HNJr: Hello.
Judge Rosenman: Hello, Henry.
HNJr: In person.
R: How is Ellie? Is Ellie up at the farm with you?
HNJr: No, no, she is still here. We haven’t been able to move her.
R: That’s what I thought. Henry, I’d like about 30 minutes with you today or tomorrow.
HNJr: Fair enough. How about three o’clock?
R: No, that’s bad. I can make it two o’clock or 2:15, right after lunch. Three I have to be here and four o’clock I have here, immediately after that or tomorrow morning.
HNJr: Well, I don’t mean – how would tomorrow morning do?
R: That’s all right.
HNJr: What time would you like to do it?
R: Ten o’clock, eleven o’clock – I’m free all morning.
HNJr: Well, let’s say eleven o’clock.
R: Fine.
HNJr: And my time is yours.
R: Thank you, I’ll be over there.
HNJr: Thank you, sir.
R: All right, boy.
HNJr: Bye.
R: Bye.

HNJr: Hello.
Secy Robert Patterson: Hello, Henry.
HNJr: Yes, Bob.
P: Well, I called you up just to chew the rug.
HNJr: Well, I’ve got lots of time anytime you want to come over.
P: Tomorrow?
HNJr: Fine.
P: Can I come over to lunch with you?
HNJr: It would be perfect. What time? One o’clock?
P: Around one o’clock?
HNJr: One o’clock.
P: I’ll be there.
HNJr: I’ll look forward to seeing you, Bob.
P: Thank you.
HNJr: All right, one o’clock.

12:12 P.M.

Mr. Ted Geible: ...telegraphed, that we had already done a mailing job on it yesterday.

HNJr: Yeah.

G: And we've arranged a press conference of our own late this afternoon for the pur - which we had originally told our boys when we had the final figures, we would have them all together. And I talked to Russell about it and told him I thought we could handle it better. We are making complete distribution on it, and that's going to constitute all of our press releases, just your statement.

HNJr: Yeah, but I meant - did my statement, has that been wired out?

G: It had not been wired out, Mr. Secretary, we mailed it out yesterday, and we planned to send excerpts of it out today but after getting your wire we sent the complete speech to the important spots. We didn't send it to the whole country.

HNJr: You didn't?

G: We did not.

HNJr: Oh. How many places did you send it?

G: Well, we'd reach over 70% of the country, Mr. Secretary, on our own telegrams.

HNJr: I see, but I know from my own experience, with states like Arizona, if you don't wire it they never get it.

G: We sent excerpts to the smaller states, and we can cover 70% of the country on our own tele- type and we can do it in a hurry, and we stay out of any telegraphic problems at all on it.

HNJr: I see.

G: See we hit every important spot in the country.

HNJr: I thought you only had ten teletypes.

G: No, we have twelve and they cover a little better than 70% of the market.

HNJr: Well, how many states is that?
GROUP

Present: Mr. D. W. Bell
Mr. C. S. Bell
Mr. Goepel
Mr. Fehl
Mr. Bartelt
Mr. Frusell
Mr. Haas
Mr. Gaston
Mr. O'Connell
Mr. Luxford
Mr. White
Mrs. Klotz

H.M.JR.: This is just a little get-together to sort of find out who wanted to see me so I could plan my afternoon. I'm going home for lunch but I'm going to be in all afternoon until broadcast time, which is seven. One of the things that I have on my mind the most I would like to talk about is the book on Germany. So I just don't know where that is.

MR. GASTON: Well, Mr. Loth left an application with Fitzgerald, I think, for an appointment today with you to tell you what shape he is in.

H.M.JR.: Well, would it be well to get those people together who are working on it at this end?

MR. GASTON: I think it would, don't you, Harry?

MR. WHITE: Yes. I spoke to him yesterday.

H.M.JR.: Well, will you gentlemen be busy around three o'clock?

MR. LUXFORD: I was supposed to see Senator Wagner for another school session, but maybe Eddle could take it. You see we spent all yesterday afternoon with him and he wants to start again at two o'clock today. It is very slow work.

If you would, please.
I'll call you right back.

Now, what does it look like on R Bonds?
Well, we can see 3,900,000,000 dollars.
Yes,

We've counted already from checks that we've made this morning - 3,900,000,000, and we don't see the last 90,000,000, but it is awfully close.

Right.

And I'm not sure that we don't look better with:
the rough goals we had with 3 billion 900 or 70 in there, than 4 billion and one, although I'd like to have it.

Right.

All right, sir.

Thank you.
H.M.JR: He is so sensitive.

MR. LUXFORD: That is what worries me.

H.M.JR: I think you had better go, Luxford. You can pick it up.

MR. LUXFORD: I think so.

MR. GASTON: I will have lunch here at three o'clock then.

H.M.JR: I can't hear, gentlemen.

MR. WHITE: Gee, I think, ought to be here.

MR. GASTON: Well, we will get together at three.

H.M.JR: The other thing I want to say is that I'm going to spend most of my time on this kind of thing. I imagine if I do this—I won't try to make any other appointment this afternoon.

MR. D.W.BELL: You want to talk about that other matter sometime. You said to do it Wednesday, but I think we have to discuss with you how far you want to go on the reorganization end. We had a meeting and were unanimously against sending the specific recommendations that you have to the President. We would like to find out how far you want to go. We understand Haas is writing a review of the twelve years. We will have to fit the two together some place.

H.M.JR: Well, I think if I do this this afternoon, I would like to spend enough time on this one thing. Are you busy tomorrow morning?

MR. D.W.BELL: I have got to attend that hearing tomorrow morning in the District Building between ten and twelve. It is on the rezoning of my property. It is rather serious to me.

H.M.JR: You should want television out there.

MR. D.W.BELL: I don't want any steel tower in my back yard though. (Laughter)

H.M.JR: Well, the purpose of this meeting is to find out what you men are going to be doing.

MR. WHITE: I don't think, Mr. Secretary, that this preliminary discussion on Germany will take more than an hour at the most, or maybe a half hour. I don't know how much detail you want to go into but that would be my thought on the very first meeting. Now, that may be followed tomorrow by a much longer meeting.

H.M.JR: All right. Well, let's see Bell and that group at four o'clock. Now, John, you are invited to any of these things you would like to attend.

MR. FEENEY: I was in on the reorganization this morning. I will be here.

MR. WHITE: I think John ought to be in on the discussion about Germany.

H.M.JR: I think so too. Would you arrange a meeting for four o'clock?

MR. D.W.BELL: Everybody is here that will be at the four o'clock meeting. Mr. Haas is sick today. He ought to be here.

H.M.JR: Is anybody doing something on the War Finance?

MR. C.B.BELL: During the four o'clock meeting?

Not that I know of sir.

H.M.JR: You had better have him here. But I guess he is awfully busy this afternoon.

MR. D.W.BELL: He is working on a speech. He called me up and said that he had read over the plans, of which Eddie had sent him copies. You had a Staff meeting Saturday morning and you asked everybody to get a copy of the latest recommendations you had sent to the President.

H.M.JR: My inability to hear you is not a sign of old age. I have just been flying. (Laughter)

Mr. D.W.BELL: Well, he had read over that plan and called me and said that he did not think he could contribute much to a reorganization memorandum, not to call him on any meetings, that he is going to be tied up anyway.

H.M.JR: Yes, I will call Gamble now.

Mr. D.W.BELL: I will call him.

H.M.JR: He wanted to do a review of the war financing. Let me call him and get the thing straight.

(Secretary holds telephone conversation with Mr. Gamble.)

Mr. GASTON: I gathered at the last meeting that you had turned this whole job over to George Harms.

(Secretary holds telephone conversation with Mr. Gamble.)

Mr. GASTON: Henry would know, Henry Murphy.

H.M.JR: All right. What I have been thinking is this: I had a wonderful talk with Mrs. Roosevelt yesterday. It was a little bit here and a little bit there. She is in complete agreement as is Mrs. Morgenthau, that I should use this time not so much to get out a history of the Treasury, that will come, but to forecast what this group would like to see happen. Do you see? I would be used as a mouthpiece while we are still together. You know I sent a telegram to Blough asking whether he would come back.

