 22, sea mining off the Dutch coast 14, shipping off BORKUM 10. Visibility over OSNABRUCK was good. 8 aircraft are missing. 37 enemy aircraft flew over this country, 2 were destroyed and one damaged by night fighters and another destroyed by A.A.

EGYPT. 7th to 8th. Our bombers attacked the harbours at TOBRUK, BARDIA and MERSA MATRUH. At TOBRUK bombs fell among ships and at MERSA MATRUH an F-boat (tank landing craft) was hit. On the 8th, a second F-boat was hit off BARDIA.

3. HOME SECURITY

9th to 10th. Flares were dropped over many towns in LANCASHIRE and on the Northeast coast slight damage reported, chiefly to crops and farm buildings. At PETERBOROUGH, incendiary bombs caused some damage to the roofs of the Cathedral, the Bishop’s Palace and the Town Hall.

4. The Germans are undertaking important alterations at LA PALLICE. A new lock is under construction, shelters for 4 more U-boats are being built and booms are being laid to protect the entrances to the roadsends.
The following are highlights of a recent statement by Soviet Ambassador Maisky to a private gathering of 300 members of the British Parliament and "off the record" to 21 leading British newspaper editors:

1. The military power of the Soviet Union probably has reached its peak and will be lower in 1943 than it is today. Losses in killed, wounded and captured are estimated at five million.

2. Russia has lost about half of its steel and pig iron production and three-quarters of its aluminum output.

3. The loss of the Ukraine and the threatened loss of the Kuban granary will result in a serious food problem next year.

4. The German capture of an extensive railway network on the southern front has increased the mobility of the German forces and reduced that of the Russians.

5. The Russian forces have been forced to withdraw steadily as the only alternative to encirclement and annihilation. Only in this way have the Russians retained their fighting power and cohesion.

6. The answer to these rapidly mounting difficulties is an Allied second front this year. Every Allied division landed on the Continent this year would be worth two or three next year. If a second front is postponed until 1943, the increased strength of the Anglo-Saxon powers will be counter-balanced by the weakened condition of the Soviet Union. By next year the Nazis may be able to transfer large forces to Western Europe.

MEMORANDUM FOR THE FILES:

Mr. Willkie telephoned me yesterday afternoon. He said he just wished to keep me informed as to the developments in their negotiations with the British.

They had had a satisfactory meeting and the British had stated that they were going to ask to have special representatives to conduct further negotiations sent from London. He expected that they would arrive shortly at which time the discussions would be resumed.

MEMORANDUM FOR THE SECRETARY:

Messrs. Bell, Gaston, Kuhn and Blough had a conference at 9:15 this morning in Mr. Bell's office, at which we discussed your suggestion that someone have a conference with Senator Vandenberg in order to obtain a more definite statement as to the meaning of his call on the Administration to submit a "comprehensive" fiscal program for financing the war effort. For your information there is attached hereto a copy of the account of Senator Vandenberg's call in the New York Tribune of August 10.

It was thought in many respects undesirable to make a formal call upon Senator Vandenberg, the consensus of opinion being that he might make political capital out of such a call by announcing in the press that the Under Secretary and others in the Treasury were consulting him. As a compromise measure, it was suggested that I interview Senator Vandenberg more or less informally before the Senate finance hearings. I therefore left for the Senate hearing room and was able to run into Senator Vandenberg very casually just before the hearings began at 10 o'clock.

I told the Senator that I was interested in knowing what he meant by his call for a "comprehensive" financing plan about which he spoke to me the day before, that I had been reading the newspaper account since that time and wondered what particularly the Senator had in mind. He told me the following:

(1) His opinion is that we will have to resort not only to a sales tax but also to compulsive savings of a drastic character. On this point he doesn't think that compulsory savings would be passed by Congress immediately but that it would be part of a broad financing effort for which the public mind should be prepared at this time.

(2) The Senator thinks there is a great misconception in the public mind in that it is generally thought that the war will be financed by an eight billion dollar tax bill and the President's demagogical $25,000 limitation proposal. (The Senator said he did not blame the President for making this proposal; "We all have to be demagogues at times," he said.) This approach to the problem neglects the thirty-billion dollar commercial bank financing necessity which he thought is not being faced at all. He thought, in other words, that the Treasury had no plan for this important end of the picture.

(3) The Senator thinks it will take some time to work out these problems and that much public education is necessary. He thinks the Treasury is dawdling with the problem and will have to face it suddenly some time, say a few months from now when the public will be totally unprepared. On this point he said that the public will not accept a sudden unsupported pronouncement of change or development of policy by the Secretary but that any such new program should be supported by the greatest fiscal experts in the country. This is the background of his demand for a committee to be appointed by the President to study the problem. The committee would serve as a sort of prestige factor in the equation. I asked the Senator whether he had any particular persons in mind for such a committee and he replied that he did not.
In the course of my conversation with the Senator he observed that we were being too political in advance of elections. Throughout the conversation he exhibited a very friendly attitude toward you personally.

