Surplus Property
Post-War Planning: Surplus Property.
Operator: Mr. O'Connell. Go ahead.

NMJr: Hello.

Mr. O'Connell: Hello, Mr. Secretary. Joe Dubbs is here with me.

NMJr: Good. Now, can you hear me?

C: Yes.

NMJr: You know I've got President Truman's resolution to go ahead and write a series of articles on the Morgenthau Plan.

C: Yes.

NMJr: And I've got David Loth gone with me.

C: Yeah.

NMJr: Now there are several things in the article the principal thing is my own personality which I'm trying to get into it.

C: Yeah.

NMJr: I don't need the help of you gentlemen, but I do need your help with this. The article doesn't show enough about how the German carmine hangs into this country. Hello?

C: Yes.

NMJr: And I want examples of cartels like the Hello?

C: Yes.

NMJr: Now I'm going to mention some. They may be good and they may not, but between you and Joe you can get them together.

C: Yeah.

NMJr: I mean where as I remember they had a conference on and for some reason which we were never allowed to use.

C: Yeah.

NMJr: Although the company was here and had it.

C: Yeah.

NMJr: I think that's correct.

C: Yeah. I don't know but we can find out, certainly.

NMJr: Well, you can find out, but as I remember it they had a very fine injection carbonate for subway use, and it was here but we couldn't use it. Of course the rubber thing...

C: Yeah, that's the Standard Oil.

NMJr: Yeah?

C: Yeah.

NMJr: Then, of course, the general aniline's dye - the one we have ourselves.

C: Yeah.

NMJr: And then how through them they got into South America.

C: Yeah.

NMJr: Yeah.

C: Yeah.

NMJr: Now you fellows may have some better examples than that, but I want to show how the German's cartel trust reached into this country... .

C: Yes.

NMJr: ...suppressed competition, kept prices up...

C: Yeah.

NMJr: ...and how the big boys operated.

C: Yeah.

NMJr: Now those were a few that I can think of, but if you fellows can think of anything better...

C: Yeah.
I wish you would get together.

I think the magnesium story is probably a fairly good one, as I recall it, involving Aluminum Company of America. I think they had a tie-in with the Germans.

Well, if they can it — any time you can get the stuff — between you and Joe, and we'll get as many more people as necessary — knock it off and put it on the telegraph.

All right, we'll do what we can right away.

Now, the other thing that I went and did on it is that I went some bright young man up there to go up to the library of Congress and see whether they have a record of the debates which took place in the Reichstag — took place ten years before Germany went to war. Hello?

Yes.

And I want to see if there wasn't some member of the German Reich staff who protested in the interest of the small agriculturists that the big landowner was doing this.

Yeah.

Yeah.

Now I know this is up at Vassar College. The library there has the complete debates that took place in the French Parliament.

Yeah.

But I want to show that even the German representative protested against the big landowner because the little landowner couldn't get along.

Yeah.

See?

Yeah.
G1: Yeah.

NHJr: ...we're going full blast down here.

G1: Well, that's fine.

NHJr: And I need this additional support.

D1: Right. Now, Joe DiBalsi wishes to speak with you for a moment.

NHJr: All right.

Mr. Joe DiBalsi: Hello.

NHJr: Hello.

D1: Mr. Secretary... Mr. Secretary.

NHJr: Yeah.

D1: This....

NHJr: You've got to talk very loud, Joe.

D1: On this Pauly appointment...

NHJr: Yeah.

D1: ...Lubin was -- called me over last night and we had a long talk.

NHJr: Yeah.

D1: My off-hand reaction is, I don't know how you feel, that it may not be too bad.

NHJr: Well, I don't know. I just don't know -- and I can't get upset down here.

D1: Yeah. I don't -- I don't mean -- It was just the reverse that I was...

NHJr: Yeah, but, you see, President Truman told me that he was going to appoint somebody to come to my meeting at 10:15 Tuesday morning. Hello?

D1: Yeah.

NHJr: So we'll find out fast enough.

D1: Well, I'm to meet with Pauly and the rest of the group at 10:15.

NHJr: When?

D1: Today.

NHJr: Good.

D1: See. Now there may be some sort of general remarks about wanting everybody to stick on the job. I'm sure there will be, but we...

NHJr: Well, just remember this you can send the remarks down to me, but remember it's the Army Signal Corp that's handling this stuff.

D1: Yeah.

NHJr: See?

D1: Yeah. The letter that Truman sent to him was an excellent letter.

NHJr: Was it?

D1: He made it clear about four times that he was to report directly to the President and not through the State Department.

NHJr: Good. Well, now, if you send me anything air-mail, special delivery today, I'd get it tomorrow morning.

D1: O. K.

NHJr: Do that.

D1: Good.

NHJr: All right, bye.

My dear Mr. Bowles:

As the Office of Surplus Property moves from the Treasury to the Commerce Department, I want to express my appreciation and that of my staff for the outstanding cooperation we have received from the Office of Price Administration, both in Washington and in the field, in the establishment and maintenance of our surplus disposal program.

Sincerely yours,

(Signed) H. Morgenthau, Jr.

My dear Mr. Secretary:

As the Office of Surplus Property moves from the Treasury to the Commerce Department, I want to express my appreciation and that of my staff for the outstanding cooperation we have received from the War Department in the establishment and maintenance of our surplus disposal program.

I feel that thanks are particularly due to the Redirection and the Storage Divisions of the Army Service Forces and to the representatives of the Technical Services. Their assistance added much toward the success of our operations.

Sincerely yours,

(Signed) H. Morgenthau, Jr.

The Honorable
The Secretary of War

My dear Mr. Chairman:

As you know, arrangements were recently made for the Office of Surplus Property of the Treasury Department, and its functions of disposing of surplus consumer goods, to be transferred to the Department of Commerce.

As the Office of Surplus Property moves from the Treasury I want to express my appreciation and that of my staff for the cooperation and consideration we have received from your Committee and particularly from its Subcommittee on surplus property. We found the Subcommittee's constructive criticisms and suggestions very helpful to us in laying the foundation for disposal programs.

Sincerely yours,

(Signed) H. Morgenthau, Jr.

Dear Bob:

As I told you on the telephone, we need a Regional Director for the Procurement Division in Kansas City, and the Secretary was hopeful that you could suggest someone capable of filling the job to our satisfaction.

The base pay for the job is $5000 a year, and the government overtime would bring the total compensation to just about $6200. The job calls for a business executive with administrative ability and a knowledge of merchandising from the purchasing point of view (disposition of surplus property is not involved, since, as you know, that part of the function of the Procurement Division has been turned over to the Department of Commerce). I am attaching a somewhat more detailed description of the type of work and of the sort of man we need.

We would appreciate any suggestion you may care to make and would, of course, give it the most careful and sympathetic consideration.

Sincerely yours,

(Signed) James A. V. Cannon, Jr.

The Regional Director of Procurement must have executive ability, be a good administrative man, have a knowledge of purchasing from a high level, understand distribution of merchandise and warehousing generally, whose integrity must be beyond reproach, who will be charged with responsibility for supervising the inspection of a wide range of merchandise moving under Land-Lease, UNRRA and special procurement programs, such as stockpiling and government purchases. Lastly, respecting education, if the candidate could show sufficient experience in the above field, the academic requirements would be less. However, an engineering degree or business administration degree, specializing in accounting, would be acceptable.

The fact that the Civil Service Commission have no register of eligibles for this particular type, it would be possible to make a selection from outside Civil Service, provided the applicant had the above qualifications.
TREASURY DEPARTMENT
INTER OFFICE COMMUNICATION

TO: Secretary Morgenthau
FROM: Mr. DaSilva

DATE: April 28, 1945

There was a meeting today with Paulley, Lubin and Lubin's staff.

My initial impression of Paulley was good. He talks and acts tough and misses no words. Among the things which he said were:

(1) His appointment was no reflection on Lubin, for whom he had the highest respect, nor on Lubin's staff, the members of which would continue to serve so long as they did their job.

(2) He had been appointed by the President because the President regarded this mission as one of the most important of all tasks which faced him. The President felt that the work of the Commission would have a great influence on the fate of humanity.

(3) The reason he had been selected was that he was a close personal friend of the President, in whom the President had the utmost confidence; that the President wanted to handle this matter himself and that Paulley was to report directly and personally to the President.

(4) The whole level of the mission has now been raised. It is no longer a State Department mission but it is a Presidential mission.

(5) To a question by one of the State Department administrative men present (Barney) as to what was expected of the State Department in light of this appointment and what the relationship between the mission and the State Department was, Paulley replied:

(a) He expected that State Department would proceed promptly to make all necessary administrative arrangements to facilitate the trip, just as they would if, for example, the Secretary of the Interior was going abroad on a mission.

(b) So far as the relationship between the mission and the State Department was concerned, he of course wanted the advice and cooperation of the State Department. The mission would need the State Department and the State Department would need the mission.

(6) When Lubin pointed out to him, during a discussion of the allocation of reparations, that the War Department desired that definite formulas of allocation be arrived at now, Paulley said that this mission and not the War Department would make decisions on these questions. He added that if the War Department wanted a hearing they could, of course, have one.

(7) He stressed the fact that the mission should work together as a team and that he wanted to make it clear that he would see to it that no member of the mission would in any way do anything to undermine the purpose of the mission.

(8) At one point during the discussion of countries to be included, he said that irrespective of what countries were included initially or included later he wanted to get everything out of Germany that he possibly could.

Attached is the press release issued on Paulley's appointment together with a statement by Paulley and a summary of his background.

P.S. I just received word that Kilgore's visit with the President was most successful. I expect a full report late this afternoon.
The following statement was issued by Edwin H. Pauley today on being notified of his appointment as ambassador and personal representative of the President in matters related to reparations following World War II.

"Full and equitable settlement of the obligations incurred by enemy peoples, and full and harmonious agreement of governments of the United Nations on this point, will certainly be a vital prerequisite to any permanent relationship of peace among all nations of the world."

"The terms on which reparations must be made by the nations whose acts of aggression were a cause of this war cannot be formally set forth to the peoples of these nations until victory — unconditional victory — is achieved by the United Nations and governments acceptable to the victors are set up.

"But discussion and agreement among the United Nations on these terms may well be undertaken as early as possible. Provision was made in the Yalta Conference for these discussions and was announced as follows:

"We (the late President Roosevelt, Prime Minister Churchill and Marshal Stalin) have considered the question of the damage caused by Germany to the Allied Nations in this war and recognized it as just that Germany be obliged to make compensation for this damage in kind to the greatest extent possible. A commission for the compensation of damage will be established. The commission will be instructed to consider the question of the extent and methods for compensating damage caused by Germany to the Allied countries. The commission will work in Moscow.

"In my capacity as President Truman's ambassador, it will be my task to head the American representation on this commission, which will deal with German reparations, and in this or any subsequently organized commission to deal with the same problem as it relates to Japan.

"I regard my assignment as one involving a tremendous responsibility. While the just and forthright solution of problems left to us by World War II will be one phase of the great crisis that has involved all nations, and the formation of an international organization to prevent World War III is another and perhaps distinct phase, certainly the two are not unrelated.

"Peace cannot endure unless it is a just peace. And among the factors that will determine this quality of justice, reparations — the underlying philosophy and the practical application, in form, in terms, in methods — are certain to weigh heavily.

"I am not a 'soft peace' man. I have no reluctance in making that fact known. But whether we have a 'hard peace' or a 'soft peace' is a question for all the United Nations and their governments to decide. What I can promise in my new position is that once the peace is made, I shall do everything in my power to prevent it from being a 'brittle' peace — that is, one that may be hard in the making but will not hold together under the strain of post-war economics.

"That is the mistake that was made at the end of World War I. Subsequently, and partly because of that brittle quality of the peace, Germany was able to roar.

"I make my pledge that it will not happen again."

Regraded Unclassified
(a) Includes payments for account of British Ministry of Supply Mission, British Supply Board, Ministry of Supply Timber Control, and Ministry of Shipping.

(b) Estimated figures based on transfers from the New York Agency of the Bank of Montreal, which apparently represent the proceeds of official British sales of American securities, including those affected through direct negotiation. In addition to the official selling, substantial liquidation of securities for private British account occurred, particularly during the early months of the war, although the receipt of the proceeds at this Bank cannot be identified with any accuracy. According to data supplied by the British Treasury and released by Secretary Morgenthau, total official and private British liquidation of our securities through December, 1940 amounted to $334 million.

(c) Includes about $85 million received during October, 1939 from the accounts of British authorized banks with New York banks, presumably reflecting the requisitioning of private dollar balances. Other large transfers from such accounts since October, 1939 apparently represent current acquisitions of proceeds of exports from the sterling area and other accruing dollar receipts. See (k) below.

(d) Reflects net change in all dollar holdings payable on demand or maturing in one year.

(e) For breakdown by types of debits and credits see tabulations prior to March 10, 1943.

(f) Adjusted to eliminate the effect of $20 million paid out on June 26, 1940 and returned the following day.

(g) For monthly breakdown see tabulations prior to April 23, 1943; October 8, 1943; October 14, 1945; September 29, 1945; September 6, 1946.

(h) Transactions for account of Caisse Central de La France D'Outre-Mer included for first time in week ended December 6, 1944.

(i) Includes $36.5 million apparently representing current and accumulated dollar proceeds of sterling area services and merchandise exports, and $6.5 in connection with the expenses of our armed forces abroad.

PARAPHRASE OF TELEGRAM RECEIVED

FROM: American Embassy, Lisbon
TO: Secretary of State, Washington

SECRET

Following message is WRI 393 Unitarian 45 from Martha Sharp for Charles Jey.

To our No. 433 year No. 266 refers. Venezuelan Minister here sent telegram on April 17 to Venezuela requesting collective passport visas for fifty endangered Spaniards selected here by Unitarian who are laborers and artisans. Maintenance for fifteen days after arrival and jobs for emigrants offered by the Government of Venezuela, Venezuelan Government requested Kuwait Unitarian to press the Venezuelan Legation, Washington, and Foreign Affairs Venezuela to grant visas as soon as possible so that INGO fund can be used. By requesting that American transit visas be granted by the State Department at the same time, the Embassy here is cooperating. Desire to save travel funds for these people. British Embassy is facilitating exit permits. Please do all possible to hold money and get visas.

BUSINESS: Linotype machine beating away slightly off mike.

FRED: (off) Hey, Wilbur.

WILBUR: Yeah?

FRED: There's that editorial?

WILBUR: I guess George is still writing it.

FRED: It's six o'clock.

WILBUR: I know.

FRED: This may not be the New York Times, but even the editor of the Hesperus Register ought to meet his own deadline.

WILBUR: George doesn't like to be bothered when he's writing those four dollar words.

FRED: Tell him to put it in nickels and quarters. We have to meet a deadline.

WILBUR: Okay. I'll ask him again.

WILBUR: (softly) Mr. Gamble.

GAMBLE: What's that? What's that?

WILBUR: It's six o'clock. We need the editorial.

GAMBLE: So do I. It's not going so good, Wilbur. A lot of words, but no facts.

WILBUR: Typewriter pecks away.

GAMBLE: (hearing) It's six o'clock, Wilbur.

WILBUR: How does this sound to you?

BUSINESS: Pulling paper out of typewriter.

GAMBLE: (reading aloud) "The representatives of 16 nations are meeting in San Francisco to chart the future world organization for all of us. Because of this very fact - because this is the news of the world this week and next week and the week after that -" every petty difference between delegates, every small issue — is blown into a headline, a quarrel and a major conflict. This is news and we print it — but it is not the real news — and let's not forget it. There have been many conferences before, perhaps not on so large a scale.

GILBS: That's a fact, Mr. George.

BUSINESS: Linotype machine off. Stops.

GILBS: (Continuing) "But in one major respect this conference is different. This meeting on world peace is being held during the war... during a world war. For the first time, men have realized that war and peace are indivisible, that the peace must flow from......"

BUSINESS: Door opening and closing off.

GES: (Off) George...

GES: I'm writing it.

GES: George, look at this.

GES: Get out.

GES: (Fading in) This is hot. Look George... just come off the wire. Order story on the battle of Germany. Look. Johnny Lee.

GES: Lee?

GES: Yeah — Johnny Lee — You know Johnny Lee.

GILBS: San Lee's kid?

GES: Uh-huh...went the machine shop on Tower lead....

GES: Gnome. (beat, then reads)

"Typical of the action on this fluid front is the adventure of a Sherman tank lovingly christened the "Midas."

Far out ahead of the others on the road to Berchtesgaden it ran out of gas in the center of a small, but important communications town.

GES: (Continued) Gnome for four hours the "Midas." remained alone and unassisted — holding up the enemy retreat.

BUSINESS: Holy smoke.

GES: "I spoke to Sgt. Johnny Lee, the tank's driver. He wouldn't discuss the action — but sent this message home. 'Well the people in Rhinebeck, New York,' he said 'That I expect to see the Fire Department's master 3 pants wagon in good shape when I get back. So I used to be my baby.'"

GILBS: Imagine — that kid. A hero.

BUSINESS: Gilbreth, you pull that parke approval story off the front page. Hold it open. I'm going down to talk to San Lee. There's my jet?

GILBS: On your head.

GES: How about the editorial?

GES: I'm waiting on it — don't touch it.

GES: But Mr. Umbel.....

GES: Hold everything.

BUSINESS: Door opens and closes.
Sure, it's true, Sam. It's right here on the teletype — off the press wires. See his name there — Johnny Less.

Well, what do you know? Look at that — Johnny Less. Printed right out. Hey, George — that goes in a lot of papers, huh?

Coast to coast.

Coast to coast. By kid, Johnny. It'll grace your hear this.

Not a hero...

Sailing.

Have a cigar, George, help yourself.

Thanks.

Busy signal.

Busy.

Receiver down.

 spends half her life on the phone. (Dram) (With mimicry) My son a hero. I think I'm entitled to a cigar myself.

(Laughs) Thanks. Thanks. It's great. Great news.

What'll I print in the paper?

Aren't you going to print the whole story?

Sure. But I mean, What do you think of it?

Great. Great news. You know Johnny, a nice ordinary boy — not too ordinary....

What else?

Well, I'm proud to be his father. (Hesitates) Maybe you'd better not print that.

What shall I print?

There's nothing special. I guess it's like all the other fathers. Proud of him and worrying about him. For the last year and a half I've tried to figure out where his outfit was and waited for news in his letters. He used to let each other know.