Mr. D.W.BELL: He was gone about two weeks.

H.M.JR: There was a question whether we should not do something on taxes.

Mr. D.W.BELL: Certainly taxes is part of the program or part of the whole history. If you are going to write a memorandum on the accomplishments of the twelve years in office you certainly can't leave out taxes.

H.M.JR: You are thinking of future tax policy, aren't you?

Mr. D.W.BELL: Here is just an outline of the things you wanted to cover. I didn't know Harms was in the picture until just about an hour ago. (Hands Secretary Suggested Topic Outline For The Story of Secretary Morgenthau's Administration of the Treasury Department.)

H.M.JR: At four o'clock let's have everybody here. What I am talking about now is whether we want to go out and talk about whether in an all-out war we should have done so and so.

Mr. D.W.BELL: We all have some doubts as to talking about the future. When we do we want to be careful.

H.M.JR: I am going to talk about the future. That, I am determined to do. I am not going to be talked out of it, either.

Mr. D.W.BELL: You want to be a little careful about what you say.

H.M.JR: Why?

Mr. D.W.BELL: Well, you get out on a limb and say you should have done this and that, and they will say, "Well, you were in office twelve years. Why didn't you do some of the things?" You will put yourself in a rather peculiar position if you are not careful.

H.M.JR: I would like to argue that with you.

Mr. D.W.BELL: That is the reason we wanted a conference to see how far you wanted to go.

H.M.JR: God knows I tried long enough to try to get all of the state and city securities tax exempt. I tried often enough to do away with realty property returns and depletion on oil wells. The fact that I wasn't successful wasn't my fault. I think it still remains to be done.
MR. C. S. BELL: I started marking Haas already for certain of those things, and Ted Gamble for those on bonds to see what kind of report they would each furnish, and we would turn it over to Feltus and let Feltus write it out.

H.W.R.: Feltus can’t write it.

MR. GASTON: I think you have got it placed all right. I think they are accustomed to producing an annual report in George Haas’ shop; and if they want help from anybody else, we will give it to them.

H.W.R.: Henry Murphy is competent. I think that thing he did for me for the New York Times was an excellent thing. Ed Fussell has turned out some things very much to my liking.

MR. GASTON: We can give them any help they want, but I think George’s shop can turn it out.

H.W.R.: Who wants something from me in the next twenty-four hours?

MR. WHITE: The only thing is, Joe has some things to report on.

MR. O’CONNELL: Of course, the perennial subject is the status of our Bretton Woods legislation. We had a meeting this morning. The discussion on the Floor of the Senate again yesterday between McCarren and Barkley.

H.W.R.: May I interrupt a minute? I get no paper up there, so for twenty-four hours I didn’t know what happened. It is a very nice feeling.

MR. O’CONNELL: We will try to take that away from you at this point.

A couple of days ago Connally indicated that he thought the Charter might reach the Senate Floor by next Monday, and that is the day the Bretton Woods legislation is scheduled to start in the Senate. Barkley has indicated that if the Charter reaches the floor by next Monday, of course, that will have the right of way over Bretton Woods or anything else. A couple of days ago Connally suggested that they take Bretton Woods legislation up this week, which was rather surprising to us, because we had been under the impression that the reason they didn’t take it up this week was because Connally and the Senate Foreign Relations Committee didn’t want anything to take away from the effect of the hearings on the Charter.

In any event, no one can possibly tell yet whether the charter will be through the Committee and reported to the Senate by next Monday. If it is, we are pretty badly off, because Bretton Woods will obviously be behind it. We had a meeting this morning at ten-thirty to discuss what we might do at this late date with respect to the fact that our Stabilization Fund expired June 30. Following that meeting I attempted to get a meeting with Spence and Wolcott preliminary to another meeting that we thought we would have with Rayburn. The purpose of it was to explore the possibility of having the House now pass a resolution extending the Stabilization Fund for three or six months on the theory that if they could do that for us within the next few days it would help, and then later if the Bretton Woods legislation bogged down and the House went home, we could then get Senate action on the extension of the Stabilization Fund only, which would help us, assuming that Bretton Woods were held over until September, because the House would be gone.

Spence was not at all sympathetic with that. He doesn’t want to do it. I couldn’t get Wolcott, and we are waiting now to see if we can’t locate Wolcott somewhere so Harry and I can have a further talk with him. I didn’t want to approach Rayburn until we had talked to Spence and Wolcott, because if we can’t get support from them, there is no use going to Rayburn. In any event, we will know better after we have talked with them. Spence felt that the Charter couldn’t possibly reach the Floor next Monday and that in that event we would still be all right on Bretton Woods. He has been trying to reach both Connally and Barkley, and he tried again to reach Barkley after I talked with him, but so far as I know it was without success, to urge them--to urge Barkley particularly. First he wants to get an idea as to whether they think the Charter will be out by next Monday, and in any event, to put in a strong word for the importance of getting Senate action on Bretton Woods from the House point of view, partly because the House, of course, is getting very restless and is apt to be gone. He told me confidentially that even for their meeting tomorrow when they are going to take up in the Banking Committee the Export-Import Bank legislation in the House--he says he can only get eight Democratic Senators out of fifteen Democratic Members to be there tomorrow. The other half have already gone home, or at least they are not available. That is the same thing that worried Maynard last week when he said that even though the House does not recess formally, it will be almost impossible to get a quorum in the House after this week.

That is not a very helpful report, but that is exactly where we stand.

H.W. JR: Somebody had the idea that we might start Wednesday.

MR. LUXFORD: Wagner called me Friday and told me that that was the plan, to start it Wednesday. But then he had this discussion with Connally, and Barkley said no, that he had already announced it was going to be next Monday. So Barkley wouldn't agree to shoving it forward.

Then apparently Connally has now changed his mind again, and there is apparently a real effort to try to get the Charter through by this week. If that happens, Wagner says he is licked so far as getting Bretton Woods ahead of the Charter. He does think that if he can get Bretton Woods started Monday they won't interrupt it to take care of the Charter, but it all depends on whether the Charter is ready by Monday and Barkley refuses to go forward until Monday.

Now, Tobey and Wagner are seeing Barkley again today to see if they can't change his mind. Wagner isn't very strong.

HMJr: Hello.
Mr. Ted: Hello, Mr. Secretary.
HMJr: Look, we are just working on my schedule, and I'm -- are you working on a history of the War Finance, or is it somebody over here who is working on it?
G: Over there, Mr. Secretary.
HMJr: Who?
G: George Mass's shop.
HMJr: You're not working on anything over there?
G: No, sir.
HMJr: O. K.
G: All right, sir.

Secy Forrestal: Hello.
HMJr: Jim?
F: Yes, Henry.
HMJr: Jim, I wondered whether you were free for lunch either Thursday or Friday?
F: Let me look -- I think I can make myself-either day, I've got a luncheon on Thursday, but I can - if that's more convenient, I think I can make it.
HMJr: Thursday?
F: Either one I think I can do.
HMJr: Well, you name it.
F: Let's say Thursday.
HMJr: I'll look forward around one o'clock. Is that convenient?
F: All right. How about lunch over here, the only thing I've got a couple of birds coming in at two.
HMJr: Well, make it quarter to.
F: All right.
HMJr: Would you rather quarter of?
F: All right.
HMJr: That's at quarter of one Thursday.
F: O. K., Henry.
HMJr: Just like to have a kind of a bull session.
F: Right.
HMJr: Thank you.
F: All right.

Re: THE MORGENTHAU PLAN

Present: Mr. White
Mr. Goode
Mr. Fehle
Mr. Gaston
Mr. Loth
Mrs. Klotz
Mr. Feltus

Mr. WHITE: Is this on Germany, Mr. Secretary?
If it is, I think Randolph Burgess could help us.

Mrs. KLOTZ: I thought you were going to bring in Randolph Feltus.

H.H.Jr.: This is on Germany.

Mr. GASTON: Mr. Fitzgerald, I understand, has been trying to get Loth all day and hasn't succeeded.