Plan to Finance War Demanded

By Vandenberg

Wants Best Fiscal Minds of Land Put to Work on Comprehensive Program

From the Herald Tribune Service
WASHINGTON, Aug. 10—As the Senate Finance Committee prepared to embark on what its members hope will be the last week of public hearings on the House-approved $4,771,000,000 revenue bill, Senator Arthur K. Vandenberg, Republican of Michigan, called today on the Administration to submit a "comprehensive" fiscal program for financing the war effort.

A member of the Finance Committee, Senator Vandenberg pointed out that Congress is devoting at least nine months to trying to raise from $5,000,000,000 to $6,000,000,000 in taxes, as one segment of a financial program of $50,000,000,000. At the same time the Treasury proposes to take the entire year on a voluntary bond sales campaign to raise $12,000,000,000, representing another segment.

At the result, as far as Congress and the public have been informed, Senator Vandenberg concluded, the Treasury will be required to borrow some $50,000,000,000 from the banks, a procedure which, he said, was certainly potentially inflationary.

"President Roosevelt," said Senator Vandenberg, "should put the best fiscal minds of the country to work immediately on a plan of way financing that will combine taxation with government borrowing in a comprehensive program."

Silent on Sales-Tax Showdown

At the same time the Michigan Senator, who is an outspoken advocate of the sales tax as a means of raising new revenue to the level of the Treasury recommendation of $8,700,000,000, would not comment on the final showdown in the Finance Committee on this controversial levy. To date the hearings of the committee have indicated that a majority of the membership finally will oppose the sales tax and probably report a bill not greatly in excess of the $6,000,000,000 plus provided in the House measure and derived mainly from drastic increases in the income tax on both individuals and corporations.

The committee enters its third week of hearings with Congress still awaiting President Roosevelt's promised revision of his anti-inflation program, plans for which are said to be under study by Justice Samuel Rosenman, of the New York Supreme Court.

In announcing today the quotas for bond sales for August, the Treasury Department disclosed that the total had been fixed at $13,000,000,000, although no change $13,000,000,000; the August quotas for New York City was announced at $1,000,000,000.

Conference in the State Department
Tuesday, August 11, 1942
4:00 P.M.

The meeting was held in Mr. Acheson's office to consider the latest draft setting up an International Relief Authority.

The committee members were in agreement on this latest draft, as appended, with the exception of some minor changes to be incorporated in the final draft.

Mr. Acheson stated that he would like to present that final draft to Secretary Hull then possibly to the President.

Mr. Stone of the Board of Economic Warfare, said that his chief would probably want some time to consider the matter before any such action was taken. Mr. White stated that the Secretary of the Treasury had not yet examined the draft and that he hoped it was clear to Mr. Acheson that the Treasury Department had not yet approved of the draft.

4. The Council may establish such standing committees as it considers desirable to advise it, and, in intervals between sessions of the Council, to advise the Policy Committee. The members of such committees shall be appointed by the Policy Committee, with the approval of the Council if it be in session, and otherwise subject to its ratification, from members of the Council or alternates nominated for the purpose.

Among these committees, the Council may establish regional committees to advise it on the making of plans and formulation of policy for the relief and rehabilitation of Europe, the Far East and of any other areas where such committees may be found desirable.

The regional committees shall normally meet within the area and shall include members of the Council, or their alternates, representing the member governments directly concerned with the problems of relief and rehabilitation in that area. The Regional Committee on European Relief

All such contributions received by the Administration shall be accounted for.

The governmental authority of any territory receiving aid from the Relief and Rehabilitation Administration shall in addition place at the disposal of the Administration any sums required in the currency of that territory for local expenditure in the administration or distribution of such aid.
Article VII

Honorable Henry Morgenthau, Jr.
Secretary of the Treasury
Washington, D. C.

Dear Henry,

I am delighted to see that Randolph Paul has been appointed General Counsel for the Treasury Department. He has in a marked degree the expert knowledge of revenue law and the fairness of mind which are so essential to the proper administration of the laws. The relations of the Treasury to the public are so important that a man of the mental attitude and expert knowledge of Paul will unquestionably be invaluable at this time.

With kindest personal regards,

Sincerely yours,

Morrison Shafroth

MEMORANDUM FOR THE FILES

Subject: Telephone conversation with Dr. Herrera of the Cuban Embassy, August 12, 1942

I called Dr. Herrera of the Cuban Embassy regarding the message he had received from his Government on the purchase of gold.

The Cuban Embassy has been informed by its Government that Cuba wishes to undertake three gold purchases of $5 million each, payment to be made in United States currency delivered in Havana. Dr. Herrera told me that it was clear to them that they are asking us to make these gold sales apart from the agreement of July 6, 1942.