Such other? What do you mean?

The families of the boys in that outfit. 'The Next H.' Men from four different states, you know. And as families, we kind of write to each other. Sort of lonely hearts club of interested parties....

Of drawer being opened, etc.

You know the kind of things — "I heard from my son today. He says so and so ..." Or "My brother wrote ... he's been..." That way we all know what's going on.

May I see the list?

Of drawer being opened, paper rattling.

This is it. You see Loser, Andrews, all of them.

(Reading) Wisconsin, Kansas, Connecticut, Florida — That's quite a crowd of states .... Sam — you never knew those people before —

Never had to.

Never had to? That's right. And now you're writing to each other — talking to each other — thinking together, hoping together —

Well, sure. The boys are in the same war — we're fighting the same war....

Let me ask you, Sam — when those men come back — when your Johnny comes back, what do you think he wants? What do you think he and these others feel they're fighting for? Do you ever talk about that in your letters?
WILBUR: Away? But, Mr. Sumgie, you can't....

GILMORE: (Filter) Who's running this paper? (Slight pause)

WILBUR: (Resigned) Okay.

GILMORE: (Filter) Take over, Wilbur. I'll be back in a week or so.

WILBUR: How about that editorial?

GILMORE: (Filter) Leave it in the machine. I'll finish it when I get back. I need some help in writing it. That's why I'm going away.

LODEN: For tag... into sound of tractor slightly off, but strong.

LODEN: (Over it) Wait -- I'll turn her off. No sense yelling at each other like this.

BUSINESS: Click... motor dies... another tractor heard way off (This tractor to increase and or die in volume as it passes back and forth)

LODEN: Besides, me and the machine, both could stand to rest awhile. (Listen to other tractor) That's my wife over there, working the other field. Have to push with the planting these days.

GILMORE: I'll bet you do.

LODEN: My kid brother -- right in the paper. Somehow we never thought of him as a hero....

GILMORE: How did he feel about it in the first place -- about leaving her and getting in?

LODEN: How did anyone feel?

GILMORE: It's harder, I suppose, for a farmer.

GILMORE: It's not good. You get sort of tied to the place. And it's hard to go off when things are growing. The kids get a good farmer -- none better. (Pause) You know -- what you asked me -- about this international business -- this....
(Prompting him) World security?

Linton: That's right — don't you think maybe you picked the wrong man to talk to?

Gershon: How so?

Linton: Well, as farmers — you know, we're supposed to be isolationists.

Gershon: You think that still holds true?

Linton: No, I don't. Fact is — I believe we've changed. Now I have.

Gershon: You mean the world's getting smaller — getting to be what Melville used to call "one world"?

Linton: Hey, wait a minute — I'm no political expert. I'm in the farming business. I want to sell my crops. Down to me, there's plenty of people in the world to feed. And plenty that need clothes and tools and such. Don't see why it can't be worked out together unscorched — instead of being, not on each other's throats like a couple of strange beasts. (laughs) But that's no talking — and I take it you're more interested in what my kid brother has to say —

Gershon: Chances are you too aren't very far apart.

Linton: We're not, for a fact. Though Paul's views are a bit sharper — so to speak.....

Gershon: That's natural, after what he's gone through.

Linton: Let me tell you, Mr. Gershon, it makes you doubt we're living in civilized times — to think over some of the things Paul's told me. About the places he's seen — in Italy and France.

Gershon: The farms, the soil, just lying there dead — sterile. Imagine something he wrote from Italy, I guess it was.

Linton: He said after you've seen what hunger really is — you begin to understand what kind of a world it is you're fighting for.

Linton: Paul's coming back, please the Lord, when he's finished his job over there. And he's going to be thinking of the others who finished — and don't come back. How, supposing he stands here — and sees that field of the run across the road there. He sees it being unscorched, or he sees his Jim Hurleigh's corn, rotting on the stalks, or he sees his Jim Hurleigh's corn, rotting on the stalks, or as he comes back, he'll see the way it was ten years ago. And then he remembers the hunger he's seen in Sweden. What was their sacrifice for, how? To save — before unscorched he gets back — before unscorched he has a chance to ask that question — and preventing that stuff from happening again. (laughs)

Gershon: It's something to get wound up about.

Linton: Well, it's better get back to farming. I know something unscorched about that....

Linton: Tractor on .... Into

GEORGE: Gamble. George Gamble.

SHELL: Of course, Mr. Gamble, it's been exciting having a husband who's in the news, but ----

GEORGE: I've come a long way to see you, Mrs. Andrews.

SHELL: What paper did you say?

GEORGE: The Elmwood Register. Elmwood, New York ... Don't suppose you've ever heard of it.

SHELL: I don't think I have ----

GEORGE: I'm from Johnny hose' town.

SHELL: Oh, the Loom. Oh yes, Elmwood. Understood. I remember now. I've written to Mrs. Loom. Johnny and Dan are in the same tank, you know.

GEORGE: That's right. And that's why I'm here. Sorry to disturb you this way, but ----

SHELL: (Over him) I'm afraid my son's doing the disturbing.

GEORGE: Steps off ... closing of door ... piano say down.

SHELL: That's better. You were saying ----

GEORGE: Why I came here -- what I hoped to find out about those men in the "Male 2" -- about your husband ----

SHELL: Well -- it's hardly very -- or -- colorful. Dan was born here in Elmwood. Went to college -- then business. He's done well, I suppose ... sort of personnel manager, he's called.

GEORGE: And when he comes back what'll he do?

SHELL: What will any of them do? Go on from there.

GEORGE: Just the way it was.

SHELL: Hardly.

MRS.: That makes you say that? (Pause) I'm not praying, Mrs. Andrews. I think it's important to know. My doing think it won't be the way it was in the past?

MRS.: Well, a letter is kind of personal.

SHELL: Some part of this letter you could sort from a roof-top. He wrote it a few months ago -- just before he moved up for this big post. I've kept it ... well ... close to me. Would you ----

MRS.: If I say ----

MRS.: Letters do more work than they used to.

GEORGE: . . .letter out of envelope.

Yes, this is the one ... let's see ... (reading to herself) ...(and you can tell that it's Eddie's wife for me ... aloud)...

Now, here, it begins here. (reading) "In a week of this company since we broke through so long ago at La Palais. I can't describe it, shell -- but I can say thank God we've never seen our town and cities this way, reduced to meanlessheaves of gray rubble."

"We've been lucky. If it happens again, we won't be so lucky. We'll see it happen to us, too. (pause) I often think of that first trip we took, through France on our honeymoon. I wish we had known then what we've learned now. Americans can't be tourists any more -- sight-seers, standing apart. That happens anywhere today happens to us, and to our children."

Regraded Unclassified
When I think of old boys, I know it has to be different this time. We can’t hide our children in a desert some place. They have to live in this world.

and it can’t be just any kind of a world. It has to be one in which they can grow and develop and live together with the other children of the world—but in spite of them—or at their expense. Darling, if ever we—(she stops reading) (to George) well, Mr. Dabney—that’s the part I meant. Where we go from...don’t you think so?

I know so.

Of course that’s only his opinion and mine...

Thanks, Mr. Andrews—thanks a lot.

For bridge...onto steps on wooden porch...doorbell ringing.

(to himself)...Still, it was 6322 Highland Ave—

Door opening.

Excuse me—I’m looking for people by the name of Ballard.

No one here by that name.

Then, no folks of a fellow named Harvey Ballard—a soldier? This is 6322 Highland—no, this is 6320 Highland— isn’t it?

That’s right—but it’s the only one here. Powell’s my name.

Made a mistake, I guess.

(quietly) Last seat likely—are you looking for a cheer family?

Boo-flo. (Pause) After 35 years of newspaper work, you’d think I’d be more careful about getting addresses straight.

Newspaper?

Are you receiving this ok?

Are you there?
CoB: You think your nephew understood when he went into military

POWELL: Some of my people didn't. They wouldn't see it as our war. But my nephew did. He said this was my fight. He said it, Hitler and the Japanese got away with it, we Americans couldn't have anything - not even problems.

CoB: A case of first things first, eh?

POWELL: Yes - and I believe it enough to die for it. I was close to the boy now I guess for him. He's death don't hurt me as much as long as I know that what be don't for all can be done. (Points) I bury that two years ago - when things looked bad. Things look better now. It looks like we're going to have a world that's big enough and free enough for everyone to work and live in. It has to be that way. Cause if there isn't freedom everywhere, there's none here. A man's right to work has got to be as natural as his right to breathe - and that can only be when we have peace everywhere - all over the world - of course, that's why our opinion - my nephew's not mine.

CoB: Mr. Powell - I thought I'd made a mistake, coming to this interview. I thought, it would have been a mistake got to have stopped here. (crass) Thanks for the coffee. It hit the spot.

WILLIAMS: For bridge and out into

FOSTER: High-staging values of woodworking machinery, power saw, planer... hold goal level.

POWELL: (talking) Quite a setup they got here, Mr. CoB: I -

COB: Yeah - would've gone to war, they tell me. But he, the body. They said you wanted to see me about Joe Slivers. Here, let's go out that door.

FOSTER: Opening and closing of door... sound say down.
Loose ends, you know. What would a boy in England say on a job in Chinatown? The same thing, it means a job—this job—yes, job. And it means both ways.

What means both ways?

You can't be jobs for everyone, if you don't have power everywhere—right?

Right.

(Over head) Hey—hey, suggesting we've got unemployment because everywhere. First thing you know, they're going somewhere, and the standard of living with it. Development, and hunger. It's like a disease, a disease, it spreads. Then we begin to say, "Half, let's take care of our own, and if that hurts the other guy—well, that's too bad." And there goes your world peace.

And you think that can be prevented this sort.

Look, this—this is the people aren't taking my life in any battle, but the kind of horse trading that worked the masses last time. Everybody flocks agreed about everything. We know that. Let's forget this hundred per cent perfect stuff. Nothing's ever perfect. A lot of people in this country didn't know the constitution was perfect—yet they signed it, didn't they? You get to begin somewhere, and when they had to make changes, they made 'em. Didn't we, didn't we? We had to make them right. And in this machine the main thing is to make 'em that's no mistake, and if there's this make—em in fact—and make 'em work, and if there's this... You're not within all that down.

Hey, Sam—just a few notes, as I'll remember.

Dear Mr. Smith—send up list.

Mr. Smith—send up list.

Fred said to remind you—it's after four.

It's working, Mr. Smith. I've got it. The editorial makes sense but it needs one thing more. I know the kind of work people want. And I have the government wanting to arrange the organization. But where's the game?

The game. It's like an airplane. We've got the machine but we've got the fuel. Now we want it to fly. And what we need is some kind of 100 per cent high explosive gas to make it take off.

Don't you feel well, Mr. Smith? Has the trip been too much for you?

The game. The fuel. The driving power. (Suddenly) Wait a minute. I've got an idea. If it can't tell us a Telephone off hook...ah!

Operator.

Operator.

Could I take the editorial, Mr. Smith?

Just a minute—It's not through yet. Operator, I want long distance.
MRS. : 1. Long Distance.

MRS. : Well, I want to talk to the Treasury Department.

MRS. : Yes - Yes - the United States Treasury Department.

MRS. : I want to talk to the Secretary of the Treasury.

MRS. : I want to talk to Secretary Morgenthaler.

MRS. : Mr. Gamble.

OPERATOR: Mr. Gamble.

[MRS. : (To himself) This is Secretary of the Treasury - Henry Morgenthaler.]

[In the background, the voice of Secretary Morgenthaler]

MRS. : Just a minute, sir, here is Secretary of the Treasury - Henry Morgenthaler.

MRS. : I wouldn't do that, Fred...

FRED: I can talk underscored to him, can't I? I guess he's only the editor. I'm a linotype. Words are just words to me, one after the other. So many to a slug and so many to a column...

FRED: Door opens. Typewriter... Flicking away.

GEORGE: George.

FRED: (Shut up.)

FRED: (Leader) George.

FRED: Close the door after you.

FRED: Door closes, Typewriter continues, then comes to a moaning finish. Carriage return... Sheet out.

FRED: New then, Fred, I want you to listen. You, too, Wilbur. This isn't just an editorial...

FRED: Okay - Let's have it.
(Firmly) You're going to have it, now sit down and when I'm through - for the first time in the history of this paper - I want to know what you think. Now then -

(George begins to read - quietly at first - then with mounting excitement)

"Those conferences are it!" (pause)

"There are several thousand delegates, diplomats, statesmen and what not at the conference tables in San Francisco and there are two billion people keeping the score.

Our governments are in. We have learned this in history's bloodiest war. We cannot afford to forget in the peace to follow. It is our voice that must be heard at the conference tables. It is the voice of Sam Lees of Elwood, saying "when the peace comes, I want those machines going full blast." It is the voice of Arthur Porter, a farmer in Iowa, saying "we more small lying uncultivated, we more crops rottin' in the middle." It is the voice of Cyril Andrews, housewife in Milwaukee, saying "we can't keep our children in a desert. They have to live in this world, countin' with the other children of this world - and not at their expense." It is the voice of Jim Powell, mine foreman, of Saint Petersburg, Florida, saying "a man's right to work has got to be as natural as his right to breathe - and that can only be when we have peace everywhere - all over the world." It's the voice of the Secretary of the United States Treasury saying "peace can no longer keep us from being neighbors in the world community. Freedom from fear and want will be realized only as a solid foundation of world prosperity."

Mrs. Klotz

H.N.Jr.: I have nothing. I just thought I would come back today, just to be here. Mrs. Morgenthau has been all right the last two days. So, I came back just in case anything happened, I would be here. That's all. See, the financial center is at this desk, so I thought I had better be at the helm in case something happened.

I talked with Admiral Leary yesterday, and I just thought I better be back.

Mr. Gaston: You say Mrs. Morgenthau has been well the last two days?

H.N.Jr.: She had another little attack on the 18th, and she continuously ran a temperature up through this Friday, and she has only been normal since Saturday. So, now they say in another two and one-half or three weeks if nothing more happens, they can bring her back.

Herbert?

Mr. Gaston: You asked the Chief of the Secret Service to check with you again before taking the family children details off. Today is the last day of the month. You said they could probably relieve them today. The question is it may mean a month's difference so far as the position of rented quarters and so on are concerned. Shall we notify them today to make arrangements with the people to take them off? The Chief is ill.

H.N.Jr.: No, no, no! It doesn't bother me. That's all right. But the only thing is the man who is looking after the Boettiger child. That's the only exception.

Mr. Gaston: Oh.

H.N.Jr.: He's in the hospital.

Mr. Gaston: Here?

H.N.Jr.: Just one man.

Mr. Gaston: That will go until further notice?

H.N.Jr.: Until the child is out of the hospital.

Mr. Gaston: I haven't anything more.

H.N.Jr.: How about that thing--I want to get a report from you and Belle?

Mr. O'Connell: I hoped it would be later than today. I cleared it with the bureau people up to the Commissioner. I have to wait until he comes back.

H.N.Jr.: Have they cleared up to there?

Mr. O'Connell: We had a meeting at which it was the view of the people we talked to that we can do about what I understood you to suggest.

H.N.Jr.: You who are so strict, how do you feel?

Mr. O'Connell: I have no doubt about it at all, but the Commissioner has to make all the rulings.
H.M.Jr: How about the General Counsel?

Mr. O'Connell: The Chief Counsel is all right, although he wanted to sleep on it over the weekend. The only thing that gave him pause is that the question had never arisen before.

H.M.Jr: Suppose you and I both stay behind.

Mr. O'Connell: Yes.

I have one thing I would like to mention. We drafted in the Bureau an Executive Order authorizing the OPA through their regional offices, to have access to income tax returns. We had been discussing it with the OPA for over a year now, and there was originally some hesitation to letting them have access to the returns in that way. It's really only a slight extension of what we now do. The returns are made available to the American agency except that the request has to come from Bowles. The theory of this order is that to facilitate action, the regional offices should have access to the returns through the Collectors, the same authority the United States Attorneys have now, and the only reason I am raising it here is that Mr. Grey and Charlie Bell raised serious doubts about whether we should extend that degree of cooperation to the OPA? I have none myself, nor has any one in the Bureau.

H.M.Jr: State it again. What does OPA want?

Mr. O'Connell: An Executive Order which will authorize the Regional Accounting Directors of OPA to have access to tax returns by dealing directly with Collectors. The only difference is that now they send the Regional Director, if he wishes, sends a telegram communication in to Bowles and Bowles signs the letter which comes to Treasury, and from here goes to the Bureau.

H.M.Jr: I would like to keep it that way.

Mr. O'Connell: It has been broken down, we have, for years, permitted United States Attorneys to have access.
Mr. Gaston: Would you give the names in the cases?

H.J. Jr.: Yes.

Mr. Gaston: For releasing it for publicity, or--

H.J. Jr.: Yes, just give the case history.

Mr. O'Connell: Are these three black market cases?

H.J. Jr.: They are mentioned in Homan's report.

Mr. O'Connell: There are more than three.

H.J. Jr.: I could show you one.

Mr. O'Connell: Yes.

H.J. Jr.: Ask him how he would feel about it if he knew we would get around to it. It may be two years.

Mr. O'Connell: It wouldn't be two years, but it will be a little time because some of the cases we sent more than four or five months ago are still pending.

H.J. Jr.: I want this back, but I haven't read it all. I want to work with Preston Velano. See whether he will work with us on one thousand dollar bills.

Mr. O'Connell: Yes.

(The Secretary handed Mr. O'Connell an Executive Order on OPA)

Mr. O'Connell: The Nasser case isn't really in the Justice Department yet. It was a case we were going to handle. There are two problems, (1) what the Department of Justice here would say, and (2) what the particular United States Attorney would say, speaking of the Nasser case, and the District Attorney in Chicago is something of a prima donna and runs his own show. What his reaction would be to another disclosure of a case that may be up to him to take to the Grand Jury two or three months from now might be entirely different.

H.J. Jr.: Talk it over with Clark. After all, it's like anything else where they get this precedent and so forth, and the object is to let the public know and get the benefit, we hope, of the public being with us.

Mr. O'Connell: If it weren't a black market case I think the precedents, which were entirely sound, would be improper for disclosing.

H.J. Jr.: Improper?