(Mr. Feltus enters the conference.)

H.H.Jr.: Well, where do we stand?

Mr. WHITE: I don't know whether the chat I had with Loth would be very much in point. I glanced over the document. I didn't read it thoroughly except for a few particular chapters that interested me. I don't think there are many changes called for. There are less changes necessary than I had thought. Loth apparently came to the same conclusion. There are some changes called for, but not as many as I thought would be necessary in the light of new developments.
So, I think what remains to be done is to whip it into shape as quickly as possible and get it ready.

I think that now every day's delay means something lost. The interest, I think, is most intense. Part of the articles could come out while the Big Three Meeting is going on. That would be particularly good.

Mr. GASTON: They couldn't get them out anyway. We would have to make a sale first, and it would take a month after the sale was made. It would take a month from the time you make the sale before any paper or magazine would see the light. So, I think we ought to go ahead and put the book in shape so it will be satisfactory to everybody and get a publisher, if Harper's can't find one. Then shape up a couple of magazine articles which will, I am sure, sell, and will attract future attention to the book.

Mr. WHITE: Yes. Well, I think Loth expressed himself, and he may have done so to you, that if Harper's didn't want it, and he didn't think Harper's was the best anywhere, that he had a couple of other publishers and he was certain there would be no difficulty in that direction. He also felt, and I agree, that there should be as little delay as possible, because the minimum time it would take to get the book out would be two months.

Mr. GASTON: The proposal is that this book is going to be printed as Secretary Morgenthau's book.

Mr. WHITE: That is right.

Mr. GASTON: Of course he will want to have time to read it, and perhaps carefully, and the rest of us will want to read it very carefully to see that it is really worthwhile, and the same thing would be true of the articles. Somebody should be authorized to go ahead and negotiate with the publishers.

Mr. FELTUS: Do you have an agent?

H.H.Jr.: Yes, I have Morris Ernst. He is coming in this afternoon. He said he won't bother with any agent. He likes to do it directly with the publishers.
MR. FEJTUS: I should think it is a specialized job.

H.M.JR: I know. I can't argue with Morris Ernst. He insists on doing it himself. They are the attorneys for a number of these publishers.

MR. GASTON: He has had a lot of publishing experience.

H.M.JR: I can't take it out of his hands. If I wanted an agent, I would take Mrs. Roosevelt's agent, George Bye, who is very good.

MR. FEJTUS: He is very good.

H.M.JR: I would take George Bye, but Morris has taken an awful lot of time on this thing, and he just won't have any part of an agent. If you have ever talked to him, you know he is very hard to convince.

(Mr. Lotb enters the conference.)

H.M.JR (To Mr. Lotb) We have just been in the midst of a discussion and haven't gotten anywhere. You haven't missed anything. We have been talking about an agent, and I said that Morris Ernst was in town and was coming in to see me, and when I had this discussion with him originally, he would have no part of any agent. He has spent so much time on it that I don't want to, and I don't see how you can, take any part of it out of his hands.

MR. LOTB: He is as good as any agent, and better than most.

MR. GAStON: Dave, it was my idea that a couple of magazine articles would not hurt the sale of the book, but would help it. Is that right?

MR. LOTB: That is true. I am pretty sure that is true. Mr. Hasz will agree that publication in one of the big magazines would probably help the sale of the book. I think that has been proven by a lot of cases in the past.

H.M.JR: I wouldn't know about that. Rather than discuss how we are going to publish it, I would like to get the thing in shape. I have the time now to work on it. I told Mr. Truman that when he came back I was going to publish it. I asked him if he had any objections and he said no. He said he had read the thing and he was for it.

MR. GASTON: Get him to write an introduction.

H.M.JR: I am going to ask him.

MR. WHite: He can only say no.

H.M.JR: That is right. I am going to ask him. He might say he wants to think it over.

MR. WHITE: Tell him to get his answer for the second volume.

MR. FEJTUS: Do you want any newer material in it?

H.M.JR: Somebody suggested to me that we ought to start it off with the story of a leak.

MR. FEHLE: Lamford feels that, unless there is something new, the news value isn't as good as it once was, and therefore, it ought to have something a little spectacular and new in it.

H.M.JR: But we don't know the leak. We can only say there was a leak. I don't see that there is any news value in it.

MR. WHITE: The sequence can be clear enough.

MR. FEHLE: You could give the story of how the plan came to be and the fact that there was all this public clamor and that you are now in a position to defend your position at that time.
Mr. LOTHE: My understanding was this: We talked about that with Luxford and I think you, Mr. Secretary. We thought that such a story would be an excellent foreword or preface for the book in which you would explain how the plan originated, how it leaked out, and then the body of the book itself would be what the plan is. I think that still the news value is what the plan is and how it is going to affect the settlement in Europe.

Mr. GASTON: I agree with you, with no digressions.

Mr. LOTHE: I don't think that any trick we could possibly think of would be of as much news value as just, "This is the plan."

H.A.J.: Well, I mean, just to talk out loud a minute, we could talk about White and I flying over in the plane and he saying, "Mr. Morgenthau, here is a plan that Volksky had in his committee, on July 4th, and I didn't want to pass on it without talking to you about it." Then, there is the plan that the State Department had. White and I discussed this thing for hours, and during that discussion I talked to White about turning Germany into an agricultural country. Then, there are the various discussions that we had abroad with the people over there. We could bring in Eisenhower and the European Advisory Committee, Anthony Eden, and all that stuff, and how we gradually realized there was something wrong. So, he came back and started to develop this thing. We talked to Mr. Roosevelt and he appointed this committee. I think it is too recent. It was with Hull, Stimson, and myself, and we couldn't agree. Finally, he gave me twenty-four hours to give him a plan, which I did, and he departed with it.

Now, that is a very condensed version about the way it happened, isn't it, Harry?

Mr. WHITE: Yes. I don't think that you changed any of your ideas after you left the plane, on the basis of what the others said.

I thought your ideas were already crystallized by then, and you were just trying to get their ideas and telling them your ideas. But that is a minor detail. I think that one doesn't need to be gone into. You could begin later. You could begin, probably, with Quebec, although it is probably too early to talk about that.

I think what you can begin with is the assumption that there was a proposal and discussion among the various officials, and then on such and such a day there appeared the following story. The next day there appeared this story.

Mr. GASTON: Harry, you've two different things here. Have a plan as to treatment of Germany with the statistical and logical support for it. Then, we have the story of how he came to be of that opinion, these different episodes that occurred, and they are two different things. You can weave them into the same book, or you could use the thing in an introductory way, or you could write a magazine article which tells the story of a plan, and incidentally tells something about the plan, and then leave it to the book to discuss the plan itself, and to discuss the treatment of Germany.

Mr. WHITE: The only object that would be served, it seems to me, is a preface and should be served in a preface, is to get across two ideas. One, why the Secretary of the Treasury have any direct interest or say in this? I take it that the thought is to show that he came by his interest in this quite legitimately. That is one thing. Now, that need not require much history. It can be very simply stated in a paragraph that, as a member of such a committee, these proposals come to him for approval. Secondly, it might heighten the interest a bit, and I am less certain of that, if the occasion of the leak was explained to show that he wasn't responsible for it, and therefore implicitly defends himself against the criticism that was leveled at that time against the revelation, and (b) it might be a matter of some interest to say why he couldn't speak about it at that time.
If you do those three things—one to show that he has a legitimate official interest, and is not just buttling in, and the other, that he was not responsible for the leak—those, in my judgment, would be the only two purposes that could be served by dwelling on the subject, and at most, they should be in the preface. It certainly ought not intrude itself in the book.

I don't think he has to explain how he came to those views or the philosophy behind them, as pre-dating the material that is in there.

H.M.Jr: In my discussion Saturday with Eisenhower, about which I haven't had a chance to tell you, he immediately started off by saying, "You will remember when I met you in England a year and a half ago I told you how I felt about Germany." I said, "Yes." He said, "Well, I haven't changed one bit since then." I got the feeling, from his talk with me, that there isn't one iota of difference in his approach and mine, as far as this book goes. Mr. Truman said I could give him a copy of these two chapters.