I explained to Dr. Herrera that the first telegram from Havana asked us to sell $5 million of gold against currency, which we agreed to do. The second telegram from Havana requested us to have $1 million in gold earmarked to the account of Cuba. At the same time, we were asked whether we would agree to two further transactions of $5 million each.

It appears from the exchange of telegrams and the conversation with Dr. Herrera that the Cuban Government regards the commitment to sell them $5 million in gold for United States currency as partially filled by the $1 million sale, and that two further sales of $5 million each are requested so that total sales would be $15 million. The Cuban Embassy is uncertain whether the $15 million mentioned in their instructions from Havana is intended to include or exclude the recent purchase of $1 million.

I informed Dr. Herrera that we would be prepared to proceed with the sale of the first $5 million of gold for United States currency delivered in Havana, but that we should prefer to consider each transaction separately as the Cuban Government proposes it to us, without committing ourselves now to undertake further transactions of a similar character.

Dr. Herrera informed me that he expects to place the orders for the gold sales from the Embassy in Washington.

We have provided Dr. Herrera with the cables to and from Havana.

MEMORANDUM FOR THE FILES

Subject: Conference with Mr. Niemeyer in Mr. White's office, August 12, 1942

In the absence of Under Secretary Bell, Mr. Niemeyer called on Mr. White to discuss the possibility of purchasing the 4 million ounces of ordinary silver held by the Treasury. Mr. Niemeyer stated that the silver was needed for war orders and that the shortage of silver was so great that they were considering closing down some of their operations.

Mr. White said that the Treasury is eager to see the silver put into use in the war effort but there are some steps that must be cleared before the silver can be sold, and that the Treasury would like to sell it through such channels as will assure its use in a manner that will contribute most to the war effort. He added that no definite decision had been made yet as to the method of sale, but if there appeared to be any immediate prospect that some could be sold to the trade, we would let Mr. Niemeyer know. Mr. Niemeyer agreed to the desirability of this procedure.

Mr. Niemeyer raised the question of how it would be possible to get the Treasury silver stock into use in the war effort. He said he realised that it was a difficult political question. Mr. White said that the principal interest of the Treasury was to see that nothing is withheld that could be useful in the war effort.

Mr. Niemeyer then said that he was to see Senator McCarran this afternoon and that he intended to tell the Senator that the long-run interests of the silver producers and silver fabricators were the same; that it was not to the advantage of the silver producers to have pressure put upon the fabricators of silver jewelry and silverware. Mr. Niemeyer said he intended to propose that Senator McCarran agree to a bill authorizing the Treasury to sell its silver stocks not used as a backing for currency at the average price at which the Treasury acquired it with the provision that the Treasury repurchase an equivalent amount of silver after the war at a price not in excess of this average price.

MEMORANDUM TO THE SECRETARY:

There is submitted herewith the operating report of Lend-Lease purchases for the week ended August 8, 1942.

Preliminary steps are now being undertaken to obtain from the countries participating in the Lend-Lease program their estimated requirements for the calendar year 1943, which can be used as a basis for appropriation requests as the current allocations expire at the end of this year.

EXPLANATION OF DECREASE

The decline in total Allocations in the amount of $4,000,000 was caused by the revocation of $4,500,000 from Services & Expenses fund, which is included under Undistributed & Miscellaneous, and a net decrease of $2,000,000 in Russian Allocations, as against the total amount of new allocations reported for the week.
Information received up to 7 A.M., 11th August, 1942.

1. MILITARY

RUSSIA. The Russians are making local attacks at several points in the northern and central sectors. The German advance on STALINGRAD has made no appreciable progress. In the CAUCASUS the Germans have advanced further. They have probably reached MAIKOP and are approaching KRASNODAR.

2. AIR OPERATIONS

WESTERN FRONT. 9th/10th. OSNABRUCK. 166 aircraft including 88 heavy dropped approximately 300 tons of H.E. and 150 tons of incendiaries besides flares. Although flares were rather scattered the attack developed well and certain known decoys helped crews in identifying the target rather than deceiving them. Several 4,000 lb. bombs were seen to fall in the old town and on the railway centres and some large fires were started.

10th/11th. 69 aircraft were despatched - sea mining off East DENMARK 52, anti-shipping 12, Intruders 5. 3 are missing. About 35 enemy aircraft operated chiefly over EAST ANGLIA.

EGYPT. 8th/9th. Our bombers attacked TOBRUK HARBOUR and in cooperation with Naval aircraft landing grounds at EL DABA. On the 9th EL DABA landing grounds were again attacked and other bombers operated against shipping in BENGHAZI HARBOUR where one vessel was hit.

MALTA. 10th. 3 JU 88's with fighter escort attacked TAKALI aerodrome and damaged 5 aircraft on the ground. 3 German fighters were destroyed. 1 Spitfire is missing.

3. HOME SECURITY

10th/11th. Scattered bombing over SUFFOLK and ESSEX chiefly with incendiaries. 7 persons killed and 50 buried under debris at a mental hospital.