Mr. O'Connell: Sure, because it seems to me it's a little like trying a case in a newspaper. If all we have got is an investigation report, it leads us to believe a man may be guilty of criminal evasion of tax laws. It's improper in advance of an indictment to try that case in the newspapers by giving that information out.

H.J. Jr.: That's the lawyer's viewpoint. But there have been some very successful District Attorneys that have done that.

Mr. O'Connell: One became the Governor of New York on a case like that, but the worst Governor of New York.

H.J. Jr.: He's the only fellow who had the guts to clean up New York City.

Mr. O'Connell: I didn't think he did.

H.J. Jr.: He cleaned up New York City.

Mr. O'Connell: But the case that gave him most of his publicity was reversed in the Court of Appeals mainly because he tried it in the newspapers.

H.J. Jr.: Nobody knows and cares. It was never brought out when he ran for President.

Mr. O'Connell: For Governor.
Mr. Gaston: You're talking about a different man, perhaps.

Mr. O'Connell: I am talking about the fellow who became Governor on the Booker case.

Mr. J.J.: I thought you meant Dewey.

Mr. O'Connell: No.

Mr. Gaston: No, Dewey didn't follow just that method.

Mr. O'Connell: No, I was thinking of an older Governor.

Mr. J.J.: Whitman was a good lawyer. He had one of the best legal firms in New York when he finished being the Governor. It never seemed to hurt him any.

Mr. O'Connell: No, unfortunately.

Mr. Gaston: There is a better way to handle these cases than giving out details before they go into the hands of the Department of Justice for prosecution. Handling the campaign in general terms is one thing and you can give out material which will result in pretty good stories without giving the names of the people, and so forth. Then a supplementary way to do is tell them about particular cases but tell them in confidence that this material is for background use when any break comes through the office of the District attorney. You can get two kinds of stories out that way without violating any results. But I agree with Joe, that unless there are some very sensational developments which come out normally anyway, that it is not a good thing to give out a case against a man before he is put to trial.

Mr. Luxford: Are these men going to be arrested?

Mr. O'Connell: No.
MR. FITZ: I don't think the two cases are exactly the same.

R.M.J.: Okay. Russell?

MR. FUSSELL: I think it would be all right if you use the name.

MR. PEILE: Are these cases of people with criminal records of any kind, Mr. Secretary?

MR. O'CONNELL: Some of them. There is a distinction. I attempted to make in the beginning. One case in Justice, for example, was a liquor company in New Jersey or Connecticut which has already been convicted on a violation of the GPA price ceilings. It made a distinction between that, because you can certainly rehash the facts to which they have pleaded guilty and say there is a tax case too. These three cases are under investigation. There is no black market indictment.

MR. PEILE: Have they been given an opportunity to explain the facts?

MR. GASTON: To an investigator only.

MR. PEILE: Yes, but--

MR. O'CONNELL: If you have a case of an indictment and conviction on the same set of facts substantially, it seems to me you have very good grounds to disclose the same sort of information which has not been publicized.

MR. PEILE: I was trying to distinguish between people who had had up to now generally good reputations. I think the Government is taking a lot on itself prior to indictment to come out and say, "We have got this kind of case," unless we are awfully sure of the facts, and they have been given an opportunity to explain it.

R.M.J.: What's the difference in my telling it across the desk and telling it to a columnist before anybody has seen the facts?

MR. PEILE: The rules on columnists have not been very well defined.

R.M.J.: I won't tell it to a columnist if you are so worried. You never were so worried about that before.

MR. PEILE: Making people through columnists? Yes, I think you have a moral responsibility unless you are sure.

R.M.J.: Supposing you're sure?

MR. PEILE: That's different.

MR. LEFKOWITZ: The Bureau has a ninety-nine cent record.

R.M.J.: Supposing you're sure of the facts. Is it all right for me to tell it to a columnist?

MR. PEILE: And if you are sure they have been given an opportunity to explain themselves. They can't explain it.

R.M.J.: Well, they have been interrogated. They can't explain it.

MR. PEILE: The fact that they have been interrogated by a Revenue Agent isn't in my opinion enough, but if you are reasonably sure in your own mind that you are not hurting the reputation of an innocent person, I would say a columnist is all right.

R.M.J.: If ninety-nine and nine-tenths percent of the public benefit by it by exposing these kinds of people to these facts, supposing the one-tenth of one percent to these facts, supposeing these facts, supposeing these facts, supposeing this terrible thing going on in America. These fellows are blood millionaires and their incomes run into hundreds of thousands of dollars, and nobody gets excited about it except me. Now, I am going to get excited about it one way or another, and if somebody doesn't like it, it's too bad.
MR. GASTON: You're wrong in saying that nobody gets excited but you. We are trying to give you advice on how to handle the thing without injustice. I suggested a way to handle it without much attention. I think I know how to handle it.

H.M. Jr.: How?

MR. GASTON: I told you that a couple of weeks ago. I would get some men and tell them the whole background of what we are doing here. I told you a few minutes ago the same thing. You could have some general stories telling what we are doing and the general nature of the offenses we are looking into. You can make not one story but a series without giving names. You can post newspaper men in the regions where the stories are going to come out, tell them about what is going to come out so they can cover it when it does.

H.M. Jr.: Well, now, Herbert--

MR. GASTON: That's the clean, just way to handle these things, not to break a story and give the details of a story when it hasn't been presented to a Grand Jury and you have no proof.

H.M. Jr.: It's two months now that I have been chaffing under these--

MR. GASTON: I have been chaffing longer than that, and we have had stories out to which you objected to. You wondered where all this newspaper publicity was coming from, and I think that newspaper publicity was the very best thing possible for this campaign.

H.M. Jr.: I question that. You and I haven't seen eye to eye on this thing.

MR. GASTON: I think it's natural we shouldn't. I look at it from a little different standpoint.

H.M. Jr.: Where do we differ?

MR. GASTON: Well, if you don't mind my saying so, I think I have had a little more experience in handling newspaper stories.
MR. GASTON: I am for dramatizing and getting more stories in the paper. I think the stories printed were good, and I think we ought to get some more, but I am not for giving out a detailed story naming a man before the case has been tried.

MR. PREBLE: Wouldn't it work to get somebody like Tom Stokes of that type and give him enough of the facts to let him know these stories so he can check them himself, and publish these on his own? If you get a couple good crusading reporters who will go out and develop some of these things, you are going to get the kind of publicity you want.

MR. GASTON: I think that Mr. Fussell and Mr. Sheefer can develop a plan to get some publicity on this thing.

MR. O'CONNELL: The only difference would be one of timing of the publicity. I have no quarrel about the desire of having such publicity and getting as much public consciousness of the problem as is humanly possible to get. The difference is at what point do you want to give out the facts of a particular case and make capital of them, and Herbert's point, and mine, is that that should not be done.

H.M.JR: We are wasting an awful lot of time. If Gaston is as excited about it as I am, fine, or if anybody else is excited about it—I want to find a way to break this thing.

Now Fussell, you are here; Gaston brought you in here. You see if you can find some way to do it, will you?

MR. GASTON: Yes, sir.

MR. FUSSELL: There are two possible ways, one is a way Mr. Gaston suggested, and one Mr. Preble just suggested, through spot stories by people who are willing to follow up on the thing. The other way is the way we suggested last week, Mr. Secretary, of giving out the cases to them.

H.M.JR: Is it your assignment; get the stories out, will you?
that this fellow made of the amount of business that we are handling and the number of cases that are coming in—the thing I object to is that Elmer Irey didn't deserve those stories.

MR. GASTON: Which is that?

H.W.JR: The stories that came out of Miami about Elmer Irey the great gang-buster. I am not interested in any one person; I am interested in stopping this thing before I have investigated it. And if anybody hasn't read Charlie Bell's report, I will tell them to read it. It is a terrible indictment on the Bureau.

(Mr. D. W. Bell leaves the conference temporarily.)

H.W.JR: Well, you have got four times as much revenue, and practically the same number of indictments.

MR. O'CONNELL: And practically the same number of people. There is an explanation.

H.W.JR: Before we started this war you had no guns or labor, you had no this or that. The War Department has made a war. They find ways to do it. We have got a war against a new kind of immoral society, and I don't want to wait.

MR. O'CONNELL: I want to point out that the explanation, whether it is a complete defense or not of the fact that the number of cases and that sort of thing has not kept pace with the increase in revenue is that the Bureau has not been able to get competent personnel or money to pay them.

H.W.JR: You have never come on the hill and said, "Look, here is what is happening. This is what society is doing today." I came into this job on the tail end of the worst bootlegging—the worst immoral era almost that this country has ever gone through. I was stupid. I sat here and said I would either lick it or resign, and we went out and changed the whole thing, and we licked it.

Now, we didn't say that you can't go out on a three mile zone and have a lot of lawyers stop us there. President Roosevelt said, "A bootlegger is where you find him, irrespective of the zone," and we went out one hundred miles, and we found them. Fellows used to hover out three miles or twelve miles. All kinds of barriers were put up against us. First it was three, and then twelve. President Roosevelt said, "So and find them. We kept the fellows out so long they couldn't stand it and gave up business. They told me I couldn't go after the ex-Prime Minister of Belgium in the bootleg business, but I did it. We found ways to do the thing, and I am saying there are ways to get this new kind of immoral society which exists. You have got to fight fire with fire. It is like this picture of Colonial Rimpy the other night. You are not to use heathen methods, but be good sports and not fight on Sunday and not bomb cities, and all the rest of that stuff, and that was the way to fight the Germans.

Well, you have got to fight these people with different methods, and that is what I am talking about and what I am going to insist upon.

MR. O'CONNELL: I have no quarrel with that.

H.W.JR: Charles Bell did a swell job and had courage enough to put it in writing. It is a terrible condemnation of the Bureau, like you can't go outside the twelve mile limit. You people haven't gone up on the hill and gotten the way I have, and said, "We have got to have more men. We have got to have more money."

MR. O'CONNELL: I know that the last time the Bureau went up on the hill they had their appropriation cut several million dollars.

H.W.JR: All I need is a little more information and I can get ten million dollars. I can get any sum I want if I tell this story.

MR. LUPFORD: That is, if you get a spread in the papers.
MR. O’CONNELL: I have no question about that at all, and I have been talking to the people in the Bureau with that in mind, but from 1940 to 1945 we have not had any appropriation to make it possible for us to step up either our personnel or handling of cases to the extent desirable.

H.M.JR: Now look, Fitzgerald, the State Chairman of the Democratic Party in New York recommended to President Roosevelt the District Attorney who has got the largest Holstein herd in the Catskills in New York. He has made a lot of very good cases in New York State, and they wanted to give him some important job, see? I can’t remember his name, but maybe it is in my correspondence. You ask Fitzgerald who he meant that had this big Holstein herd. He has a wonderful record as a prosecuting attorney in the State of New York, see. He has made some very difficult cases in Albany. Let’s get some—look him up and let’s get some fellow down here. I need some new blood down here in the Bureau, and the prosecuting attorney’s record reads wonderfully. Look this fellow up. I want somebody down here like that to assist you, some young vigorous fellow, a good Holstein man. (Laughter) Look this fellow up. We need somebody around. I want somebody to carry the torch on this thing who can do this and nothing else.

Incidentally, the attorney out there that got Pendergast—what’s his name?

MR. LINDSAY: Milligan.

H.M.JR: And fellows like Judie Campbell who have made their reputation, Thomas E. Dewey, for instance.

MR. O’CONNELL: They are prosecutors.

H.M.JR: That is what I want in the Treasury working under you. You look up this fellow.

MR. O’CONNELL: We don’t prosecute cases.

H.M.JR: All right, but we will force them. Get some fellow that will make a case so we can put some pepper on it. Clark is entirely too placid. Look this fellow up.

We need a young fellow that will burn on this thing. Don’t worry too much about whether a man is guilty or not. You get the Civil Liberties after me. All right?

MR. GASTON: Yes, I want you to know I approve of your giving the people the hot foot.

H.M.JR: I know you do. I haven’t known you for fourteen years for nothing, but we all get hide-bound, and they all think I am wearing a boiled shirt and a three-inch high collar, and so forth, and so on. Let’s get busy on this thing. You can read across every paper about OPA and the meat market. The trouble with OPA is they have got no enforcement.

MR. GASTON: And we tried our damndest to help them and couldn’t put it over.

H.M.JR: I am not going to wait now until somebody tells me, “Morgenstern is falling down on the job.” And when I read that report I was ashamed of the Treasury. Have you read it?

MR. O’CONNELL: Yes.

H.M.JR: O.K. I am sorry I didn’t come back for this.

MR. BLOUGH: I would like to read that report if I may.

H.M.JR: If anybody wants to see the thing, he can read it. I don’t want the columnists to see that report.

MR. BLOUGH: I have no contacts with the columnists.

H.M.JR: I am not referring to you. You should have known that. (Laughter)

MR. BLOUGH: I can develop them very quickly.

H.M.JR: Well, when is this report coming out?

MR. BLOUGH: After Senator George gets back, and I don’t know yet just when that will be, possibly tomorrow.
H.M.JR: Is my statement prepared?

MR. BLOOM: We have not finished it because we haven't seen what they have finished for up there, but we are very actively working on it, and I am going to say by the middle of the week we ought to have a conference with you on the subject.

H.M.JR: I like to get Herbert Gaston excited. When I do he always goes to town, so I expect good things this week.

Fussell?

MR. FUSSELL: Is that program going through for tonight, Mr. Secretary?

H.M.JR: Yes. Don't listen! I am exhausted. The thing is terrible. I have given it to Henry Murphy, who seems to know nothing about Bretton Woods, and, therefore, he will be good on it. He is coming back at three o'clock. If you want to be here, O.K. I haven't used him in ten years, so he is fresh.

MR. FUSSELL: That is all I have, Mr. Secretary.

H.M.JR: Mr. Luxford, my liaison man up at Bretton Woods knew nothing about it, so I gave him hell this morning.

MR. LUXFORD: I had no responsibility for it, Mr. Secretary.

H.M.JR: At any rate, they are coming back about three with something that is sizzling. Bernstain looked at it and said, "By God, I threw that out three times and they have referred it to the Secretary." This is E. M. Bernstain. Anyway, they are coming back. I have given it to Henry Murphy and E. M. Bernstain. It is terrible, dish water.

MR. GASTON: What is that?

H.M.JR: A seven-minute talk for me at nine o'clock tonight.

MR. GASTON: On Bretton Woods?

H.M.JR: Yes.

Luxford's excuse was nobody told him anything about it.

MR. LUXFORD: I knew about it, Mr. Secretary, but I had no responsibility for it.

H.M.JR: All right, but when I talk about Bretton Woods, it stems from you down.

MR. LUXFORD: All right, sir.

H.M.JR: Coe?

MR. COE: I don't think I have told you, but last week and the week before we had the French in following up your instructions about laying out the financial accounts here. These were some subordinates of Pleven's. They gave us all the dope. It is quite satisfactory; all their money is accounted for. The Germans seem to have gotten none of it except the Belgian and the Polish stuff, and they went over a series of issues which they think Pleven is going to take up with you.

Incidentally, they told us their ideas on reparations, and they coincide almost exactly with the Treasury's.

H.M.JR: If you want to be excused, go ahead.

MR. LUXFORD: I have got another five minutes.

H.M.JR: Well, that is good. Now, I want to move on the Chinese thing.

MR. COE: Did you get our memo that I sent?

H.M.JR: Yes. Do you think I ought to call up Mr. Patterson and ask him when he can do it?

MR. COE: Yes, I think he is waiting for a call.
H.W. JR: I want somebody from the State Department.

MR. COE: It would be Clayton.

H.W. JR: Suppose I work on it. I will do it tomorrow afternoon. We have reparations in the morning. I want to move.

MR. COE: We had a session with Clayton— with State on the Chinese thing, and we talked over the matters which I put down in that memo, general recommendations. The State Department people, including most of their Chinese people, are out in San Francisco. They had one man over here. They were inclined much more, I think, to give them the fifty million dollar aces on the gold, but they were not very strong about that.

H.W. JR: This General Omlsted seems to want to pay them quickly.

MR. COE: Omlsted?

H.W. JR: Yes.

MR. COE: He came back for NPR. They have this three point program on trucks, textiles, and coal.

H.W. JR: Trucks, textiles—

MR. COE: ...and coal.

MR. O'CONNELL: Trucks, textiles, and Treasury.

H.W. JR: The three T's.

MR. COE: Leon Henderson has gotten around town on it, but I don't think he has aroused much sympathy.

H.W. JR: Oh, I will fix up a meeting for tomorrow afternoon.

Are you on this reparations thing?
H.W.JR: I am not using him in editing. I want him to get me some stuff.

MR. COE: He will be glad to.

I think you ought to talk to Clayton to see whether he has talked to Pauley.

H.W.JR: Pauley is coming here for lunch at one o'clock.

MR. COE: Oh.

H.W.JR: And DaNois is coming in at a quarter to one to tell me what happened this morning, if anybody wants to listen. I didn't want DaNois to come in and tell me he didn't want us telling him what to do. Like my daughter Joan said to me yesterday, "Daddy, you're good." He is having lunch with me at one o'clock today, and I want to find out whether he does or doesn't want any help before tomorrow. I gather he doesn't want any help from War or State. I don't know how he feels about Treasury.

MR. B. W. BELL: Will he be at tomorrow's meeting?

H.W. JR: I don't know. I thought I'd ask him at lunch today. He may tell us to go jump in the Potomac. I wanted to do it privately.

MR. COE: Yes, because at this meeting we will presumably be drafting his instructions.

H.W. JR: That is right.

MR. B. W. BELL: He might be interested.

H.W. JR: See that I get by a quarter to one, will you, so I can show Pauley the letter we showed to the President, the transmittal letter in which we said we'd go ahead with the reparations, and the President said, "Yes." See if I can get that by a quarter to one. Did you stay home Saturday?
H.W.JR: I'd like you here at four o'clock anyway.

MR. GAMBLE: All right, sir. You will be interested to know that Douglas accepted that speaking engagement Truman was going to--Justice Douglas.

H.W.JR: At Indianapolis?

MR. GAMBLE: Yes.

H.W.JR: Have you heard anything from the White House?

MR. GAMBLE: Not yet. I am calling them this morning.

H.W.JR: I am asking to see him Tuesday or Wednesday, if you want me to do anything. If so, get it to Mrs. Elots.