Mr. White: A foreword from him would be better than that.

H.M.Jr: In this thing I said to General Eisenhower—this is the point of my story—I said, "I want you to know the thing that motivates me is not revenge, but peace." He said, "I am so glad to hear you say that, because all the information was just a confusion." So, I think in some way or other if we can get this over, that this is a road to peace, and not a plan for revenge, it will be good.

Mr. White: I think that is made very clear.

Mr. Peels: It could even be put in the title. I mean, "The Morgenthau Plan, the Road to Peace," or something like that.

Mr. Loin: Leave the heading on the chapter as the "Road to Peace."
MR. GASTON: There is only one position that he can take. He is in the Army, serving under a Commander-in-Chief. He does what he is ordered to do, and he can't do anything else.

H.W.Jr.: How are we going to knock this thing into final shape? Whether it is Harper or somebody else, I don't think we will have any trouble getting a publisher.

MR. LOTH: I had a couple of suggestions. One is the rather obvious one of Simon and Schuster, who do this sort of thing in a big way, and the other one is this: I think if George Brett, the President of Macmillan Company, personally got excited about this book, that he would be a good house.

MR. FELTUS: You want a house that has a reputation for promoting its books and really going all out. Harper's doesn't.

MR. LOTH: Macmillan does though, when Brett gets excited.

MR. WHITE: Random House does, doesn't it?

MR. FELTUS: They are coming up in that respect.

H.W.Jr.: Who owns Simon and Schuster now?

MR. LOTH: Marshall Field.

MR. FELTUS: The only difficulty there, of course, is that it doesn't have the little stamp on it. You might want it to come out by a solid publisher to give it a little additional coloration.

MR. GASTON: Not necessarily a conservative publisher, but a publisher who has the habit of picking books for their sale value.

H.W.Jr.: Who would that be?

MR. GASTON: Simon and Schuster would be one.

MR. WHITE: Macmillan is the most orthodox.

MR. GASTON: Macmillan would be all right if Brett wants to work on it.

MR. WHITE: What was that?

H.W.Jr.: "Forever Amber." (Laughter)

(Discussion off the record.)

H.W.Jr.: Could I make this suggestion: That we leave the publisher up to Morris Ernst, who is coming in this afternoon.

MR. LOTH: Yes, sure.

H.W.Jr.: He has taken such an interest in it.

MR. FELTUS: May I make one suggestion?

H.W.Jr.: Make two.

MR. FELTUS: I would suggest that he try to get into the contract a definite commitment on the amount of money to be spent in advertising the book. They will do that if they want the book badly, and a big advertising appropriation will make a lot of difference.

H.W.Jr.: What Morris suggested was this: Depending upon the contract I made with them, and how much royalty I wanted, that would make the difference. But I will make the suggestion.

MR. WHITE: The contract should also be drawn with the expectation that the thing will be translated in easily thirty or forty countries.

H.W.Jr.: Now, Dave, when can you go to work full steam? Let's turn the damned thing out. When can you work the way you did down on that balcony at Daytona?

Mr. LOTH: Any time. I have to go to New York this week end. I mean, I have got to be there Friday morning and stay over through Tuesday, but what I was planning to do was that I can do quite a bit of work on it in sort of polishing it.

Meanwhile, I don't think you have ever read the thing from end to end.

H.M. Jr.: I read those two chapters on which I worked with you.

Mr. LOTH: Yes. What I was hoping was that over this week end you might have the time to take the chapter that comes ahead of those--this historical chapter--and the rest of the book.

Then we could get together at your convenience.

H.M. Jr.: We have really got to work together.

Mr. LOTH: They are very good.
going to give the Saar to France, what are you going to do with the people in it?” He said, “You had better take all the Germans out because they are so much more virile than the French. If you leave them in there, after a while they will be all Germans.”

MR. WHITE: They should be moved out, but not for that reason. I don’t think they are any more virile than the French.

MR. LOTH: Our thesis also in the book is that the Germans should be moved back out of all the territory we take away from the New Reich and that should be exchanges of population, that Germans should be sent back from the territory taken away into Germany proper, and that Poles and any others in Germany now should be taken out.

H.W.JR: What do we say about dismemberment?

MR. LOTH: We make two states out of Germany and explain the difference between our setup and Sumner Welles’, which provides for three. He left the Ruhr. The Ruhr was the core of one of his three states.

H.W.JR: Suppose that instead of at Yalta and Teheran they stuck these things. Suppose they really decide what they are going to do with these very things I have just brought up, in the next three weeks?

MR. WHITE: Well, you will get a page proof, and if by the time the page proof comes out there is a definite decision made, then you are faced with two alternatives. Either you delete all discussion of that decision, or you criticize it.

H.W.JR: Felix is laughing at you.

MR. FEHLER: I was just laughing at your two alternatives.

MR. WHITE: There probably will be a lapse of almost six weeks before you get your final page proof, won’t there?
estates to divide up and give to the five million, and they are all aginast at that.

Another thing is that Germany's production per hectare is more than that of her neighbors. But when it gets down to five million people, Mr. Truman told me there were only two plans. He says Jimmy Byrnes has one, and I have one. Nobody else has any. He didn't tell me what Byrnes' plan was.

MR. FELTUS: I think you are pretty certain it isn't like yours.

H.M.JR: Oh, no, I am pretty sure he wouldn't like mine. But, after all, that is really up to the publisher again, isn't it?

MR. LOTH: Yes. And I don't think any publisher who is on his toes would be worried by the fear that the Big Three decisions were going to make your book obsolete all of a sudden.

MR. WHITE: Not only that, but if they come up the same way you do, then it is bound to be controversial. There will be a lot of people that disagree with it, and you're becomes a defense of that proposal, which in itself makes it very valuable. If they come out differently from what you do, there has been no loss of interest, because you are criticizing a major program which has been made, and since no program that will be made, in my judgment, will persist anyway, it is still an open question. They are not going to close the question by any decision they make in Berlin, in my judgment.

H.M.JR: Let me give you Canfield's attitude. I didn't like it at all. Canfield asked to see me; I didn't ask to see him. He comes in here. Last time he couldn't get his hands on it quick enough. He said, 'Well, Mr. Morgenthau, eight months ago the thing was a matter of great interest.' He wanted me to sell it to him, but I wasn't going to sell it to him. He was just trying as hard as he could to put me in a position where I was going to sell him the book.

He had his doubts. Well, if he is in that frame of mind, what I want to do is tell Morris Ernst to have him make up his mind and say yes or no.

MR. FELTUS: He is abroad, isn't he?

H.M.JR: No, he was here Friday afternoon.

MR. GOR: Did Ernst suggest Canfield?

H.M.JR: Yes.

MR. GASTON: He really came in here last Friday to get free from his commitment, didn't he?

H.M.JR: No. What he came in here for last Friday was to see whether he could get a first option on my Treasury story.

MR. GASTON: The story of the rise and fall of the New Deal.

H.M.JR: And I gave him no encouragement. I told him that my lawyers thought that I had an obligation, and I read all the correspondence, and I can't see it. I mean, my lawyers in their conversation with Knopf told Knopf about the book. I don't think so. Eddie doesn't think so. I gave him the whole correspondence. It is his own firm. It is what they have said, not what I have said.

MR. GASTON: I would be willing to back his judgment.

MR. LOTH: Is that the Greenbaum that is the Times' lawyer?

H.M.JR: I don't think he is the Times' lawyer.

MR. GASTON: That is another one.

H.M.JR: Well, I don't know. You asked some questions, Frank. That was just what was bothering me.
MR. GASTON: I kind of have a hunch that this is written with a background of an earlier time, and that it needs some bringing up to date. I have kind of the same feeling that Frank does. It needs to show more evidence of comprehension of what has gone on in the last few months.

MR. COE: This has the merit that it doesn't give away any official secrets. It could have been written by someone who hadn't been through all those things which you were speaking about—the airplane trips and fights with Hull and Einstein.

MR. GASTON: It is distinctly not the story of the plan, but it an exposition of an argument of a plan.