MR. GAMBLE: All right, sir. That's all, sir.

H.W.JR: George?

MR. HAAS: You recall you wrote a letter to Harriner Eccles when the three months certificate rate got out of line and asked him to bring it back within a reasonable length of time. It has come back, but now it is going up again.

H.W.JR: Did you thank him when he brought it back?

MR. HAAS: No. It is nothing to worry about yet, but it should be stopped before it goes any further.

H.W.JR: Are you putting me on notice?

MR. HAAS: I think Dan is working on it.

H.W.JR: You are putting Dan on notice.

MR. HAAS: You asked me about a chart which showed all of the sources of funds.

H.W.JR: Yes.

MR. HAAS: (Hands secretary two charts.) I had a little one and thought it might be too small so I made another.

H.W.JR: Fine! If I don't understand it, I'll send for you, Eddie? I think I'll wish this one thousand dollar bill stuff on you.

MR. BARTELT: All right.

H.W.JR: Why these banks don't give up the information, I don't understand. They keep acting all too tender hearted. Wouldn't that be Eddie's job? We haven't given him anything to do since he's come here as Assistant Secretary.

MR. BARTELT: I have been working about six hours every night signing mail.

H.W.JR: Is that what you do? That is what they used to have all the Secretaries of the Treasury do until I came out here.

MR. PEHL: To keep them out of trouble. I have seen that system before. (Laughter)

H.W.JR: That is why I can spend forty-five minutes talking about something like black market. Congratulations, Dan. Dan is learning. He looks better, too.

What else, Eddie?

MR. BARTELT: Maybe you would be interested in the number of readjustment allowance payments being made to veterans, discharged veterans.

H.W.JR: What?

MR. BARTELT: Readjustment allowance payments being made to discharged veterans. They are running about twenty-seven thousand a week now, amounting to about five hundred thirty-six thousand dollars. Total payments to date have been about one million dollars.

MR. D. W. BELL: That is comparable to--

MR. BARTELT: ... unemployment payments.

MR. D. W. BELL: ...unemployment compensation, and they give the sum to the veteran before they get employment, and they have gone up from just a few hundred a week to about--
MR. BARTELT: Twenty-seven thousand.

H.M.JR: Do you think that is worthy of giving out to the press?

MR. FUSSELL: I think that would be very interesting to the press conference this afternoon in connection with war bonds—one of the new obligations we are taking on. It would have to be covered by war bonds.

H.M.JR: By war bonds?

MR. FUSSELL: And taxes.

MR. D. W. BELL: It is additional expenditure.

MR. FUSSELL: Accruing expenditure that is going to be accumulating as time goes on.

H.M.JR: Is this something new?

MR. BARTELT: No, sir. That has been going on since the G.I. Bill was passed.

H.M.JR: If it is something the Treasury is doing—

MR. BARTELT: Yes.

H.M.JR: ...come on in and explain it to the men this afternoon, will you? You better have something in writing, because they are awfully dumb. Have something written out for them so they can copy it. Show it to Fussell before you come in. What else?

MR. BARTELT: That is all.

H.M.JR: I didn’t think that Dan would learn that old Army game, but I congratulate you. You’ve got a good man, Dan.

MR. D. W. BELL: He’s got a strong arm.

H.M.JR: The next thing is you will be coming in with a request for two new assistant secretaries.
MR. D. W. BELL: No go.

H.W.JR.: No go.

MR. GASTON: I listened to Ros Van Mill make a speech Friday at the same place where I was--Friday week before last--and he was quite bitter against the Treasury. His whole attitude was one of sneering at the Treasury Department.

MR. BROUGH: He has just sponsored one of the most reactionary tax reports in history. It is not yet public. It is now in the private distribution stage, and they are going to revise it some, but it is very bad.

MR. D. W. BELL: He is in the money now.

MR. BROUGH: I am not interpreting--

MR. HAAS: That reminds me of something. Have you seen Shields' and Woodward's book?

H.W.JR.: No.

MR. D. W. BELL: Is it reactionary, too?

MR. HAAS: It is sort of a name-calling, clever sort of thing, anti-administration all the way through, but they don't use those words.

H.W.JR.: What are you going to do about it?

MR. HAAS: I told them when they came in that they couldn't make any speeches, they couldn't write any articles while they were consultants with the Treasury, so none of them are getting--Woodward never got any money, never had any appointment. Shields got his travel expenses. That is all. We are not paying them anything.

H.W.JR.: Are they any good? Are they useful?

MR. HAAS: Useful to find out what Mutual Trust wants, and--

MR. D. W. BELL: They resigned in January.

MR. HAAS: I told them when they did that they came in and said they would write this book--I said--

H.W.JR.: In the whole United States there must be a few people who appreciate what this administration has done. I would seek them out. Let's seek them out. I can send for Lou Douglas and find out what the Mutual wants.

MR. D. W. BELL: I think George will agree with me that those boys probably got more out of coming down here than we got out of them.

MR. HAAS: Sure.

H.W.JR.: It is good to rotate, George, anyway.

MR. HAAS: Okay. I wanted to mention it to you.

H.W.JR.: It is good to rotate.

MR. HAAS: I think it is.

H.W.JR.: I wouldn't send for them. They get much more out of us. Anyway, look for a couple of good fellows in places like Philadelphia that are friendly. (Laugh.)

H.W.JR.: I had this whole group for lunch Friday, and I said I want to get the word out, you see. We are thinking of moving some of our Foreign Funds from New York to Philadelphia, and everybody said I shouldn't say anything. But they had quite a time keeping me down.

MR. D. W. BELL: McConnell came in this morning and gave Glaser and me his objections to the document we drew up the other day. One was the point that you raised, synthetic nitrogen not being mentioned. He said it was very important. Each country around Germany has a capacity to produce a great deal more than the whole of Europe will need, and it is very important that it go in at least the subsequent document.
The other point was that steel should be limited to some formula such as fifty percent of '38 production, or something like that.

H.W.JR. What did we say?

MR. D. W. BELL: I don't think it is limited, but it is part of the reparations.

MR. COE: We say it should be held down to the limits.

MR. D. W. BELL: Four and five.

MR. COE: To the limits of the objectives of occupation, which means disease, unrest, and no starvation.

H.W.JR. Does he want less steel produced immediately, or more?

MR. D. W. BELL: He wants some specific restriction put on it in the document, and the other one was that the document is silent on stock piles. He thinks we might find stock piles of certain goods, maybe copper.

H.W.JR. What do we do with them?

MR. D. W. BELL: He thinks they ought to be taken out, but Glasser thought maybe that would come under the reparations. He wasn't certain about it. Those are the three points he thought ought to be put in. I think he had one other point. It is a question of production of certain lines that might be necessary in order to build a factory or keep a factory going. There may be some things you may want to manufacture. He doesn't think that can be done under the document, but Glasser has pointed out where it could be done.

MR. COE: Yes.

MR. D. W. BELL: They were talking when I left.

H.W.JR: All right, Dan.
H. W. JR: Let me tell you this. When you have won your case before the judge, stop. (Laughter.)

(Discussion off the record.)

All right. Does anybody else want a salary raise for any reason? Charles?

MR. CHARLES BELL: No, sir. We let the White House have three detailed stenographers this last week for a matter of ten days.

H. W. JR: Does the President want an increase in salary?

MR. CHARLES BELL: No, sir, but they are flooded with work over there.

H. W. JR: All right.

NMJr: Hello.
Operator: Mr. Patterson is out of his office for a few minutes.
NMJr: Oh. When he comes back, I want to talk to him.
Operator: Right.
(Pause)
Operator: Go ahead.
NMJr: Hello, Bob?
Mr. Robert Patterson: Henry.
NMJr: How are you?
P: Fine. I'm just moving off to Europe in about five minutes.
NMJr: Oh, for heaven's sake!
P: (Laughs)
NMJr: You are?
P: Yeah.
NMJr: Well...
P: I'll be back soon though, I won't be gone long.
NMJr: I see - something special?
P: No.
NMJr: Just a looksee, eh?
P: Yeah.
NMJr: Lucky man. Why didn't you invite a fellow to go along?
P: (Laughs) I would have if I thought you would have gone.
NMJr: Yeah. Well, I might come in a month from now. Bob, I wanted to keep going on this Chinese thing, and I've been doing separations, you know...

P: Yes.
NMJr: ...and this directive. Well, now, if you are going tomorrow to
P: Somervell is supposed to go down there.
NMJr: Oh, oh.
P: Somervell is supposed to go down there.
NMJr: Is he?
P: Yeah.
NMJr: I see. Well...
P: Martin is here.
NMJr: All right. Well, will you have whoever is on it come to my office at three tomorrow, please?
P: Yes, three?
NMJr: Three.
P: Yes, I will.
NMJr: Bring me back something, will you?
P: All right, Henry, I will indeed.
NMJr: You decide what it should be.
P: Yes, sir.
NMJr: Good luck.
P: Thank you.
NMJr: But have them over here at three.
P: Yes, sir.
NMJr: Thank you.
P: I will.
NMJr: Thank you.
HJf:  Hello.
Mr. Joseph Grew: Hello.
HJf:  Morgenthau.
G:  Good morning.
HJf:  How are you?
G:  Fine, thank you.
HJf:  Mr. Grew, about a week or ten days ago at Cabinet I brought up this question of the visit of T. V. Soong and his mission over here in regard to gold. G:  Yes.
HJf:  I had talked to President Truman about it earlier, and he told the Cabinet he wanted me to handle it in consultation with State and War.
G:  Yes.
HJf:  We've had one meeting, and Mr. Stimson designated Mr. Patterson to handle it for him, and your Mr. Caffalo sat in on one meeting on a lower level.
G:  Hello? How I want to see if I can't get to some decision tomorrow at 3 o'clock at my office so that I can tell Mr. Soong I'm ready to see him.
HJf:  Yes.
G:  But it — normally, I'd look to your men Vincent—John — what is it — Carter Vincent? Hello?
HJf:  Yes.
G:  Who would you like to have represent State over here tomorrow?
HJf:  Well, if Will Clayton can find the time, I think he ought to do it.
G:  Well, it's important that the whole question of the Administration's attitude from a military and economic standpoint.
HJf:  Yes.

HMJr: Hello.
Operator: Mr. Silvermaster.
HMJr: Right.
Operator: Go ahead.
HMJr: Hello.
Mr. Silvermaster: This is Morgenthau speaking.
Si: Yes, sir.
HMJr: Mr. Silvermaster, today is the 30th of April...
Si: Yes.
HMJr: ... and have you decided whether you want to stay on the Treasury payroll, or whether you want to go over tomorrow on April 30th. Commerce?
Si: I'd like to stay on the Treasury payroll.
HMJr: You'd like to?
Si: Yes. I think -- I've talked to Mr. Pahl on Saturday.
HMJr: Oh, you did.
Si: Yes, and he told me there are two transfer dates.
HMJr: Pardon...
Si: As of May lst and the other as of June lst.
HMJr: I see. And then during this period you'll give it some more thought, is that the idea?
Si: Yes.
HMJr: But tomorrow you go over -- you're going to begin to help Mr. Wallace? Is that the thought?
Si: Yes. Well, I have a Division here with quite a number of people.
HMJr: Yes.
Si: And I thought that I would help them during this transition period.
Mr. Joseph: Hello.

Mr: Yes.

G: Oh, Mr. Secretary.

Mr: Yeah.

G: Grew speaking again.

Mr: Right.

G: Would it be convenient to make that meeting to-morrow in regard to gold at 3 o'clock instead of three?

Mr: It will be all right.

G: I'd like to have Will sit in on that, and he'll come if you can have it at four.

Mr: I will have it at four.

G: Fine. And I'll ask Stanton of our Far Eastern office to go with Will and Collado.

Mr: Stanton and Collado.

G: O. K. with you?

Mr: Entirely.

G: All right, thank you.

Mr: Thank you.

G: Goodbye.
Mr. Harry White: And there's an attempt to get them to organize to try to get a larger role in the Security Council, which the council which really will do the business.

HMJr: Let me tell you, Harry.

Mr. Harry White: Yeah.

HMJr: I'd love to talk with you, but this is kind of a bed time.

Mr. Harry White: Yes.

HMJr: Is there any particular time I could call you?

Mr. Harry White: Well, you name your time there the wires are awfully hard to get. So you name your time and I'll call you tomorrow morning - or this afternoon?

HMJr: How about quarter of nine Washington time tomorrow?

Mr. Harry White: A quarter of nine Washington time tomorrow. That's six o'clock here.

HMJr: (Laughs)

Mr. Harry White: I thought you might just be going to bed.

HMJr: (Laughs) No. I go to bed about two hours earlier than that. They've got a surfew here.

Mr. Harry White: Oh. Well I tell you this one Paulus is just coming in now. Dubois is trying to brief me, you see?

HMJr: Yeah.

Mr. Harry White: And I want to get what they have. I tell you -- is there any way of reaching you through Customs.

HMJr: I'll find out.

Mr. Harry White: I can have a Customs....
April 30, 1942
3:50 P.M.

Mr. Will Clayton: This is Will Clayton.

C: The President asked Joe Grew to get in touch with you on the Netherlands Land-Lease agreement.

HHJr: Yeah.

C: And Joe just called me about it and he asked me to tell you. He asked me if you had any objection to it, and I told him I was sure not because the Treasury has been in on all the conferences - that they were fully advised on the whole situation and that we were expecting to sign any day. We've been trying to get it through to Frank Cio to notify him that it was going to be signed this afternoon, and invite him to be present. And they said - the two or three times we called him - that he was in with you so we couldn't give word to him. And I just wondered if there was any point you had about it.

HHJr: Well, I think it is a mistake to do this thing now, when it looks as though we were just about on the eve of V-E Day, and it looks as though we were trying to beat the gun against what Congress might want us not to do.

C: Ahuh. Well, the -- we didn't have that point of view from the Treasury, and the thing has been under negotiation, as you know, for a long, long time.

HHJr: Yeah.

C: And it -- excuse me just a moment -- (causes)

Aaron Hoffman, and a lawyer, Bronze - I think it is - were over here on Friday afternoon when the final terms were agreed upon. I have a -- I have a good deal the same feeling that you have about it, that it just - it sort of looks like we're trying to beat the gun, but the thing has been in negotiation for such a long time and I think it was to decide to sign it now that it would make a very bad impression on the Dutch.

HHJr: Well, with you asking me a direct question...
PRE-PRESS
Present: Mr. D. W. Bell

Mr. Luxford

H.M.JR: What about this thing on CED testimony (indicating attached memo from Mr. Luxford to the Secretary dated April 20, 1943)?

MR. BELL: I haven't seen it.

MR. O'CONNELL: This is exactly the same thing we have said a number of times. If we can get by with saying no more than this, it would be fine.

MR. GASTON: It's Sherman.

H.M.JR: Well, now--

MR. O'CONNELL: This really says nothing we haven't said before, and if we can get by without saying more than this, it would be fine.

MR. GASTON: Why can't we say we think it is a good idea?

MR. LUXFORD: Boone and Wolcott want to hold bargaining power and you don't have any if you give it away.

MR. O'CONNELL: We have practically given it away.

MR. BELL: We have said it deserves serious consideration. That's all we have ever said.

MR. GASTON: Didn't you go further than that?

MR. BELL: No, it deserves serious consideration, and that's what has been said previously.

MR. LUXFORD: That's what they want, not to give this point away.

H.M.JR: Can I say I haven't agreed to anything?

MR. LUXFORD: Sure, you're studying it.

H.M.JR: I won't be letting you down, will I?

MR. BELL: I don't care about letting me down but I understood we had said before my speech that the CED proposal was a good one and should be carefully considered.
That was made public and I said nothing more than what had been previously said.

H.M.JR: It should be given what?

MR. BELL: Careful consideration.

MR. O'CONNELL: The only thing open is how we do it.

H.M.JR: If they ask the question here, I'll say we are giving it serious consideration?

MR. LUXFORD: Yes. The reason I emphasize it is that Sherman indicated this morning that Treasury is approving.

MR. BELL: We have never said it was approved.

H.M.JR: If I say we are giving it careful consideration, I think it will be all right.

MR. BELL: I don't think you even have to go that far.
Say we said the CED report is a good report and the suggestion they made there deserves serious consideration.
We haven't gone beyond that.

H.M.JR: Is that all right?
MR. LUXFORD: All right.
MR. O'CONNELL: All right.

H.M.JR: Now, of course, this was the ABA who wanted me to say we accepted it.

MR. LUXFORD: That's all I have.
H.M.JR: Thank you.

(Mr. Luxford leaves the conference.)

MR. FUSSELL: That's the thing Bartelt spoke of this morning.

H.M.JR: Where is he?

MR. BARTELT: I don't know what the procedure was.

H.M.JR: All right. Do you want me to read this thing on black markets? (Indicates attachment A.)

MR. D.W. BELL: This is awfully long.

MR. FUSSELL: I don't think you need to read from it if you can speak about it along that line. Just the first page of it, never mind the second page. Review what the situation is.

H.M.JR: Well, we'll see.

MR. GASTON: I wouldn't read that.
The present income tax investigation is the second phase of the drive against the black market which the Treasury launched late in 1943.

As of March 1, 1945, indictments had been returned against 784 persons or corporations for black market violations in liquor operations, with 404 convictions to that date.

The present drive against income tax violators includes a much broader field. Though the drive is still centered against black market operators, many types of operations other than liquor are being covered.

"Leads" have been developed in some 2,000 cases which are being screened, with first attention being given to cases apparently involving large scale, flagrant violations.

Analysis of a sample of 500 of these cases shows 172 involve liquor transactions, 69 involve large currency transactions which probably include dealings in liquor and other commodities, 47 involve produce sales, 26 jewelry, 23 clothing and textiles, 12 meat, and smaller numbers involve such miscellaneous businesses as machinery, restaurants, automobiles, petroleum products, scrap metal, tires and gambling.

War contractors figure in several large cases being investigated.

One by-product of the drive has been payments of as much as a half-million dollars, in one instance, on supplemental tax returns filed after investigations had been undertaken.

A midwestern manufacturing concern is alleged to have diverted proceeds of sales directly to officers to escape record on the company books, which will result in assessment of additional taxes and penalties of more than $2,000,000 covering the three-year period 1941-1943.

During 1943 a midwestern wholesaler in wines, liquors and groceries appears to have made sales in excess of CPA ceilings totalling $175,000 during 1943, but as a result of carrying this investigation into preceding years, taxes and penalties of more than $500,000 are now proposed against the firm and its officers.

Surveys of fur and jewelry firms indicate evasion of excise taxes as well as income taxes.

Large denomination bills figure in many cases. Recent transactions in large bills, traded through three banks in a single city, total nearly $11,000,000.

Extra large bills, however, are not the only ones that are being used in an apparent effort to conceal income. A jewelry firm in a southern city is reported as having accumulated $250,000 in $20 bills, which apparently has not been reported for income taxes.

Transactions in checks, cashed outside of regular banking channels, with the apparent purpose of evading income taxes, also are being investigated.

The Treasury is receiving active cooperation from other government agencies, such as the Office of Price Administration and the Department of Justice, from financial circles and from the public.

New procedures are being developed by the Treasury and Justice Departments, designed to expedite handling of some types of cases.

The CPA has provided information in some 2,000 cases which are being investigated from the tax liability angle in Bureau of Internal Revenue field offices, and its district directors are under instructions to report any evidence of cash side payments or other income which may have been concealed.

Secretary Morgenthau
Mr. Luxford

For Your Press Conference

I mentioned to you that Flanders and Sherman testified today on the C.E.D. proposal. They indicated that the treasury (namely White and Bell) had indicated agreement with their proposal. Actually, I think we have only stated that their proposal deserves "serious consideration".

You undoubtedly will be questioned by the reporters at today's press conference. You will recall that both Spence and Hollock are anxious that we do not publicly accept the C.E.D. proposal at this time as it will lose its bargaining value.

I suggest that you:

(1) State you have not read testimony of Flanders and Sherman yet but intend to study it carefully.

(2) Praise C.E.D. as forward looking group of responsible business leaders who have offered a constructive suggestion on Bretton Woods proposals.

(3) State that treasury is still studying proposal and has not arrived at a final conclusion yet.

April 30, 1945

Mr. Monnet, I got your message about Mr. Pleven.

Mr. Jean Monnet: Yes.

Mr. N.J.: How this is my trouble. Everything is all right. I'm planning after Cabinet Monday to go down and spend the week-end again with Miss Morgenthau.

Mr. N.J.: Yes.

Mr. N.J.: And that would mean leaving here Friday afternoon just when Mr. Pleven is arriving.

Mr. N.J.: When would you return?

Mr. N.J.: Well, I would be back normally Monday.

Mr. N.J.: Monday.

Mr. N.J.: He couldn't get here Thursday afternoon as I could send Friday morning with him.

Mr. N.J.: Well, I'll find out if he can get here Thursday, or otherwise, he could get here Sunday night.

Mr. N.J.: Well, I wouldn't be back until very late Sunday night.

Mr. N.J.: But you would be back Monday.

Mr. N.J.: True.

Mr. N.J.: So — when it's be — would it be convenient for you on Monday?

Mr. N.J.: It would be more convenient for me Friday morning. I could give him all of Friday morning if he wanted it.

Mr. N.J.: All right. I'll be in touch with him at once.

Mr. N.J.: And...?

Mr. N.J.: But if he couldn't possibly make it, would you make sometime Monday?

Mr. N.J.: Yes. If I see going to have to swallow, I'd rather make it Tuesday.

Mr. N.J.: Well, say I give him the option between Friday morning or Tuesday morning?

Mr. N.J.: Yes. And if he — that's right — between Friday morning or Tuesday.

Mr. N.J.: Or Tuesday morning?

Mr. N.J.: I don't — is that perfectly considerate — isn't it?

Mr. N.J.: Oh, I think so. I think so.

Mr. N.J.: It just so happens with Mrs. Morgenthau ill, I do want to get down there to see her.

Mr. N.J.: Well, he understands that fully. How is Mrs. Morgenthau?

Mr. N.J.: She's making good progress.

Mr. N.J.: Good, so you have no anxiety.

Mr. N.J.: Not just now, eq.

Mr. N.J.: Will you — then I will telephone to Pleven and let you know. You are only leaving here on Friday.

Mr. N.J.: I'm leaving Friday after Cabinet which is usually around four o'clock.

Mr. N.J.: Good. Well, then, I'll be in touch with you tomorrow.

Mr. N.J.: Thank you.

Mr. N.J.: Thank you very much.

Mr. N.J.: Goodbye.

Mr. N.J.: Goodbye.

HMJr: Hello.
Operator: Mr. Hopkins.
HMJr: Hello.
Mr. Harry Hopkins: Hello, Henry.
HMJr: How are you?
I: Well, I'm better.
HMJr: Well, that's good news.
I: I—well, I'll tell you about it when I see you.
HMJr: Yeah.
I: Tell me how Edith is.
HMJr: Well, she's better, but she's still not out of danger ahead of what she was.
I: Too bad. Henry, what time do you go down to the office?
HMJr: In the morning.
I: I was wondering if there were any chances of you dropping by here and seeing me.
HMJr: Well, I don't know whether you got an invitation for lunch.
I: Oh, I haven't been going out anywhere, Henry.
HMJr: I see.
I: I get up and walk three or four blocks a day, but I'm still not in very good shape.
HMJr: Well, I would leave the house normally about nine.
I: Well, would it—do you think you could stop by and we could have a 15-minute talk?
HMJr: Sure.
I: I'd love to.

HMJr: I'll stop by tomorrow morning.
I: I've got something on my mind—very much.
HMJr: I can't always tell exactly. Should I call?
I: You don't have to call—just come any time after half-past eight.
HMJr: It will be after half-past eight.
I: Well, a quarter past eight, I don't care.
HMJr: No.
I: I'm up.
HMJr: I'll be glad to come.
I: You know where I live?
HMJr: Yeah.
I: 3356 N. St.
HMJr: I know where you live.
I: All right, Henry.
HMJr: Say, well—wait a minute, I'd better write it down, but I'm...
I: 3356.
HMJr: 33...
I: 350 N—little letter, like Harry.
HMJr: No.
I: N.
HMJr: N, like Harry.
I: That's right.
HMJr: Right.
I: All right, Henry.
HMJr: Thank you.
I: Good, boy.
April 30, 1945

I told Pauley about this Clayton Committee and that we were going to meet tomorrow. I said that I had told President Truman I wanted to be helpful to him, and I said, "If you want me to be helpful - fine. If you don't, that's all right with me." He said, "Of course," I want you to be helpful. I want to get all the help I can." I asked him if he wanted the meeting to take place tomorrow, and he said, "Yes, I want to listen." He said, "It is in no way binding on me," and I said, "No." I said, "1067 was revised when we gave it to the President, and it is up to him." He said, "That's all right."

Pauley made it very clear that he is going only as the President's agent. He was in England a couple of years ago on some oil mission, and he has had his taste of the State Department and what they can do.

We gave him a copy of Revised 1067, and the State Department memoranda of March 10th and 20th.
MEMORANDUM TO THE PRESIDENT:

I am transmitting herewith a check covering your salary as President of the United States, for the period April 13 to April 30, 1945.

As you know, the President's salary is paid monthly on the last day of each month; and in order to avoid delay in delivery of the check, arrangements were made with the General Accounting Office to issue the certificate for the amount due, less a deduction for withholding tax (computed on the basis of two exemptions), pending your signing of the withholding exemption certificate on a Form W-4. Appropriate adjustment will be made in a subsequent check for any amount due after the withholding certificate has been received. The computation of the enclosed check is as follows:

Basic monthly salary of President ............... $6,250
15/36ths of $6,250 .. $3,750.00
Withholding tax ..... $20.81
Net ............... $2,929.19

BUSINESS: Linotype machine beating away slightly off mike.

FRED: (Off) Hey, Wilbur.

WILBUR: Yeah?

FRED: Where's that editorial?

WILBUR: I guess George is still writing it.

FRED: It's six o'clock.

WILBUR: I know.

FRED: This may not be the New York Times, but even the editor of the Elmwood Register ought to meet his own deadline.

WILBUR: George doesn't like to be bothered when he's writing those four dollar words.

FRED: Tell him to put it in nickels and quarters. We have to meet a deadline.

WILBUR: Okay. I'll ask him again.

BUSINESS: Linotyping up. Fades as steps walk on mike.

Door opens. Closes. Linotype way down.

Typewriter pecking away.
WILBUR: (Softly) Mr. Gamble.
GEORGE: What's that? What's that?
WILBUR: It's six o'clock. We need the editorial.
GEORGE: So do I. It's not going so good, Wilbur.
A lot of words, but no facts.
SOUND: Typewriter pecks away.
WILBUR: (Wearily) It's six o'clock, Mr. Gamble.
GEORGE: How does this sound to you?
BUSINESS: Pulling paper out of typewriter.
GEORGE: (Reading aloud) "The representatives of 46 nations are meeting in San Francisco to chart
the future world organization for all of us.
Because of this very fact -- because this is the news of the world this week and next week and the week after that -- every petty difference between delegates, every small issue -- is blown into a headline, a quarrel and a major conflict.

GEORGE: (Cont'd) This is news and we print it -- But it is not the real news -- and let's not forget it. There have been many conferences before... perhaps not on so large a scale.
WILBUR: That's a fact, Mr. Gamble.
BUSINESS: Linotype machine off. Stops.
GEORGE: (Continuing) "But in one major respect this conference is different. This meeting on world peace is being held during the war...during a world war. For the first time, men have realized that war and peace are indivisible, that the peace must flow from...."
BUSINESS: Door opening and closing off.
FRED: (Off) George...
GEORGE: I'm writing it.
FRED: George, look at this.
GEORGE: Get out.
(Fading in) This is hot. Look George...Just come off the wire. Color story on the battle of Germany. Look. Johnny Lees.

GEORGE: Lees?

FRED: Yeah -- Johnny Lees -- You know Johnny Lees.

WILBUR: Sam Lees' kid?

FRED: Uh-Huh...Owes the machine shop on Tower Road...

GEORGE: Gimme. (Beat, then reads)

"Typical of the action on this fluid front is the adventure of a sherman tank lovingly christened the "Model T." Far out ahead of the others on the road to Berchtesgaden it ran out of gas in the center of a small, but important communications town. Here for four hours the "Model T" remained, alone and unassisted -- holding up the enemy retreat.

WILBUR: Holy smoke.

GEORGE: "I spoke to Sgt. Johnny Lees, the tank's driver. He wouldn't discuss the action -- but sent this message home. "Tell the people in Elmwood, New York," he said "That I expect to see the Fire Department's number 3 pump wagon in good shape when I get back. No. 3 used to be my baby."

WILBUR: Imagine -- that kid. A hero.

GEORGE: Wilbur, you pull that part approval story off the front page. Hold it open. I'm going down to talk to Sam Lees. Where's my hat?

WILBUR: On your head.

FRED: How about the editorial?

GEORGE: I'm working on it - don't touch it.

WILBUR: But Mr. Gamble ....

GEORGE: Hold Everything.

BUSINESS: Door opens and closes.
SAM: Machine shop noises way off.

GEORGE: Sure, it's true, Sam. It's right here on the teletype -- off the press wires. See his name there -- Johnny Lees.

SAM: Well, what do you know? Look at that -- Johnny Lees. Printed right out. Hey, George -- that goes in a lot of papers, Huh?

GEORGE: Coast to coast.

SAM: Coast to coast. My kid. Johnny. Wait'll Grace hears this.

BUSINESS: Picks up phone receiver.

SAM: Our son a hero ....

BUSINESS: Dialing.

SAM: Have a cigar, George, help yourself.

GEORGE: Thanks.

BUSINESS: Busy signal.

SAM: Busy.

BUSINESS: Receiver down.

SAM: Spends half her life on the Phone. (Hmm)

(With wonder) My son a hero. I think I'm entitled to a cigar myself.

SAM: (Laughing) Thanks. Thanks. It's great. Great news.

GEORGE: What'll I print in the paper?

SAM: Aren't you going to print the whole story?

GEORGE: Sure. But I mean, what do you think of it?

SAM: Great. Great news. You know Johnny, a nice ordinary boy -- not too ordinary ....

GEORGE: What else?

SAM: Well, I'm proud to be his father. (Hesitates) Maybe you'd better not print that.

GEORGE: What shall I print?

SAM: There's nothing special. I guess I'm like all the other fathers. Proud of him and worrying about him.
For the last year and a half I've tried to figure out where his outfit was and waited for news in his letters. We used to let each other know.

GEORGE: Each other? What do you mean?

SAM: The families of the boys in that tank. "The Model T." Men from four different states, you know. And us families, we kind of write to each other. Sort of lonely hearts club of interested parties ....

BUSINESS: Of drawer being opened, etc.

SAM: You know the kind of things -- "I heard from my son today. He says so and so ..." Or "My brother wrote ... he's been ..." That way we all know what's going on.

GEORGE: May I see the list?

BUSINESS: Of drawer being opened, paper rattling.

SAM: This is it. You see Losier, Andrews, all of them.

GEORGE: (Reading) Wisconsin, Kansas, Connecticut, Florida -- That's quite a slew of states ....

SAM: -- you never knew those people before --

GEORGE: Never had to.

SAM: Never had to? That's right. And now you're writing to each other -- talking to each other -- thinking together, hoping together --

GEORGE: Well, sure. The boys are in the same tank -- we're fighting the same war --

SAM: Let me ask you, Sam -- when these men come back -- when your Johnny comes back, what do you think he wants? What do you think he and those others feel they're fighting for? Do you ever talk about that in your letters?

SAM: We don't talk that big, George ... I just run a small machine shop here in a small town.

Johnny wants to do the same. At least he did.
SAM: (Cont'd)
All right, we're busy now... and we're not making mouse traps. When peace comes I want these machines to keep going full blast. They have to if we want to live a Johnny and me and our folks -- there's got to be orders, business, customers. If those machines stop and rust... that's another war, not peace. And then I don't know what Johnny'll have been fighting for... (Pause) Is that what you're asking?

GEORGE: Can I quote you?

SAM: Sure and print my picture and Johnny's. But it's just my opinion. Say, I've got to call my wife.

BUSINESS: Of phone.

SAM: My son a hero... coast to coast.

GEORGE: Say, Sam -- is it all right if I copy this list?

MUSIC: For bridge... into linotype... telephone... click of receiver.

WILBUR: Register. Copy desk.

GEORGE: (Filter) Wilbur.
WILBUR: Oh, hello, Mr. Gamble. What did Sam Lees say?

GEORGE: (Filter) Plenty. Wilbur -- I won't be back for a week or so.

WILBUR: You what?

GEORGE: (Filter) You just put the edition to bed and take over until I get back. But listen -- where are you going?

GEORGE: (Filter) Away.

WILBUR: Away? But, Mr. Gamble, you can't....

GEORGE: (Filter) Who's running this paper? (Slight pause)

WILBUR: (Resigned) Okay.
GEORGE: (Filter) Take over, Wilbur. I'll be back in a week or so.

WILBUR: How about that editorial?

GEORGE: (Filter) Leave it in the machine. I'll finish it when I get back. I need some help in writing it. That's why I'm going away.

MUSIC: For tag ... into sound of tractor slightly off, but strong.

LOSIER: (over it) Wait -- I'll turn her off. No sense yelling at each other like this.

BUSINESS: Click...motor dies...another tractor heard way off (This tractor to increase and or die in volume as it passes back and forth)

LOSIER: Besides, me and the machine, both could stand to rest awhile. (listens to other tractor) That's my wife over there, working the other field. Have to push with the planting these days.

GEORGE: I'll bet you do.

LOSIER: My kid brother -- right in the paper. Somehow we never thought of him as a hero ....

GEORGE: How did he feel about it in the first place -- about leaving here and getting in?

LOSIER: How did anyone feel?

GEORGE: It's harder, I suppose, for a farmer.

LOSIER: It's not good. You get sort of tied to the place. And it's hard to go off when things are growing. The kid's a good farmer ... none better. (Pause) You know -- what you asked me -- about this international business -- this ....

GEORGE: (Prompting him) World security?

LOSIER: That's right -- don't you think maybe you picked the wrong man to talk to?

GEORGE: How so?
Well, as farmers -- you know, we're supposed to be isolationists.

GEORGE: You think that still holds true?

LOSIER: No, I don't. Fact is -- I believe we've changed. Know I have. Guess it's bound to be, with everything changing all around ...

GEORGE: You mean the world's getting smaller -- getting to be what Wendell Wilkie used to call "One World"?

LOSIER: Hey, wait a minute -- I'm no political expert. I'm in the farming business. I want to sell my crops. Seems to me, there's plenty of people in the world to feed. And plenty that needs clothes and tools and such. Don't see any reason why it can't be worked out together -- instead of being set on each other's throats like a couple of strange hounds.

LOSIER: (Cont'd) (Laughs) But that's me talking -- and I take it you're more interested in what my kid brother has to say --

GEORGE: Chances are you two aren't very far apart.

LOSIER: We're not, for a fact. Though Paul's views are a bit sharper -- so to speak ... .

GEORGE: That's natural, after what he's gone through.

LOSIER: Let me tell you, Mr. Gamble, it makes you doubt we're living in civilized times -- to think over some of the things Paul's told me. About the places he's seen -- in Italy and France. The farms ruined, the soil just lying there dead -- sterile. Recollect something he wrote from Italy, I guess it was. He said after you've seen what hunger really is ... you begin to understand what kind of a world it is you're fighting for.

(Pause) Paul's coming back, please the Lord, when he's finished his job over there.
- 16 -

LOSIER: And he's going to be thinking of the others who finished -- and didn't come back. Now, supposing he stands here -- and sees that field of the run across the road there. He sees it lying uncultivated. Or he sees him Jim Burleigh's corn, rotting on the stalks, unpicked, the way it was ten years ago. And then he remembers the hunger he's seen in Europe. What was their sacrifice for, he'll ask? No siree -- before he gets back -- before he has a chance to ask that question -- we'd better make sure we find a way of getting together -- and preventing that stuff from happening again. (Grunts)

GOT kind of wound up there, didn't I?

GEORGE: It's something to get wound up about.

LOSIER: Well, I'd better get back to farming. I know something about that ....

BUSINESS: Tractor on ... Into

MUSIC: For bridge... into kid practising scales on piano off.

SYBIL: I've told the newspaper all I know -- I told them when the story was first printed, Mr. --

GEORGE: Gamble. George Gamble.