MR. WHITE: Which is the most important aspect of it.

MR. GASTON: The other is perhaps more settled.

MR. WHITE: Yes, but I mean the chief objective of the book is to try to hold public opinion in favor of a certain course of action, and it would have to stand on the quality of its argument.

MR. GASTON: As far as the book is concerned, I think an introduction can bring out enough of that to whet people's appetites.

MR. LOTH: I don't think that the story of how the plan came to be is nearly as salable as the plan itself unless you are prepared to spill an awful lot of inside conversation.

H.N.JH: It is too early.

MR. PERLE: You can do that in the Saturday Evening Post or some periodical later.

H.N.JH: Oh, I don't think so.

MR. LOTH: I certainly don't think you ought to do it in the book, and, therefore, I think what you could say about how the plan came to be is not nearly either as important or as salable as what the plan is.

Now, I think that the framework of this book as it is written is about the framework you would want, and that is why I thought if I take the time to bring this all up to date and put in the book all we think you want to say in it, I think we will lose a lot more time, because then there will still be the things to put in that you want to put in. And I think if you could look it over and say what kind of things we need to put in here to bring it up to date we will save an awful lot of time.

MR. WHITE: It is easy to exaggerate what is needed to bring it up to date, because most of the content of that document has little to do with current events. It has to do with the basic considerations in the evaluation of a program.

Now, you can pay your respects to the Yalta decision and the others at various points along in there without too much trouble and without much detail, and if they come out with anything at the Big Three, you can use what is publicly given. I don't think you can use the other.

MR. PERLE: But if you try to bring it up to date with factual stories on what is happening over there, that task will never be finished.

MR. WHITE: There are some things that have already been revealed. As an illustration, one of the things that has come to light is that there was no strong underground movement in Germany. That, everyone agrees on now. It wouldn't take much change in the writing.

MR. GASTON: That is what I am talking about. If there are things in the book that are, in the light of present events and what has happened, clearly impossible, then those things ought to be eliminated and changed.

MR. LOTH: If we say there were no signs that the underground existed, that could be changed with a stroke of the pencil.
MR. CDE: But that is pretty extensive. I wonder if there isn't general agreement on that, that this book has to sound like a book after the conquest of Germany. I think it guesses right, as you say, on the underground. I think it is correct on the destruction, and so forth.

MR. LORD: There are very few of those things that we even anticipate in talking about the basic -- the main part of the book is the basic strength and weakness of Germany in Europe, and whatever has happened during the war hasn't changed that.

MR. WHITE: Take that chapter on the question of the role that Russia plays in the decision. Now, that will have to be somewhat modified, but not a great deal, if you want to include it. But you have to go through it, having in mind that danger and that difficulty, and delete, replace, and bring up to date those things which are called for. I don't think that they reflect more than twenty percent of the volume of the writing, and my guess would be less than ten percent.

H.M.JR.: Could I interrupt a minute? Eisenhower asked me a very pertinent question. He said, "Mr. Morgenthau, is this book a plan for the next year and a half, or a plan for after the next eighteen months?"

I said, "General Eisenhower, it is a plan wholly devoted to the next eighteen months."

MR. WHITE: I would have said that it was a plan devoted to the next twenty years, but you have to begin in the next eighteen months.

H.M.JR.: I agree, but it is the long view rather than the short. That is what he asked me. He said, "Is this something that has to be done immediately, or in the long run?"

MR. WHITE: Well, it needs to be done immediately.

MR. LORD: But it is going to take twenty years to complete it.

H.M.JR.: But he just meant short-run or long-run. I would say long-run.

MR. WHITE: It is a long-run plan from the very essence of your basic doctrine, but it has long-run effects which must be implemented in the next eighteen months. You are not likely to implement it thereafter. If a decision is not made with respect to the long-run objectives in accordance with that in the next year, then you are never going to get that. That would be my thought.

H.M.JR.: Well, the way the thing is going to be left -- is it up to me to read this thing? Is that the first move?

MR. WHITE: You needn't be mutually exclusive.

MR. LORD: I had planned to take it with me and do some work on it along the lines that Frank was talking about. But the changes I will make on my own will be relatively slight. They are not going to affect the basic things about the book, and those are the things we are going to need your guidance on, Mr. Secretary.

H.M.JR.: Who has read it in the room here?

MR. WHITE: We all have.

H.M.JR.: I don't think Gaston has read it.

MR. GASTON: The copy I have is pretty old. I have read that. Well, that is the last one before the recent revisions.

MR. LORD: And the recent revisions apply only about four chapters in the book.

H.M.JR.: Have you read it, Feltus?

MR. FELTUS: No, sir.

H.M.JR.: Would you like to read it?

MR. FELTUS: I would like to very much.
MR. WHITE: I am not sure we have the latest revisions.

MR. LOTH: I have some suggestions that came from several of you people on details that I have made notes of. All of them are matters of detail where you change a paragraph here or there. Then the big change was made when we did those two articles, and then there was a newspaper release.

MR. WHITE: And they replace what chapters?

MR. LOTH: They replace chapters two, three, four, and part of five.

MR. GASTON: What do you mean they replace them?

MR. LOTH: They are more in line with Mr. Kogentiau's ideas.

MR. GASTON: Do you mean they are going to go into the book in place of those chapters?

MR. LOTH: Largely.

H.W.JR: When I get to reading this thing--has it been changed? Have the magazine articles been substituted in here?

MR. LOTH: I don't know about that copy.

MR. COE: There are so many different editions circulating, Mr. Secretary, that we are all talking about different ones.

MR. WHITE: For example, I would like to read it over to make pencil notes on what I think should be deleted or brought up to date or changed. And I wouldn't like to spend time with an older edition.

MR. LOTH: If we can get those two magazine articles, I would like to substitute them in here for chapters two, three, four, and five. Then it goes off.

Now, in the actual book itself I would expand those two articles a little bit with additional detail that we left out largely because we were trying to keep them to magazine size. For instance, when we talked about the cartels in the book, I would put a couple of more examples than we used in the magazine articles.

H.W.JR: Well, I think a lot of stuff has come to light on I. G. Farben that we could use.

MR. WHITE: I think you would probably have to confine yourself to material that is in Kilgore's findings.

In addition to those two chapters that you want us to go over--and I think we should go over them--if you would have several complete sets made of the latest revision, that is what we would go over.

MR. LOTH: There were a number of copies of what I had written. I haven't revised that, except on those chapters.

MR. WHITE: Could we have one complete set which is your revision? Some chapters we won't have to rewrite, and others we may.

MR. LOTH: You don't have a complete set?

H.W.JR: Mrs. McHugh has the last.

MR. WHITE: Well, if she has the last, when she is through we can have several complete sets made.

Now, they may call for retyping of only three or four chapters, or it may call for retyping them all.

MR. FELTS: When somebody gets half way through, somebody else could start reading.

MR. WHITE: I also suggest, Mr. Secretary, that some symbol be put at the upper right hand corner of each page. The date is preferable, but if it is too long, a symbol would be all right. That is important, because there are no many copies extant that when we shift them around they get mixed up. "July '40" would be sufficient.

MR. LOTH: Tomorrow morning I can bring you a complete set of everything except those two chapters.

MR. WHITE: I think while Feltus is here we might go over the particular parts.

H.M.JR: I am going to have to go into the four o'clock meeting. All you want from me, Mr. Loth, is what Mrs. McLough will give you. Is that right?

MR. LOTH: Well, I want you to read it.

H.M.JR: I am going to read it, and I will be ready for you when you get back Tuesday.

MR. LOTH: Fine.

H.M.JR: Thank you very much.

NMJF: I have an idea which I'm sure both of you will be opposed to, as I thought you both might as well be on at the same time.

Mr. Ted Gamble:
It must be tough when we are both opposed.

NMJF: Well, that is this. I don't know - let us just say for argument, the figures you have now are 25 billion and five.

G: Yes.

NMJF: Something like that - is that right?

Mr. Dan Bell:
Yeah, that's right last night, it may be a little higher tonight. Close to 25 - 5 I'd say.