SYBIL: Of course, Mr. Gamble, it's been exciting having a husband who's in the news, but....

GEORGE: I've come a long way to see you, Mrs. Andrews.

SYBIL: What paper did you say?

GEORGE: The Elmwood Register. Elmwood, New York...

SYBIL: Don't suppose you've ever heard of it.

GEORGE: I don't think I have ....

SYBIL: I'm from Johnny Lees' town.

GEORGE: Oh, the Lees. Oh yes, Elmwood. I remember now.

SYBIL: I've written to Mrs. Lees. Johnny and Dan are in the same tank, you know.

GEORGE: That's right. And that's why I'm here. Sorry to disturb you this way, but --- SYBIL: (Over him) I'm afraid my son's doing the disturbing.

BUSINESS: Steps off... closing of door... piano way down.

SYBIL: That's better. You were saying --

GEORGE: Why I came here -- what I hoped to find out about those men in the "Model T" -- about your husband....

SYBIL: Well -- it's hardly very -- er -- colorful.

Dan was born here in Milwaukee. Went to college -- then business. He's done well, I suppose -- sort of personnel manager, he's called.

GEORGE: And when he comes back what'll he do?

SYBIL: What will any of them do? Go on from there.

GEORGE: Just the way it was?

SYBIL: Hardly.

GEORGE: What makes you say that? (Pause) I'm not prying, Mrs. Andrews. I think it's important to know.

Why do you think it won't be the way it was in the past?

SYBIL: Because of the way Dan feels - because of what Dan writes (pause) Would you like to ...

GEORGE: Well, a letter is kind of personal.

SYBIL: Some part of this letter you could shout from a rooftop. He wrote it a few months ago - just before he moved up for this big push. I've kept it... well... close to me. Would you...

GEORGE: If I may...

SYBIL: I keep it here in the desk.

BUSINESS: Steps fade off a little. Return.

SYBIL: I've read it to quite a few people. Neighbors and friends -

GEORGE: Letters do more work than they used to.

BUSINESS: ... Letter out of envelope
SYBIL: Yes, this is the one...let's see...(reading to herself)...and you can tell that to Eddie's wife for me...(aloud). Now, here, it begins here.

(reading) "We've seen a good deal of this country since we broke through so long ago at La Falaise. I can't describe it, Sybil -- but I can say thank God we've never seen our towns and cities this way, reduced to meaningless heaps of gray rubble. We've been lucky. If it happens again, we won't be so lucky. We'll see it happen to us, too. (Pause) I often think of that first trip we took through France on our honeymoon. I wish we had known then what we've learned now. Americans can't be tourists any more -- sight-seers, standing apart. What happens anywhere today happens to us...and to our children. When I think of our boys, I know it has to be different this time.

SYBIL: (Cont'd)

We can't hide our children in a desert some place. They have to live in this world -- and it can't be just any kind of a world. It has to be one in which they can grow and develop and live together with the other children of the world -- Not in spite of them--or at their expense. Darling, if ever we -- (she stops reading) (to George) well, Mr. Gamble -- That's the part I meant. Where we go on from...

Don't you think so?

I know so.

SYBIL: Of course that's only his opinion and mine...

GAMBLE: Thanks, Mrs. Andrews--thanks a lot.

SYBIL: (to himself)...Still, it says 6322 Highland Ave.--
GEORGE: Excuse me—I'm looking for people by the name of Ballard.

POWELL: No one here by that name.

GEORGE: Umm. No folks of a fellow named Harvey Ballard -- A soldier? This is 6332 Highland--66, that is 6332 Highland--isn't it?

POWELL: That's right—but I'm the only one here.

GEORGE: Powell's my name.

POWELL: Made a mistake, I guess.

GEORGE: (Quiet) Lost most likely. Are you looking for a Negro family?

GEORGE: Er-No. (Pause) After 35 years of newspaper work, you'd think I'd be more careful about getting addresses straight.

POWELL: Newspaper?

TO WA: Are you receiving this ok?

WA: Are you there?

---

GEORGE: Yes --This Ballard boy—he's sort of a hero.

Story came out about a week ago--How his tank occupied a village all alone and held up the German retreat--

POWELL: Yes, I read about that one.

GEORGE: Thought I'd do a story about the Parents of the crew. (out of politeness) You got anyone in the service?

POWELL: I did have a nephew of mine—He lived here with me--

GEORGE: Did have?

POWELL: He was killed—in the Solomons—Two years ago—Twenty-fourth Infantry.

GEORGE: I'm sorry. (Pause) Warm for April--You mind if I try sitting on those steps a while? My feet—and my spirit--don't get any friendlier as I grow older.
POWELL: Would you care to come in? I just made myself some coffee. Like a cup?

GEORGE: I most certainly would--especially if you'll throw a chair in with the offer. (they laugh)

BUSINESS: Door closing...into quick bridge and out

POWELL: (fading in) More sugar?

GEORGE: No thanks, one's enough. Fine.

BUSINESS: Stirring cup with spoon.

GEORGE: Then, as I understand you, Mr. Powell--you feel your people have a special stake in world peace.

POWELL: No...Except, of course, in the same sense we've had a special stake in the war. We've had a chance to show what we can do. I don't mean it's all been perfect--but for a lot of us it's been a big step forward. It's meant work--and a chance to prove what we can do.

POWELL: (Cont'd) And it shows what we can have in peace times...if everyone sticks together the way they did in the war.

GEORGE: You think your nephew understood that when he went into uniform?

POWELL: Some of my people didn't. They couldn't see it as our war. But my nephew did. He said this was our fight. He said if Hitler and the Japanese get away with it, we Negroes wouldn't have anything--not even problems.

GEORGE: A case of first things first, eh?

POWELL: Yes--and he believed it enough to die for it.

I was close to the boy and I grieved for him. But his death don't hurt me so much, so long as I know that what he died for will come to pass.

(Pause) Harry died two years ago--when things looked bad. Things look better now.
POWELL: (Cont'd)

It looks like we're going to have a world that's big enough and free enough for everyone to work and live in. It has to be that way. 'Cause if there isn't freedom everywhere, there's none here. A man's right to work has got to be as natural as his right to breathe - and that can only be when we have peace everywhere - all over the world. Of course, that's only our opinion - my nephew's and mine.

GEORGE:

Mr. Powell - I thought I'd made a mistake, coming to this address. I didn't. It would have been a mistake not to have stopped here. (beat) Thanks for the coffee. It hit the spot.

MUSIC

For bridge and out into

BUSINESS

High swinging whine of woodworking machinery... power saws, planers...hold good level

GEORGE:

(Yelling) Quite a set-up they got here, Mr. Goodloe - I -

GOODLOE:

Yeah - wood's gone to war, they tell me. Mister, I'm busy. They said you wanted to see me about Joe Sievers. Here, let's go out that door.

BUSINESS

Opening and closing of door..sound way down

GOODLOE:

Now, what about Joe--what's happened?

GOODLOE:

Sure, who wouldn't? It was plastered all over the front page last week. Is that what you came in to see me about?

GOODLOE:

I'm getting a story on the men in that tank. You're pretty close to Sievers, isn't that so?

GOODLOE:

Umm.

GOODLOE:

I found that out from Johnny Lees' father--in Elmwood, New York. I run the paper there.

GOODLOE:

(Warming up) Oh--Lees' father, Hugh.
GEORGE: He's the one that gave me the idea.

GOODLOE: Uh-huh. (Musing) We close to Joe (Laughs)
Too close, I guess. Like a father.

GEORGE: Umm.

GOODLOE: I got his job here. I got him into the union.
I taught him this trade. He was really kicking that planer around before he went.

GEORGE: Look, Mr. Goodloe--about those men in the tank. They're fighting for something--and it isn't mom's apple pie--both of us know that. What do you think? What kind of a world do they want? Take Sievers--now that he's a hero, how do you--

GOODLOE: (In over his) Can that hero stuff. Let's just be glad he's alive--like he must be glad. The kid did his job. That's plenty.

GEORGE: Okay. Let's go on from there. How do you think this Sievers boy would answer if I asked him what international security means to a working man in America?

GOODLOE: Lemme ask you...what would a guy in England say?
Or a guy in China? The same thing. It means a job--his job--my job. And it works both ways.

GEORGE: What works both ways?

GOODLOE: You can't have jobs for everyone, if you don't have peace everywhere-right?

GEORGE: Right.

GOODLOE: (Over him) Okay--Now, supposing we've got unemployment here--or anywhere. First thing you know--down goes wages--and the standard of living with it. Unemployment--and hunger. It's like a disease, Mister--it spreads.
GOODLOE: Then we begin to say, "Well, let's take care of our own--and if that hurts the other guy--well, that's too bad." And there goes your world peace.

GEORGE: And you think that can be prevented this time?

GOODLOE: Look, Mister--this time the people aren't taking if's and but's -- and the kind of horse-trading that wrecked the works last time. Everybody isn't agreed about everything--we know that. Let's forget this hundred per cent perfect stuff. Nothing's ever perfect. A lot of guys in this country didn't think the constitution was perfect -- but they signed it, didn't they? You got to begin somewhere. And when they had to make changes, they made 'em, didn't they? And it worked out all right.

GOODLOE: (Cont'd)

GEORGE: Same with all agreements--the main thing is to make 'em -- make 'em in spirit -- make 'em in fact -- and make 'em work. And if those boys at San Fran--Hey, What're you doing? You're not writing, all that down?

GOODLOE: No, No--just a few notes, so I'll remember.

BUSINESS: Door open...sound up big.

MAN: (Yelling) Hey. Goodie. Shaft on number three slipped again--give us a hand.

GOODLOE: Okay, Lou - comin. Well, Mister - It's back to work.

GEORGE: For both of us.

MUSIC For tag into Linotype machine

Sound of typewriter pecking away.
WILBUR: Mr. Gamble.

GEORGE: Yes?

WILBUR: Fred said to remind you - it's after four.

GEORGE: It's working, Wilbur. I've got it. The editorial makes sense but it needs one thing more. I know the kind of world people want. And I know the governments are meeting to arrange the organization. But where's the gas?

WILBUR: The gas?

GEORGE: The gas. It's like an airplane. We've got the machine and we've got the load. Now we want it to fly. And what we need is some new kind of super Ethyl high explosive gas to make it take off.

WILBUR: Don't you feel well, Mr. Gamble? Has the trip been too much for you?

GEORGE: The gas. The fuel. The driving power...

(suddenly) Wait a minute. I've got an idea. If he can't tell me a BUSINESS Telephone off hook...dialing

GEORGE: Operator.

WILBUR: Could I take the editorial, Mr. Gamble?

GEORGE: Just a minute - I'm not through yet. Operator.

I want long distance.

WILBUR: Long distance.

GEORGE: Hello...I want to talk to the Treasury Department. Yes - Yes - the United States Treasury Department. I want to talk to the Secretary of the Treasury - I want to talk to Secretary Morgenthau.

WILBUR: Mr. Gamble.

GEORGE: Well, I'm an American citizen.
GEORGE: (into phone) Hello - I'll hold on ..
(to Wilbur) I want to know what's being worked out - I want to know what's going to keep the machine running - I want to know.
(cue for switch)

OPERATOR'S VOICE: Just a moment, Sir, here is Secretary of the Treasury - Henry Morgenthau, Jr.
(Now we hear the voice of Secretary Morgenthau)

MORGENTHAU

Hello, George. This is Henry Morgenthau, Jr.
I have been listening to your program. The question you raise is one that people all over the world are asking. No one knows all the answers. But I am sure of this much. Since we've got to live together, we've got to find a way to work together, to exchange goods in a friendly, business-like way.

Some of our neighbors -- our best customers before the war -- have been hard hit by our common enemies. Their transportation systems have been smashed, their factories have been bombed and pillaged, their power plants wrecked. And while they are struggling to get back on their feet, we will have some pretty tough problems of our own to wrestle with.

To get an idea of their situation, and of our situation, and of how we can help each other, let me take an example from our own country.
Suppose, a rich agricultural area has been laid low by a hurricane. The rich soil is still there, and many of the permanent improvements, and the people with their skill and their habits of industry. They are all there. But their crops and equipment have been swept away. They have even lost their seed corn.

The people in this area, not only have little for themselves, but they are a poor market for the products of their neighbors. The people are eager to work out their own recovery, but they need help to help themselves.

What do we do? We lend them the means to rebuild. They spend it in the rest of the country for plows, lumber, seed and even household goods; and so furnish jobs to the people who produce these things. As they recover, they are able to pay off their loans, and once more to exchange their cotton or wheat for the numerous things they need.

This is our natural way of treating home problems; and we know that it works.

The situation is much the same with the devastated areas of Europe and the Far East, except that they have been swept by a man-made hurricane -- a hurricane a thousand times worse than any nature has ever launched.

The natural resources are there and so are most of the industrious people. The main burden of rebuilding will fall on them, but they need our help. In extending this help, we not only help them to get back on their feet; but we make markets for the products of American labor.

You and I know that we can't make a business of giving things away. But it is poor business not to sell seed corn on time to an honest man. The people of the world are still a good credit risk. They prefer a helping hand to a handout.
At Bretton Woods the United Nations prepared a twofold program to help rebuild and develop production, to enable countries to sell abroad and buy abroad. One part is an International Bank to guarantee productive loans. The other is an International Fund to stabilize currencies.

Fair currency standards are as important to peace as they are to prosperity. The Axis powers used currency war as a prelude to total war. And the same thing can happen again, unless all countries work together.

The American people, together with the people of the other United Nations, have dedicated themselves without limit to winning this war. They ask only one return for their sacrifice -- a world rid of war, a world in which all countries can live together in peace and prosperity.

You and I face a difficult task, as did our fathers a generation ago. But we have learned from their failure that we cannot depend on political machinery alone. We must also provide a sound economic foundation for enduring peace. We must make sure that international economic relations contribute to the well-being of all countries, that they do not become points of conflict which endanger peace.

You and I have the responsibility, through the Bretton Woods program to provide a sound economic foundation for this peace. Under the leadership of President Roosevelt, we have made a real start. Under the leadership of President Truman, we must bring to completion this program that embodies all the hopes and prayers of mankind.
MUSIC: Down and out. A linotype machine is beating away, off mike exactly as in the opening scene.

FRED: Wilbur.

WILBUR: Yeah.

FRED: It's six o'clock.

WILBUR: I know.

FRED: I don't like sounding monotonous but...

WILBUR: Mr. Gamble hasn't finished the editorial yet.

FRED: He's been writing it for two weeks.

WILBUR: Look Fred, he's writing it, not me.

FRED: All right, then, I'll tell him.

SOUND: Linotype machine stops... steps walking on mike.

WILBUR: I wouldn't do that, Fred...

FRED: I can talk to his, can't I? He's only the editor. I'm a linotypeer.

FRED: (muttering) Words are just words to me, one after the other. So many to a slug and so many to column...

SOUND: Door open. Typewriter... pecking away.

FRED: George.

GEORGE: Shut up.

SOUND: Typewriter continues.

FRED: (Louder) George.

GEORGE: Close the door after you.

SOUND: Door closes. Typewriter continues then comes to a smashing finish. Carriage returns. Sheet out.

GEORGE: Now then, Fred, I want you to listen. You too, Wilbur. This isn't just an editorial...

FRED: Okay--let's have it.

GEORGE: (Firmly) You're going to have it. Now sit down and when I'm through--for the first time in the history of this paper--I want to know what you think.
Now then -- (George begins to read - quietly at first - then with mounting excitement)

"Whose conference is it?" (Pause)

"There are several thousand delegates, diplomats, statesmen and what not at the conference tables in San Francisco and there are two billion people keeping the score.

Our governments are us. We have learned this in history's bloodiest war. We cannot afford to forget in the peace to follow. It is our voice that must be heard at the conference table. It is the voice of Sam Lees, of Elmwood, saying "when the peace comes, I want those machines going full blast." It is the voice of Arthur Losier, a farmer in Iona, Kansas, saying "no more soil lying uncultivated, no more crops rotting in the fields."

It is the voice of Sybil Andrews, housewife in Milwaukee, saying "we can't hide our children in a desert. They have to live in this world, together with the other children of this world -- and not at their expense."

It is the voice of Jim Powell, negro clerk, of Saint Petersburg, Florida, saying "A man's right to work has got to be as natural as his right to breathe -- and that can only be when we have peace everywhere -- all over the world" It's the voice of the Secretary of the United States Treasury saying "oceans can no longer keep us from being neighbors in the world community. Freedoms from fear and want will be realized only as a solid foundation of world prosperity."

Has come up under the foregoing speech.

They are all there. But -- their crops and equipment have been swept away. They have even lost their seed-corn.

In pre-war America, a small number of factories, small power plants, for use in rural areas to which industrial electricity had not yet extended. During the war, since each anti-aircraft unit requires one of these generators, the factories have made over a million. After hostilities cease, there will be on hand a million generators which you and I have bought and paid for. Yes and I don't need them, and if we could sell them on the American market the present manufacturers will be forced to close up shop and ask their employees to come back a hundred years from now, but to the people of Yugoslavia, Belgium, France, Greece, Russia, India, China -- in all the devastated or undeveloped areas of the world -- these generators would bring desperately needed light and power. Here maintenance of half a million generators would employ more Americans than were needed to manufacture the total pre-war 25,000, and as the generators wear out the demand for replacements would boost employment to highest wartime levels and keep it there. Every owner of a generator would be in the market for American electric light bulbs, washing machines, irons, vacuum cleaners, and radios. And I tell you that generators are only one out of 25,000 such industries which may become economic foodstuffs. You will see what I mean when I say that helping the rest of the world to its feet will help us to prosperity.

The need of the people in war-torn countries exceed anything one's imagination can now conceive. Their homes, transportation systems, factories, power plants, bridges, ports, and harbor installations that were a thousand years in developing are now in ruins. They must have help.

As being a businessman myself, I have never advocated giving away anything, and I do not favor making inordinate gifts abroad now. But it is poor business tactics not to sell a man seed-corn on time. The people of the world are still a good credit risk. They prefer a "lay-down" to a "hassle." All they ask is enough credit for a fair start. The means to give them the "lay-down" and ourselves a post-war market was agreed upon at Bretton Woods. The proposal is for an international bank to guarantee loans for deserving projects, much as the Federal ...