NMJF: Yes, well, for argument we'll say 25 - 5, but we have sold another billion dollars worth of bonds to the banks.

G: Yes.

NMJF: Which has been done during the 7th War Loan.

G: That's right.

NMJF: Now, while it isn't in the quote, is the over-all figures this evening that I announce, why don't I add them out?

B: You haven't added anything on the banks -- for the banks?

NMJF: No.

B: I think a sentence ought to go in on that.

NMJF: No, but I mean the grand total.

B: Well, I think it ought to be separate. That outside of the Drive, the banks took under the formula a billion, three-hundred million, making total cash received during this period of some 26 billion.

G: ... and I would be against it.

NMJF: Wait a minute it would be 25 - 6 plus a billion - three would be...

B: 27.
HNJr: 27.

G: That’s right. The reason I’m against it is because we are using the speech verbatim as a press release, and if we use the figures we are going to have to do a lot of explaining.

B: Why doesn’t it explain itself at the end of the sentence?

G: I don’t think it explains itself after we’ve used a different figure for sixty or seventy days, Dan. And I do think if we use the figures as a total after - in order to make it consistent with everything we have used not only in this drive, but in the two previous drives, that we would have to explain it. I think explaining it detracts from the non-bank total.

B: Well, when are you going to give it out?

G: We never give out the bank figures.

B: Oh, yes, we have.

G: Well, you give it out as...

B: We give it out as a final total.

G: We did not give it out in the grand total of the last two drives.

B: It was given out somewhere along there in the press statement.

G: We never gave it out in the grand total of the last two drives.

B: Well, I should think one sentence would explain it, and I should think it ought to be part of the total, I don’t know whether it detracts from the total statement or not. I shouldn’t think so.

HNJr: Well, I would have bet money that you fellows would have just the opposite.

G: You thought that I would be for it and Dan would be against it, eh?

HNJr: Yeah.

(Laughter) I think it hurts your other story, Mr. Secretary, that’s my only thought.

HNJr: I don’t know - 27 looks pretty good.

G: I think 26 sounds just as big.

B: Well, I’ll take the difference.

(All three laugh)

G: Yeah, I think if you use it you’ll have to explain it because if we don’t explain it people could very properly use - they’ve used all these other figures as non-bank totals. I think it incumbent upon us if we use it to explain it, and I think the explaining of does not belong in your speech - the kind of speech you are making.

HNJr: Well...

G: We’ve mimeographed the speech verbatim you know, just to write in the figures and release it that way. You are stuck.

HNJr: What?

G: You’re stuck.

HNJr: Oh, no. What do we have mimeograph people for?

G: Oh, we could mimeograph it over. I just meant to singly by that, that if we are going to change the text of it, I think it detracts from the story - I think we have a great story.

HNJr: Gee, I don’t know. Will you hold the wire - there are a couple of people in here. Do you mind, both of you staying - talk to each other, I don’t mind, but just a minute.

B: Ted, I don’t know what the rest of the speech is, but I wouldn’t think anything on the end - wherever you end up for the figures detracts from your total speech.

G: He uses three figures, Dan, he says the grand total so much, individual so much and K Bonds.....

B: And total for the Drive so much.

G: Yeah.

B: Now, the total that the banks took under the formula for the savings account under which they subscribed a billion - three, then you get a grand total of 27 billion.
HMJr: Mrs. Eisley says a billion - three doesn't mean a thing to her.
B: (Laughter).
G:

Well, I wouldn't use it that is my own judgment on it, and not because I'm not willing to have us explain everything we can explain, I'm for that, but I just think it will require explanation, and I don't think the explanation will help either your speech or the press release.

HMJr: Well, I know it is a little late to bring it up, but I knew there was around a billion dollars kicking around.
G: Well, the time part of it is not embarrassing, Mr. Secretary, we have plenty of time to do it, and we'd have time to do it if you decided in an hour from now.

HMJr: Well, I suppose in comparing it to 1/10, it would get everybody all balled up, wouldn't it?
G: Yes.

HMJr: Well, I will reluctantly disregard a billion - three, it doesn't exist.
G: O.K.
B: All right.

HMJr: All right.
MR. GASTON: I think it is a part of a bigger plan. It shows the lack of proper organisation in the executive end of the Government that reflects strongly on the prior administration because it wasn't organized and put into effect. I don't see how you can put out anything of the kind, in the first place, because as I say, it is only a piece of a larger plan that should have been put into effect. I don't believe you are in any position to put it out.

MR. D.W. BELL: If I understood what you wanted at last Saturday's staff meeting, you wanted consideration given to the publication of the last recommendation which you submitted to President Truman.

H.W.JR: That is right.

MR. D.W. BELL: We talked about it this morning, and we all felt that it might be bad to make that public. You weren't in a position to do more than make it public. We thought it might put you in a bad light, and it might put the Treasury in a bad light. It would build up opposition to it immediately from the agencies mentioned, and there would probably be some resistance from your successor to adopting it.

We tried to think of many ways that you could handle a thing of that kind if you did decide to make it public; whether you should write a letter to the President, making a recommendation; whether you should make a report to Congress; or whether you should just give out a statement. Then it came to light that Mr. House's office was preparing a review of the last twelve years. We thought maybe that could be handled in one of those ways. You could either have the President make three ways. You could either have the President make three ways. You could either have the President make three ways. But that is, in effect, a year old, although it wasn't published until June 30, 1944.

H.W.JR: What would be gained by it, Mr. Secretary?

H.W.JR: The thing is this: It is a matter of possible personal pride which is rather an expensive luxury. I have worked on this thing with the assistance of other people for some time, and I don't want people, a couple of years from now, to say, 'Well, Mr. Morgenthau had no vision. He didn't see how this thing should be run.'
I would like to point out that this is the way to run the financial end of the Government. After all, Mr. Beardsley Homi got out a program as to how the various agencies should be run, including the budget.

I think that, unless something like this thing is done, as we go into a period of reorganization from war to peace, the thing is just going to be impossible.

Mr. FARKS: Do you think your publication of it is going to result in much more likelihood of its being done or not being done?

H.M.JR: Well, it is like everything else. Eight months ago I was way ahead of my time, and took an awful licking. If I had published it then, some people would have liked it and some wouldn't, but at least it would start the discussion. Most likely we will end up in getting something like it.

I went before the Byrd Committee, in the first instance. The Byrd Committee was my suggestion. I went before them and made suggestions as to how they should save a billion dollars. They saved a billion dollars. I think it, after twelve years, I say, "I think this is the way the thing should be done," it will bring attention to the weaknesses of the present system. Now, the fact that Herbert points out that the executive end is badly organized, that is granted, but that isn't up to me. This thing needs to be done very, very badly.

Mr. GASTON: There are two ways I think you could do it. One is to respond to an invitation from a committee or a member of Congress, and the other is to wait until you are out of office and write an article or make a speech in which, with a view to helping your successor, you ask that he be given the necessary powers so that he can discharge his functions. You could say that you never succeeded in getting it, although you recommended it to two different Presidents, and that you hope those powers will be given to your successor. You could do that the day after you got out. You could also do it in response to an invitation from a committee now, if the committee wanted to go into the thing.

H.M.JR: Why do you stress the day after I leave?
MR. D. W. HILL: It won't carry all the detailed tables, because we couldn't get those ready.

MR. GASTON: It will entail some charts and some tables such as we ordinarily put into the first section, and it will go heavy on summary. You could incorporate not only your summary for this last year, but you could summarize your twelve years. Then you could have a chapter entitled "Recommendations."

Now the question is, if somebody gets wind of it, whether it will be forbidden or not. I think it can be done in a way so we could get specific permission to do it.

H.M. JR: Who is going to forbid it?

MR. GASTON: The President.

H.M. JR: Oh, no. He won't forbid it.

MR. D. W. HILL: I recall the law says that the Secretary of the Treasury shall submit an annual report on the state of the finances covering each fiscal year, and it shall be laid before Congress on the opening day of each session. Is that right?

MR. BARTLETT: Yes, and then he can submit them from time to time.