My dear Mr. Secretary:

As you know, SHAPE has asked the Treasury Department, as a matter of urgency, to send financial experts to assist in work necessary to the institution and effective administration of its financial program in Germany. Because of the importance which the theater command places on this operation, I am arranging for the immediate assignment to the Finance Division of SHAPE of a group of Treasury people who have assisted in the development and administration of this country's wartime financial controls.

My ability to fulfill this request is limited by the fact that a large number of our employees who have had seasonal experience in the type of work for which SHAPE is requesting immediate assistance are at present in the armed services. Attached is a list containing the names of several former employees of the Treasury Department who are among the best qualified to meet SHAPE's urgent needs and who are now serving with the Army. Because of the urgent need for men of these qualifications, I hereby request that those named on the attached list be immediately released from military duty and returned to civilian status for assignment to the Treasury group that is proceeding to SHAPE Headquarters. I think you will agree that in such an assignment they can from here on make their maximum contribution to the war effort.

In view of the time factor, your immediate consideration of this matter will be appreciated. I suggest that the person designated by you to handle the matter work out the details of the transfer with Mr. Otis A. Schmidt, Director of Foreign Funds Control, who is handling this matter for the Treasury Department.

Sincerely yours,

Dear Henry:

Thank you so much for writing such a nice letter to the employees of the Office of Surplus Property. I hope that we shall be able to do a good job with this new organization. It is more complicated than I realized and the Congressman have already been coming in to see us.

I had a nice meeting with the Board on Saturday and am hopeful that we can do a really constructive job.

Sincerely yours,

ORDER PURSUANT TO EXECUTIVE ORDER NO. 9641

Pursuant to the provisions of Executive Order No. 9641 of April 19, 1946, it is hereby ordered, effective May 1, 1946, as follows:

1. The personnel (including positions), funds, property, contracts (including leases), and records of the Procurement Division of the Department of the Treasury, listed in Schedules A to G, inclusive, attached or to be attached to this order, are determined to be engaged or used primarily in, or to relate primarily to, the administration of the functions, powers, and duties of the Department of the Treasury as a disposal agency under the Surplus Property Act, and are hereby transferred to the Department of Commerce for use in connection with the exercise and performance of such functions, powers, and duties. Transfers of personnel shall carry with them accrued annual and sick leave benefits. Re-employment obligations to personnel listed in Schedule A as on inactive military furlough are assumed by the Department of Commerce in accordance with section 4 of War Service Regulation XIII, as amended, by the Civil Service Commission.

2. It is recognized that time limitations do not permit the preparation of complete and final schedules at this time. Accordingly, the schedules hereinafter attached will from time to time be amended to such extent and in such respects as the Secretary of the Treasury and the Secretary of Commerce deem appropriate, until such time as the separation of the Office of Surplus Property from the Procurement Division is completed. The determinations required by paragraph 2 of Executive Order No. 9641 shall be deemed to have been made with respect to such amendment.

3. In the amendment of the schedules hereinafter attached, and until such schedules have been finally completed, the following shall be observed:

(a) A date for the completion of all transfers pursuant to Executive Order No. 9641, hereinafter referred to as the 'closing date', shall be determined by authorized representatives of the Secretary of the Treasury and the Secretary of Commerce for each departmental and field office of the Procurement Division.

(b) Until the closing date in each office otherwise proper payments of salary to employees in such office shall continue to be made from the appropriation chargeable prior to the effective date of this order. Adjustments between the applicable appropriations shall from time to time be made so as to reflect the transfer of all personnel as of May 1, 1946.

(c) The physical segregation of expendable property shall take place in each office on or before the closing date.

(d) Non-expendable property available for use exclusively by transferred personnel prior to the effective date of this order shall be transferred with such personnel.

(e) All automotive equipment procured from funds transferred pursuant to Executive Order No. 9641 shall be transferred to the Department of Commerce.
(1) Supplies and equipment, including automotive equipment in the District of Columbia, which prior to the effective date of this order has been available for use jointly in the disposal of property under the Surplus Property Act and in other functions of the Procurement Division may continue to be so used until the closing date in each office.

(2) Otherwise proper payments under contracts and leases covering continuing services, equipment rental, and rental of space shall continue to be made from the appropriation chargeable prior to the effective date of this order until the closing date in each office. Where such facilities are utilized jointly in the disposal of property under the Surplus Property Act and in functions remaining in the Procurement Division, adjustments between the applicable appropriations shall from time to time be made so as to reflect the transfer of such facilities as of May 1, 1948.

(b) At the time of the closing date in each office, supplies, equipment, and contracts and leases subject to subparagraph (g) hereof that have been used jointly in the disposal of property under the Surplus Property Act and in other functions of the Procurement Division shall be fairly apportioned between the Procurement Division and the Department of Commerce in accordance with the standard of primary use established by paragraph 2 of Executive Order No. 9041.

4. To the extent not otherwise provided for herein, and until otherwise agreed by the Secretary of the Treasury and the Secretary of Commerce, the Department of the Treasury and the Department of Commerce shall supply and render, each to the other, materials, supplies, equipment, work, and services in accordance with paragraph 3 of Executive Order No. 9041. To the extent feasible payment therefor shall be made by periodic adjustments between applicable appropriations on the basis of the net difference between the costs borne by the respective appropriations, computed on an actual cost basis or on the basis of fair estimates of costs. Reimbursement for duplicating and distribution services performed by the Duplicating and Distribution Branch of the Procurement Division, however, shall be made in accordance with adjustment vouchers submitted by that branch on the basis of its published price schedules and rules and regulations.

Subject: Lend-Lease Accounting in Treasury Procurement

For some time we have been receiving alarming reports regarding the Lend-Lease accounting operation carried on in the Procurement Division. There exists a tremendous backlog of work in some operations, and substantial discrepancies in others.

From the standpoint of the Treasury Department, perhaps the strongest charge against the present setup is illustrated by this statement in a recent report from the man in charge of the operation: "When the final statements are prepared for reconciliation with those of the countries involved, it will be very embarrassing to find that their records are more accurate than ours." The time for a termination accounting is rapidly approaching and it seems imperative that we make every effort to get the house in order at once. The Fiscal Service has supplied personnel, on detail, to Procurement to aid in solving this problem. Unfortunately, up to now they have not supplied a force for a period of time sufficient to do the job. Under the terms of Reorganization Plan III the Fiscal Service has the responsibility for seeing to it that this accounting job in Procurement is performed properly.

I strongly urge that the Fiscal Assistant Secretary be asked to detail such personnel as may be necessary to work on the accounting system of the Finance Division of Treasury Procurement. My office will supply assistance on organizational changes and personnel improvement.

OAT April 30, 1945

To: Secretary Morgenthau
From: Mr. Katz
Subject: The Business Situation
Week ending April 28, 1945

Summary

Industrial production: Industrial output was maintained at a high level in March, and the FED adjusted index of production showed no change from the previous month at 73%. Production output during March slightly exceeded schedule for the first time since the war began. Iron and steel output showed substantial increase, but shipbuilding activity was curtailed.

Employment: Factory employment declined about 1 percent in March, largely due to decreases in shipbuilding and other war industries. However, total non-agricultural employment increased moderately, partly because of increased employment in trade necessitated by heavy war-Easter retail buying. Despite the gain over the previous month, non-agricultural employment was about 75,000 less than in March 1940. Nevertheless, during the intervening years the armed forces showed a net increase of 1,250,000.

Reconversion: Recent developments have clearly indicated that the trend of war production schedule is downward and that V-2-Day adjustments are already under way. As a step in facilitating the adjustment of industry to a one-front war basis, the AFR has restored the cost authorization program for civilian goods production on a nation-wide basis.

Prices: Commodity prices last week continued to show gradually rising tendencies, with the Dow-Jones futures index touching a new high since early February. The BLS cost-of-living index showed a small decrease in March as a result of a moderate reduction in food prices. However, clothing prices have further and the cost of housefurnishings increased slightly.

Stock market: Stock prices rose to a new high for the year last week in active trading. With the Dow-Jones average of 65 stocks at the close on Saturday standing about 2 percent above week-earlier levels. Industrial stock prices in London also continued to rise.

Industrial output maintained at high level in March

Despite a further curtailment in shipbuilding, industrial output maintained at a high level and the FED adjusted index of industrial production showed no change from the previous month at 73%. This is the highest figure attained since last May and compares with the wartime peak of 247 reached in the fall of 1942. Factory output, unadjusted for seasonal variation, likewise held steady at the February level and was slightly higher than in the late fall and early winter. (See Chart 1.)

Iron and steel production rose substantially in March, while output of most nonferrous metals, anthracite coal and crude petroleum also showed gains. On the other hand, the important transportation equipment group of industries showed a further decline in output, largely in reflection of the curtailment in shipbuilding. Production at automobile plants also declined moderately, but aircraft output was maintained at February levels.

The production of nonmetallic goods maintained a very steady rate last month, and was slightly above last year's level. Production of motor vehicles as rayon textiles and shoes was greater than in March 1940, and output of manufactured foods was only slightly lower. Textiles, however, dropped 25 percent below the corresponding March last year. Crude petroleum output reached a record high, but coal output lagged and showed a further decline in the early part of April as a result of unauthorized work stoppages.

Reconversion plans above schedule

Reconversion plans in March rose above the previous month and reached the highest level since last October. However, for the first time since the war began, actual output slightly exceeded schedule. Nevertheless, employment in the munitions industries declined in March, and was largely responsible for a reduction in total factory employment of 11,000, or about 1 percent, below that in February. (Refer to Chart 1.) Employment in the transportation equipment group of industries dropped 65,000, and was 30 percent below the previous year's level. Except for gains in the nonferrous metals and chemical industries, all major munitions industries showed employment declines.

In addition to the reduced employment in the munitions industries in March, noticeable decreases also occurred in the food industries group and in the textile mill products.
Seasonal lay-offs and a continued shortage of labor were factors in the decline in the food group, while the drop at textile mills was attributed to the return of transient workers to farm and the difficulty of recruiting labor in the face of more favorable wage scales in many other industries.

Total nonagricultural employment increases moderately

Despite the decline in factory employment and a further small drop in mining, total nonagricultural employment last month was 62,000 higher than in February. The principal factor in the rise was an increase in employment in trade caused by large retail buying for Easter. However, all other major industry divisions, such as transportation and public utilities, construction, etc., also showed employment gains. Nevertheless, total nonagricultural employment of approximately 36 million in March was still about 75,000 less than a year earlier. This decline compares with a net increase of about 1,250,000 in the armed forces during the same period.

V-E Day adjustments getting under way

With munitions output finally rising slightly above scheduled requirements, and organized German resistance weakening rapidly, the VEB made it clear last week that the trend of war-production schedules is now downward, and V-E Day adjustments are already under way. Among other significant developments it was revealed that the Army has adopted a policy of cancelling plant expansions that will not be needed if the war is over and that cannot be completed by September 1. Also, planned peaks for small arms ammunition, medium artillery, and mortar ammunition have been reduced. The quarter schedule for tanks has been cut substantially and will be reduced further at the end of the war. Schedules for certain types of aircraft have been reduced to a one-front war basis. As the Maritime Commission recently announced, the cancellation of contracts for 30 of 136 tankers which had been scheduled for completion.

Rationing plan for civilian goods production restored

Under the pressure of heavy war production demands, the rationing plan for civilian goods production was restored with some exceptions. In Group I and Group II labor shortage areas, since last December. In view of the fact that the last 50 monthly production plans had shown 157 areas in Group I or Group II, a large majority of civilian goods should be benefited by the action taken by the VEB.

The most important plan to be carried out is viewed as a helpful step-one measure to facilitate recovery until existing controls over steel, copper and other important materials can be substantially revised. In this connection, an official of the VEB revealed last week that aluminum is expected to be released from controls within a few days. If such action is taken, aluminum producers will be free to fill civilian orders at will, provided essential military requirements are met.

Under the circumstances industry lifted

Another development in the trend toward relaxation of controls is seen in the elimination last week of restrictive controls on manufacture of telephone instruments and installation of telegraph and teletypewriter service. In announcing the relaxation, the Office of War Utilities indicated that estimated applications for telephone service during the remainder of 1945 totalled 7,500,000, whereas current production schedules for telephone sets would supply only 1,200,000 instruments. Following the action, an official of the American Telephone and Telegraph Company indicated that the company would manufacture additional telephones to the extent conditions permit. However, it was pointed out that installation for one or two districts will be limited to as many applicants as have been able to secure telephones and this has been due to lack of workingm, control office equipment, and other facilities as well as telephone instruments.

Recently the vice president in charge of operations and engineering of the American Telephone and Telegraph Company estimated that gross expenditures of the company in the 6 years following the war would exceed $35 billion, representing favorable business conditions. Of this amount, $1 billion is expected to be spent quickly in an initial program. Nearly one-third of this initial expenditure is to be used to fill the backlog for equipment.
Stock prices rise to new high

Following the substantial gains of the previous week, stock prices moved up to new highs for the year last week in active trading. Although railroad stocks continued to pace the rise, industrial and utility stocks scored further gains and at the close on Saturday the Dow-Jones average of 30 stocks was about 2 percent above week-earlier levels. (See Chart 1.) As measured by this average, stock prices now stand about 3 percent above the earlier 1946 high reached in the early part of March. Moreover, the industrial stock average has reached the highest level since September 1937, while the railroad stock average is at the highest level since May 1947.

The rise in stock prices in the United States continues to be accompanied by a steady upward in industrial stock prices in London. (See Chart 1.) Although in recent weeks stock prices in NY have been rising somewhat faster than in London, it should be noted that the London industrial stock average now stands above both the 1928 and 1929 peaks.

Commodity prices rising

Commodity prices last week were generally firm with a rising tendency. In the futures markets, grain and cotton were higher, raising the Dow-Jones futures index to a new high since early February. In the spot markets, most commodities remained unchanged at ceiling prices, but corn, steers, and cotton advanced, while wheat was reduced by an EPA order rolling back the manufacturer's ceiling price. As a result of these divergent price changes the MBA index of basic commodity prices showed a net advance of 0.1 percent for the week, reaching within its recent narrow range. (See Chart 1.)

The MBA all-commodity index in the week ended April 21 advanced 0.1 percent as a result of further increases in prices of farm products. The all-commodity index is now 1.5 percent higher than at this time last year, while farm products are 5.6 percent higher.

Cost-of-living index slightly lower

A further moderate decline in food prices caused an additional slight reduction in the MBA cost-of-living index in March, according to confidential figures just received. (See Chart 2.) The lower food costs, however, were partly offset by a further advance in clothing prices, and by a slight rise in costs of house furnishings.

In view of the advance in wholesale prices of farm products and foods since March, the cost-of-living index for April may be somewhat higher.

Auto industry will need textiles

An important factor in the reconversion of the automobile industry will be the availability of textiles used in automobile manufacture, according to SPF officials and industry representatives. It was brought out at a recent Detroit conference that the necessary textile fabrics must be on hand about 60 days before the first autos are turned out, in order to get production started on seat cushions, upholstery, etc.

To obtain these fabrics, a major problem will be to increase the labor force at textile mills, since in recent years the high wages paid in war plants, together with the draft and other factors, have depleted the supply of mill labor. As a consequence, the output of cotton mills (as measured by the mill consumption of cotton) has been declining since March 1943. (See Chart 2.) While cotton output has increased seasonally last Month, the total of 285,000 bales was lower than in any March of the previous 5 years.

World textile shortage foreseen

The recent shortage of civilian textiles in the United States is part of a developing world-wide shortage. The available world supply of cotton textiles in 1946 was 1.550,000,000 yards below world requirements, according to a statement issued last week by the Combined Production and Resources Board, which WPA Chairman Fugate is the United States representative. The liberation of Europe has created a serious immediate problem, which will continue until production is restored in the mills of Continental Europe. Textiles are needed not only for short-term relief, but more generally to enable the people of liberated areas to contribute more effectively toward reconstruction in their own countries, as well as toward prosecution of the war against Japan. A further textile problem will arise with the liberation of the Philippines, the Dutch East Indies, and other Far East areas, which before the war formed the world's largest import base for cotton textiles.

In addition to the present shortage of textiles for civilians, the armed forces have had difficulty in obtaining needed supplies. The urgent needs of the Army in December 1944 caused the assignment of a group of Army officers and about 1,000 men with full experience to help step up the production of duck and trench cloth. The War Labor Board recently took action to raise minimum wages in the textile industry as one means of increasing production.

The textile shortage is developing at a time when the world supply of cotton is so large that it threatens to become burdensome. Data presented at a recent international cotton conference in Washington indicated that cotton-producing countries will have about 20 million bales available for export in the 1946-47 season, while the prospective absorption by importing countries will be no more than 15 million bales and may be as low as 5 million.

In the United States, the total stock of cotton at the beginning of April amounted to 14.5 million bales, as compared with a pre-war 5-year average (already high) of 11.3 million. Domestic consumption and exports last season amounted to 11.3 million bales. More than half of the present stock is held by the government, either under outright ownership or as collateral for loans. Government holdings at the beginning of April (including 1.9 million bales acquired under the Purchase Program initiated last year) totalled 8.4 million bales, leaving a "free" stock of 6.1 million.

Department store sales resume rise

Following a sharp rise in department store sales in March, which lifted the FUB adjusted index of sales to the highest level on record at 254 (1935=100), sales dropped sharply in the first half of April. However, the decline in the first week of the month was attributable to the customary lull in buying immediately after Easter, while sales in the second week of the month were adversely affected by store closings after the death of President Roosevelt.

Department store sales in the week ended April 21, with normal conditions again operative, were 15 percent above year-earlier levels. This compares with a cumulative sales gain of 14 percent for the year.

(See Chart 7.) All Federal Reserve districts participated in the sales gains in that week, with increases ranging from 15 percent in the Richmond district to 27 percent in the St. Louis district.

MEMORANDUM

Application of Economic and Financial Sanctions against Potential Belligerents

Assuming that the use of financial and economic sanctions is the last alternative to the use of military force, simultaneous application by all members of the World Security Council of the following sanctions would provide effective deterrents to acts of aggression:

(a) Immediate embargo on exports-import trade. Probably the most effective sanction is an embargo on trade with the potential belligerent. Embargoes may be partial involving only certain commodities or they may be complete, depending upon the nature of the potential belligerent's economy. In any embargo, however, emphasis should be placed on exports. The initial step should be an immediate embargo on exports of all commodities and supplies considered essential to military operations (e.g., oil, rubber, steel, munitions, arrears, machine tools, etc.). If the export embargo is to be complete, there could then be an embargo on exports of consumer goods (e.g., food, textiles, etc.).