MR. GASTON: And he is the only member of the Cabinet who is authorized to make oral reports before Congress if he wishes.

H.M. JR: If anybody has any worries, I will tell Vinson that I am going to do it.

MR. GASTON: If you want to do it, I think there is not that way and a couple of others that I mentioned. There is still another one that I didn't mention, which is the leak, of course.

H.M. JR: No. Of course, I don't like that.
for it. That is a wonderful plan."

MR. D. W. BELL: You know, this has a good advantage of having a real good annual report put out--this short version. When it comes to writing the annual report covering the fiscal year 1946, which you administered, it is going to be rather difficult for Mr. Vinson to send that report up. We had a little experience along that line when you were called upon to write Mr. Woodin's report.

MR. GASTON: I think this should have some economic review and forecast in it.

H.W. Jr.: Look what Vinson did in his report to Congress. He threw everything in except the kitchen stove.

MR. FEHLE: You have to summarize some of it for the press, point up the highlights and see that it got into the press.

MR. COE: Do you want to make any foreign financial recommendations, too?

H.W. Jr.: Anything.

MR. GASTON: I think seriously that everybody now ought to be charged with the duty of making suggestions for recommendations to go into this report.

H.W. Jr.: Let's sleep on this.

Eddie, how do you feel about it?

MR. BARTLET: I feel very good about it. You will remember I made some suggestion along that line Saturday.

H.W. Jr.: Somebody did. Was it you that made that suggestion?

MR. BARTLET: Yes.
July 10, 1943
4:37 P.M.

M: (cont) If we were fifty short or if we were 100 or 200 short, as we thought we might be at one time.

G: Well, I don't agree with you.

M: (Laughs) Well, maybe I've just been kidding myself.

M: No, I'm not going to belittle the 3 billion 976, but there is all the difference in the world between 3 billion 976 and 4 billion 03.

G: Yes. We are also going to get 2 billion 640 million from individuals.

M: But I still say if there was any way of legitimately showing it - it's the difference between success and failure.

G: Well, we might take a check and see just what the situation is in a couple of banks.

M: No, I don't agree with you at all, and I'm not going to ask anybody's advice.

G: Yes.

M: If there is anyway possibly of making it over 4 I'd like to see it.

G: Well, fine, I'll make a couple of checks on it.

M: I wish you would, Ted.

G: I will right away.

M: There's all the difference in the world.

M: I'll check right away.

M: Please do.

G: All right, sir.

Mr. Dan Bell:
How about F Bonds, Mr. Jawor?

HN Jr.
Gable just called me. Has he spoken to you?

HN Jr.
Well, he said that F Bonds were 3, 976,000,000. Then he said, of course, they might get it across by counting today's sales. Well, I'm in total disagreement with him. I think if it is that close and there is any legitimate way of making it 4 billion, 03 won't put it across, it is success against failure. I'm very anxious if we can make it over four billion. How do you feel about that?

B.: Yeah, I'm just trying to think. We've done about everything.

HN Jr.
Well, he said there are some sales that came in today yet that they haven't counted.

B.: Well, sales for what?

HN Jr.
For last week and today.

B.: Today's sales?

HN Jr.
Yeah.

B.: I think we got everything up to scratch up to Saturday, and we took some of the corporation money, you know, for which bonds have not been issued.

HN Jr.
We're talking about F Bonds.

B.: Yeah. Well, I mean corporations, came in with their employees' money, and they haven't issued the bonds yet. And we credited that to yesterday, and we got quite a bit of money on that. -- Well, I don't know whether it can be done, let me try to think of something.

HN Jr.
Well, if there is any way of putting it over for us, I'm very anxious to do it.

B.: You'd rather 4 billion and three, than have 3 billion 9900?

HN Jr.
Yes.

B.: It looks like it is plugged if you get 403.

ANNOUNCER: The Columbia Broadcasting System in cooperation with the United States Treasury presents the dramatic story of "The Seven Challenges," with as narrator, with music by Jack Miller, and an exclusive final report on the Mighty Seventh War Loan by the Secretary of the Treasury, the Honorable Henry Morgenthau, Jr.

MUSIC: INTRODUCTORY - BG

NARRATOR: They said it couldn't be done. They said the people were too full of victory. They said the people were tired of war bond drives.
They said the people were more interested in meat, gas rations, vacation spending. They were good people doing all this saying, substantial people and learned people - they believed they were of the people. But they lacked the faith of the people they so ardently claimed to represent. For the little people were still the people of the big faith. They were the busy people - the working people - they had no time to be cynics or skeptics or worrybirds. They could take anything and everything. Yes - they could take "The Seven Challenges." (MUSIC OUT)

Yes, the Mighty Seventh War Loan which, of necessity, was planned months before VE Day, had to overcome what truly have been the most stupendous 90 days in the history of the war. When Secretary Morgenthau opened the Seventh War Loan, he said it would be a "challenge to our self-restraint, our self-discipline, our self-control - the greatest challenge to American democracy." There were in fact seven great stories and issues that were headline news. Some of them minimized the need for a war loan; some of them were so overpowering as to dwarf all other news.

These, then, were the seven great challenges to the successful carrying out of the Seventh War Loan.

MUSIC:  INTRODUCTORY...SHOULD HAVE A QUICK FEELING...

HOLD UNDER.

NARRATOR:
The Homefront - sometimes placid, sometimes volcanic was the first great challenge. Complacent one moment, mad the next - full of bickerings and full of a unity sometimes profound - the homefront was the strange paradox. Aware of war - the homefront was also aware of peace.

MAN:

Never mind Bonds! What's wrong with Washington! Where is all the meat? Who's getting it anyhow?

NARRATOR:

It's the black market. But he doesn't see how it matters if he buys a good steak say for twice the ceiling price. He's only one, he says, so it's everyone's fault but his.

MUSIC:  BRIEF CRESCE NDO

MAN 2:

It's about time we had more gasoline. I'm getting tired of driving around the block and calling it a day.

NARRATOR:

He's really a patriotic chap, but the warm weather is in him. He's got the urge to go spinning along the highway - even without gas coupons.

MUSIC:  BRIEF CRESCE NDO
MAN 3: I want to get back to manufacturing peacetime products. And if I can't get the material one way - then I'll get it another.

NARRATOR: His boy is at the front - and he'd call you a you-know-what if you said he wasn't back of his one hundred percent. These were typical remarks of the ninety days - though not necessarily representative of the people. And yet the discord made for a challenge.

MUSIC: CROSS FADES OVER ABove TO -

SOUND: TELEGRAPH KEY - HOLD UNDER

REPORTER: (OVER SOUND) Monday, April 23rd. The government today has taken action to increase the supply of meat for the public.

REPORTER 2: Friday, April 27th. Chester Bowles, Price Administrator, plans drastic fight on black market with help of Justice and Treasury agents!

REPORTER 3: Friday, May 11 - seventy-five War Production Board orders and schedules revoked by Chairman Julius Krug.

REPORTER: National brownout lifted! Curfew eliminated! Racing ban revoked! 50% more gas for "A" card holders in June!

SOUND: CROSS FADE TO

MUSIC: HOLD UNDER - MAINTAIN SPEED FEELING.
NARRATOR: Yes, some things are healed by VE day.

There'll be more cigarettes, a few more tires, and 200,000 new autos for passenger use by January 1st. And the biggest harvest of wheat in world history - and more fruit and the prospects for potatoes are good - and the Seventh War Loan has reached 30% of its goal.

MUSIC: FADES OUT UNDER

KID: Read all about it! Treasury out for tax cheaters. (FADING) Read it here. Secretary Morgenthau warns black market. Get your paper...

NARRATOR: Yes - in no time at all, 20,000 tax evasion cases are under investigation - arrests and indictments follow promptly. And President Truman endorses the Morgenthau request for 3,000 new Treasury agents!

MUSIC: PUNCTUATE - TO B.Q.