There need be no immediate embargo on imports, provided all payments therefor are blocked. In general, the principal purpose of an embargo on imports or of controlling the payments would be to prevent the potential belligerent from obtaining foreign exchange for making purchases not restricted under the terms of the embargo, or purchases from countries not aligned by the terms of the embargo. Where the economy of the particular country is highly dependent upon its export trade, an import embargo would, of course, be particularly effective.

When countries are asked to impose an embargo on trade with the offending country, some countries will inevitably suffer more than others. Certain countries may not be able to purchase essential commodities from the country on whom sanctions have been imposed, either because of the terms of the embargo or because of retaliatory action by the country itself. If the essential commodity is not in plentiful supply in other countries, it may be necessary to allocate the world supply in some equitable manner. This could be worked out by the proposed International Trade Organization under the Social and Economic Council. But even if supplies can be purchased elsewhere, a country may not have sufficient foreign exchange because of the loss of its export market in the country on which sanctions are being applied. In this case, the Security Council might call upon the Fund and the Bank to supply the necessary foreign exchange credits for such purchases.

(b) Immediate freeze of assets. Although freezing controls could be applied in progressive steps to achieve increasing severity, it would appear desirable to achieve the greatest effect as quickly as possible. This could be accomplished by simultaneous application of the following measures:

In addition to the measures outlined above, a country might use its own resources to impose economic sanctions on the potential belligerent. Such measures might include:

- Closing of doors to potential belligerent and its nationals who are not residents of United Nations countries.
- Issuance of a freeze on assets of all residents and nationals of the potential belligerent in the United States or United Nations countries.
- Prohibition of all purchases of military equipment or other goods or services from the potential belligerent.
- Prohibition of all exports to the potential belligerent.
- Prohibition of all imports from the potential belligerent.
- Prohibition of all financial transactions with the potential belligerent.
- Prohibition of all military training or assistance to the potential belligerent.
- Prohibition of all travel to the potential belligerent.

These measures would be effective in disrupting the potential belligerent's economy and preventing it from gaining access to the resources of other countries.
(a) Suspension of all cable, telecommunication and wireless service.

(b) Prohibition against any form of postal communication. This could be accomplished by instructions to the Post Office Department to hold or return to sender any letters addressed to the potential belligerent's territory.

(c) Termination of all shipping facilities including:

(1) The immobilization of all ships owned by the potential belligerent;

(II) Prohibition against any ship stopping at the ports of the belligerent, except for the purpose of carrying out (d) below;

(III) Prohibition against any ship owned by the belligerent stopping at ports of any member country.

(d) The aforementioned sanctions on shipping would, of course, have to be integrated with any sanctions imposed upon export-import trade.

(e) It would be the stated policy of the World Security Council that it will determine and assess the costs and penalties to be imposed upon any nation or potential aggressor. These would be divided into:

(a) The cost to the World Security Council for any measures which it had to take in order to prevent aggression:

(1) The costs incurred by the member countries in combating aggression, and

(II) The damages sustained by the member countries as a result of the aggression;

(b) Penalties:

(1) Forfeiture of assets, and

(II) The supplying of men and material to rebuild or replace damaged property, or other punitive measures.

While these are not strictly preventive measures, they would indicate that an act of aggression may be very costly for the aggressor and to that extent should be an effective deterrent.

In connection with the foregoing, the World Security Council should have authority to apply all or any of the above sanctions against any country, whether a member or non-member, which in any way supports or deals with the potential belligerent. In addition, each member of the World Security Council should make evasion of any of the above sanctions by any of its citizens a criminal violation with severe criminal penalties.

It is of course possible to apply the above suggested sanctions singly or in combination or adapt them to achieve various degrees of severity, depending upon the circumstances surrounding each case. Obviously, however, it is essential that whatever measures are taken have to be taken by all members of the Council, if the measures are to be effective.

I. IMMEDIATE EMBARGO ON EXPORT-IMPORT TRADE. PROBABLY THE MOST EFFECTIVE SANCTION IS AN EMBARGO ON TRADE WITH THE POTENTIAL

COMMODITIES OR THEY MAY BE COMPLETE DEPENDING UPON THE NATURE OF
THE POTENTIAL BELLIGERENTS ECONOMY. IN ANY EMBARGO, HOWEVER, EMPHASIS

CONSIDERED ESSENTIAL TO MILITARY OPERATIONS /E.G., OIL, RUBBER, STEEL, MUNITIONS, ARMAMENTS, MACHINE TOOLS, ETC./. IF THE EXPORT EMBARGO IS TO BE COMPLETE, THERE COULD THEN BE AN EMBARGO ON EXPORTS OF CONSUMER GOODS /E.G., FOOD, TEXTILES, ETC./.

THERE NEED BE NO IMMEDIATE EMBARGO ON IMPORTS, PROVIDED ALL
PAYMENTS THEREFOR ARE BLOCKED. IN GENERAL, THE PRINCIPAL PURPOSE OF AN EMBARGO ON IMPORTS OR OF CONTROLLING THE PAYMENTS WOULD BE

WHEN COUNTRIES ARE ASKED TO IMPOSE AN EMBARGO ON TRADE WITH THE OFFENDING COUNTRY, SOME COUNTRIES WILL INEVITABLY SUFFER MORE THAN OTHERS. CERTAIN COUNTRIES MAY NOT BE ABLE TO PURCHASE ESSENTIAL
COMMODITIES FROM THE COUNTRY ON WHOM SANCTIONS HAVE BEEN IMPOSED, EITHER BECAUSE OF THE TERMS OF THE EMBARGO OR BECAUSE OF RETALIATORY ACTION BY THE COUNTRY ITSELF. IF THE ESSENTIAL COMMODITY IS NOT IN PLENTIFUL SUPPLY IN OTHER COUNTRIES, IT MAY BE NECESSARY TO ALLOCATE
THE WORLD SUPPLY IN SOME EQUITABLE MANNER. THIS COULD BE WORKED OUT BY THE PROPOSED INTERNATIONAL TRADE ORGANIZATION UNDER THE SOCIAL AND ECONOMIC COUNCIL. BUT EVEN IF SUPPLIES CAN BE PURCHASED
ELSEWHERE, A COUNTRY MAY NOT HAVE SUFFICIENT FOREIGN EXCHANGE
BECAUSE OF THE LOSS OF ITS EXPORT MARKET IN THE COUNTRY ON WHICH SANCTIONS ARE BEING APPLIED. IN THIS CASE, THE SECURITY COUNCIL
MIGHT CALL UPON THE FUND AND THE BANK TO SUPPLY THE NECESSARY
FOREIGN EXCHANGE CREDITS FOR SUCH PURCHASES.

/2/ IMMEDIATE FREEZE OF ASSETS. ALTHOUGH FREEZING CONTROLS
CAN BE APPLIED IN PROGRESSIVE STEPS TO ACHIEVE INCREASING SEVERITY,
IT WOULD APPEAR DESIRABLE TO ACHIEVE THE GREATEST EFFECT AS QUICKLY
AS POSSIBLE. THIS COULD BE ACCOMPLISHED BY SIMULTANEOUS APPLICATION OF THE FOLLOWING MEASURES

/A/ FREEZING OF ALL ASSETS OF THE POTENTIAL BELLIGERENT
AND ITS NATIONALS RESIDENT OUTSIDE OF COOPERATING UNITED NATIONS
COUNTRIES. THOSE NATIONALS RESIDENT WITHIN COOPERATING UNITED NATIONS COUNTRIES SHOULD BE EXCLUDED IN ORDER TO AVOID THE ADMINISTRATIVE DIFFICULTIES WHICH WOULD BE INVOLVED IN LICENSING THEIR ACTIVITIES. PARTICULARLY OBJECTIONABLE CASES COULD, OF COURSE, BE HANDLED ON AN AD HOC BASIS.

/B/ APPLICATION OF STRINGENT LICENSELING POLICIES TO FINANCIAL TRANSACTIONS INVOLVING THE GOVERNMENT AND NATIONALS

/D/ SUSPENSION OR PROHIBITION AGAINST ALL COLD TRANSFERS INVOLVING THE GOVERNMENT AND NATIONALS FROZEN UNDER /A/ ABOVE.

/E/ PROHIBITION AGAINST ALL DEALINGS IN CURRENCY AND SECURITIES OF THE POTENTIAL BELLIGERENT AND DELISTING OF ITS SECURITIES FROM ALL EXCHANGES.

/F/ RECOMMENDATION TO THE INTERNATIONAL MONETARY FUND AND THE INTERNATIONAL BANK FOR RECONSTRUCTION AND DEVELOPMENT TO TAKE APPROPRIATE ACTION WITH RESPECT TO THE OFFENDING COUNTRY. IF THE COUNTRY IS A MEMBER OF THE BANK, THE BANK MIGHT REFUSE TO MAKE OR GUARANTEE ANY LOANS TO THAT COUNTRY ON THE GROUNDS THAT LOANS MADE UNDER SUCH CIRCUMSTANCES WOULD NOT BE IN ACCORD WITH THE PURPOSES OF THE BANK AND WOULD BE PREJUDICIAL TO ITS INTERESTS. SIMILARLY, THE FUND MIGHT SUSPEND THE OFFENDING COUNTRY FROM THE USE OF ITS RESOURCES OR EVEN ASK THE COUNTRY TO WITHDRAW. CERTAINLY A COUNTRY WHICH ACTED IN SUCH MANNER THAT THE SECURITY COUNCIL FOUND IT NECESSARY TO APPLY SANCTIONS WOULD BE ACTING CONTRARY TO THE PURPOSES OF THE FUND, AND IF TRADE SANCTIONS WERE APPLIED IT WOULD BE PREJUDICIAL TO THE FUNDS INTERESTS TO SELL FOREIGN EXCHANGE TO THAT COUNTRY. ONCE THE COUNTRY WERE REQUIRED TO WITHDRAW FROM THE FUND, MEMBERS WOULD BE FREE TO IMPOSE
/X/ REVOCATION OF ALL OUTSTANDING PRIVATE OR PUBLIC CREDITS AND PROHIBIT EXTENSION OF NEW CREDITS IN FAVOR OF THE GOVERNMENT AND NATIONALS FROZEN UNDER /A/ ABOVE.

/B/ SUSPENSION OR PROHIBITION AGAINST ALL GOLD TRANSFERS INVOLVING THE GOVERNMENT AND NATIONALS FROZEN UNDER /A/ ABOVE.

/C/ PROHIBITION AGAINST ALL DEALINGS IN CURRENCY AND SECURITIES OF THE POTENTIAL BELLIGERENT AND DELISTING OF ITS SECURITIES FROM ALL EXCHANGES.

/D/ RECOMMENDATION TO THE INTERNATIONAL MONETARY FUND AND THE INTERNATIONAL BANK FOR RECONSTRUCTION AND DEVELOPMENT TO TAKE APPROPRIATE ACTION WITH RESPECT TO THE OFFENDING COUNTRY. ONCE THE COUNTRY WERE REQUIRED TO WITHDRAW FROM THE FUND, MEMBERS WOULD BE FREE TO IMPOSE RESTRICTIONS ON EXCHANGE DEALINGS WITH THAT COUNTRY.

/E/ CESSATION OF COMMUNICATIONS AND TRANSPORTATION, THE PURPOSE OF THIS SANCTION WOULD BE TO COMPLETELY ISOLATE THE POTENTIAL BELLIGERENT FROM THE OUTSIDE WORLD. WHILE IT IS NOT STRICTLY AN ECONOMIC OR FINANCIAL SANCTION, IT WOULD CLEARLY HAVE ECONOMIC CONSEQUENCES. IN THIS CONNECTION THE FOLLOWING MEASURES COULD BE TAKEN:

/F/ SUSPENSION OF ALL CABLE, TELECOMMUNICATION AND WIRELESS SERVICE.

/G/ PROHIBITION AGAINST ANY FORM OF POSTAL COMMUNICATION. THIS COULD BE ACCOMPLISHED BY INSTRUCTIONS TO THE POST OFFICE DEPARTMENT TO HOLD OR RETURN TO SENDER ANY LETTERS ADDRESSED TO THE POTENTIAL BELLIGERENTS TERRITORY.

/H/ TERMINATION OF ALL SHIPPING FACILITIES INCLUDING
ECONOMIC OR FINANCIAL SANCTION, IT WOULD CLEARLY HAVE ECONOMIC CONSEQUENCES. IN THIS CONNECTION THE FOLLOWING MEASURES COULD BE TAKEN

/N/ SUSPENSION OF ALL CABLE, TELECOMMUNICATION AND WIRELESS SERVICE.

/N/A/ PROHIBITION AGAINST ANY FORM OF POSTAL COMMUNICATION. THIS COULD BE ACCOMPLISHED BY INSTRUCTIONS TO THE POST OFFICE DEPARTMENT TO HOLD OR RETURN TO SENDER ANY LETTERS ADDRESSED TO THE POTENTIAL BELLIGERENTS TERRITORY.

/N/C/ TERMINATION OF ALL SHIPPING FACILITIES INCLUDING

/N/II/ PROHIBITION AGAINST ANY SHIP STOPPING AT THE PORTS OF THE BELLIGERENT, EXCEPT FOR THE PURPOSE OF CARRYING OUT /N/D/ BELOW

/N/III/ PROHIBITION AGAINST ANY SHIP OWNED BY THE BELLIGERENT STOPPING AT PORTS OF ANY MEMBER COUNTRY, /N/D/ THE AFOREMENTIONED SANCTIONS ON SHIPPING WOULD, OF COURSE, HAVE TO BE INTEGRATED WITH ANY SANCTIONS IMPOSED UPON EXPORT-IMPORT TRADE.

/N/5/ IT SHOULD BE THE STATED POLICY OF THE WORLD SECURITY COUNCIL THAT IT WILL DETERMINE AND ASSESS THE COSTS AND PENALTIES TO BE IMPOSED UPON ANY ACTUAL OR POTENTIAL AGRESSOR. THESE WOULD BE DIVIDED INTO

/N/A/ THE COST TO THE WORLD SECURITY COUNCIL FOR ANY MEASURES WHICH IT HAD TO TAKE IN ORDER TO PREVENT AGGRESSION,

/N/I/ THE COSTS INCURRED BY THE MEMBER COUNTRIES IN COMBATTING AGGRESSION, AND

/N/II/ THE DAMAGES SUSTAINED BY THE MEMBER COUNTRIES AS A RESULT OF THE AGRESSION

/N/B/ PENALTIES,

/N/I/ FORFEITURE OF ASSETS, AND

/N/II/ THE SUPPLYING OF MEN AND MATERIAL TO REBUILD OR REPLACE DAMAGED PROPERTY, OR OTHER PUNITIVE MEASURES.
That it shall determine and assess the costs and penalties to be imposed upon any actual or potential aggressor. These would be divided into:

/1/ The cost to the World Security Council for any measures which it had to take in order to prevent aggression.

/1/ The damages sustained by the member countries as a result of the aggression.

/2/ Penalties.

A-479, April 30, 1945

For the Department, NBI and Earl Harrison,
United States Representative on BIC.

Sir Herbert Emerson, Director of the Intergovernmental Committee on Refugees wrote on April 27, 1945, that he would be grateful if the approval of the Government of the United States of America can be granted to the expenditure proposed in his memorandum of the same date which reads as follows:

"1. In my memorandum of the 8th December, 1944, I proposed, in connection with the extension of the Credit Scheme, the allotment of 300,000 dollars each for Romania, Hungary, and 50,000 for Italy. These allotments were for the last quarter of 1944 and the first quarter of 1945. In regard to Romania it was anticipated that part of the allotment might be utilised for assistance to Romanian Jews in Romania since, if they were unable to maintain themselves until they were re-established in their former callings, a large part were likely to leave their country and so become a responsibility of the Intergovernmental Committee. It was observed that:

"While the Intergovernmental Committee should be careful not to accept the maintenance of Romanian Jews in Romania as an obligation falling as a matter of course within the terms of the Credit Scheme, it is felt that if the Intergovernmental Committee, giving help to people who are living openly in their own homelands this would be liable to involve very considerable repercussions. They do not, however, press such objection on the understanding that such relief is to be maintained for a quite limited period, since they recognize that this may save the Committee from more onerous and enduring obligations".

Reverting to the considerations mentioned, which have in fact considerable weight, it is proposed that in asking a further allotment of 300,000 dollars for the second quarter of 1945, the condition be attached that this amount be devoted primarily to the relief of non-Romanian refugees now in the country.

"2. With regard to Hungary, this country has been completely liberated since the last allotment was made. So far as Hungarian Jews are concerned, the position is therefore similar to that of Romanian Jews in Romania when the last allotment was made. If anything 1t is worse, since in the two months previous to liberation, the persecution and annihilation of the Jews was worse in Hungary than in Romania, while the situation is now acute owing to the lengthy siege of Budapest. We have been informed by the Joint Distribution Committee that 80,000 out of the remaining Jewish population of 120,000 in Budapest are in very great distress, and that in addition some representatives also require assistance. We have no precise information about non-Hungarian refugees in that country. The same problems of restoration and rehabilitation exist as in Romania. On these grounds the Joint Distribution Committee has asked for a further allotment of 300,000 dollars. It is recommended that this be made on the understanding that in so far as it is required for Hungarian Jews, it will not create a precedent for the future; that such help can be given for only limited periods and that the situation will be reviewed at the end of the quarter.

1. The assistance will be given either by credits raised in Romania and Hungary respectively, or by the purchase of Ian or bonds, as the case may be, in Switzerland. There will be no insistence of sterling or dollars, and in selling purchases in Switzerland, care will be taken that these do not assist the enemy or collaborators.

2. The expenditure on the Credit Scheme originally sanctioned was 2,000,000 or 3,000,000 dollars. The allotments allotted sanctioned amount to 1,200,000 dollars, leaving a balance of 2,000,000 dollars. The allotments thus proposed are, therefore, within the scope of the original sanction. They are also within the operational budget of 2,000,000 or 3,000,000 dollars for the current year.

3. If these proposals are approved, the Allied Commission of Control in Romania and Hungary will be informed of their scope and