NARRATOR: The Homefront is the first of the seven challenges. And through it rolls the Mighty Seventh. There is talk of reconversion cutbacks and unemployment. But the little people of big faith - back the Seventh - and in one year pour out $46,000,000,000 in taxes to prosecute the war!
NARRATOR: Yes, the people met the challenge of the homefront!

MUSIC: THEMATIC BRIDGE ШEEL9S UP TO GO

NARRATOR: April 9th. Remember that date? Remember anything that happened on that date?

It's going to be a big challenge.

MUSIC: CUT

MAN: April 9th...guess the Allies were fighting inside Germany.

NARRATOR: Sure - we all remember that. British troops were shelling Bremen. The Red Army was in Vienna. American tanks were past Hanover. But there was something else that happened April 9th.

MAN 2: The Seventh War Loan pre-drive.

That's it - not startling news to be sure and instead of page one it landed on page twenty-one. But without the pre-drive, without the backing of the £7,000,000 workers enrolled in the payroll savings plan, the stories on page one might have been less cheering. Yet - page one was the second great challenge. The challenge of VE Day! Page one and the headline news from the loudspeaker:

MUSIC: WITH FACE AND EXCITEMENT

ANNOUNCER: High Army officials told Senators today that the end of organized fighting in Germany probably would come within a few days.
NARRATOR: The date - Friday, April the 18th.

NARRATOR: Not a good date for the Germans. Nor the best time for War Loan Drives. It's in the air now. Mass roundup of prisoners is taking place.

VOICES: SNEAK IN EXCITED CROWD MURMURS

NARRATOR: The feeling of optimism blighted by the Belgian Bulge of December grows. The people are getting victory conscious. They sense it. They feel it. Corks are popping. Bells are pealing.

VOICES: IN QUITE LOUD HERE

NARRATOR: (PROJECTS) Every enemy force must be erased before we celebrate!

NARRATOR: (over above) It's the voice of Eisenhower. The people listen. They go back to work. Back to waiting.

WOMAN: How much longer 'fore we celebrate VE Day?

NARRATOR: Not much longer - but how about putting some of that overtime into extra Bond deductions?

MUSIC: STING TO BG

NARRATOR: She does - because the plant foreman, the workers, the unions are busy talking...
VOICES: Up your quota!... Take an extra hundred!

Buy more Bonds! Up your quota!...

(ALL JOIN HERE) Up your quota! Up your quota! Up your quota!

MUSIC: (SWEEPS IN WITH SAME EFFECT THEN TO ROOFTOP)

NARRATOR: One week later Adolf Hitler has a birthday. His last. The Allies celebrate it by capturing Nuremberg - the Nazis' shrine city. The city where the party leaders stood in the gigantic stadium.

VOICES: (ON ECHO) Heil Hitler!

NARRATOR: But no more. Where once there were hundreds of thousands there is one. A lone G. I. goose-stepping for the fun of it.

SOUND: FADE ON LONE FOOTSTEPS THRU ECHO

NARRATOR: (OVER) And where once the Fuehrer stood, a U. S. soldier, Harold L. Hershey of Washington, D. C. stands. He places a comb to his upper lip - stretches out his hand - the final mockery - the retort courteous:

MUSIC: STING- CROSS FADE TO

VOICES: THEY GRADUALLY INCREASE IN VOLUME AND EXCITEMENT UNDER FOLLOWING

NARRATOR: It's coming now - the whole world is waiting.

EISENHOWER: Enemy doom is near.

NARRATOR: That's Eisenhower.
GOEBBELS: We must save Berlin — or die!
NARRATOR: That's Goebbels.
HITLER: My Western Armies are no more than guerrillas.
NARRATOR: Hitler. The Russians were inside Berlin. The Americans are nearby! Patton's tanks are running wild. But it's not yet time. One man can stop the rising tide — the thousand peace rumors. The man in the White House — Harry S. Truman.

HITLER: The people are alert again — but there is no surprise. The war was over a week ago — the celebrations have been checked.

VOICES: SUBSIDE TO SILENCE UNDER...
TRUMAN: I just got in touch with Admiral Leahy and had him call our headquarters Commander in Chief in Europe, and there is no foundation for the rumor. That is all I have to say.

MAN: Okay, Mr. President — we'll take your word and wait and see.
NARRATOR: Thus do the voices of a hundred million Americans speak. And ten thousand who gathered in New York's Times Square go home. But the irresistible tide sweeps on.

MAN: The Russian Flag flies tonight over the German Reichstag.
MAN 2: American troops have captured Munich!
MAN 3: Stand is built before Buckingham for King George's VE Day speech!
NARRATOR: The fizz is gone. Except for a brief moment in New York.

VOICES: AD LIBS - "War is over! Hey - this time it's VE for sure!"

NARRATOR: (OVER ABOVE) Yes - VE for sure. And a handful of soldiers - casualties - alighting from an Air Transport Command bough their heads in prayer.

MAN: (OFF) Hey! Maybe now we can celebrate!

NARRATOR: Yes all the people go home. To "work, work, work" and to pray like their President asked them to. And to back the Seventh.

NARRATOR: And the people did and have - for in one year they turned out the goods - provided the money that gave thirty billion dollars to the U.S. Navy. Yes - the people met the second challenge - the Challenge of VE Day!

MUSIC: TUESCIC RIGEE SWEPPS UP TO BY

NARRATOR: But soon there comes a new cause for celebration - a new challenge - for men who have won the victories are coming home.

MUSIC: OUT

MAN: The Army announces plans to discharge two million veterans within year!
MAN 2: We've got to give our men and our generals the kind of reception they're entitled to.

NARRATOR: It's not easy to see that the Mighty Seventh is the best way to demonstrate one's enthusiasm.

WOMAN: I want to wave a flag and throw some paper!

NARRATOR: How about waving a Bond?

WOMAN: Oh yes - I guess you're right.

VOICES: CHEERING

NARRATOR: Back home comes General Hodges - on his way to the Pacific.

MAN: There he is! General Clark!

KID: Mama - do you think he'll wear his pearl revolvers?

NARRATOR: The people lay out the welcome mat for swashbuckling General George S. Patton - the two fist-hardboiled gun-toting leader. And the toughest soldier of them all brushes aside the tears which well up from his heart.

OUT OVER ABOVE.

MOTHER: You're just my baby boy you know.

NARRATOR: That's a proud 78-year-old mother who welcomes home her soldier boy in Boyerstown, Pa. He's the Commander of U.S. Strategic Air Forces in Europe - his mother's baby - General Carl Spaatz.
NARRATOR: And now the whole world pours out its honor to Dwight David Eisenhower.

MUSIC: SPEAK IN "AMERICA" HOLD UNDER FOR OUR CHORUS

BRITISH: The people of London and England welcome you!

RUSSIAN: The people of Russia are proud to present to you this medal!

NARRATOR: And back home - in New York - Washington - Kansas City and Abilene there is more cheering - cheering such as America has never heard before.

VOICES: (OVER ABOVE) Hi Ike. Welcome home!

Good old Ike! etc.

NARRATOR: (OVER ABOVE) And the people of Washington turn out for Eisenhower Day -

An "E" Bond for Eisenhower is the rallying call with tens of thousands waving paper - good paper - "E" Bond paper at General Ike. And in the Capitol of the United States - the man stands before the Congress.

EISENHOWER: My imagination cannot picture a more dramatic moment than this in the life of an American. I stand before the elected Federal law makers of our great Republic, the very core of our political life and a symbol of those things we call the American heritage.
EISENHOWER: (cont'd) To preserve that heritage, three million American citizens at your benedict, have faced resolutely every terror the ruthless Nazi could devise. (FADE) I come before you as the representative of those three million people -- their commander -- because to them you wish this morning to pay the tribute of a grateful America for a military victory.

NARRATOR: (OVER FADE) And back in Abilene General Ike's old friends gather in Ike's Corner at Callahan's Drug Store to talk over the town's reception.

FRIEND: Figure maybe we can have a big covered wagon in the parade too.

FRIEND: And how 'bout Ike's old football team?

MUSIC: SNEAK UNDER

NARRATOR: Yes, they have the wagon-- the football team -- and a key to the city -- and another mother -- Ike's mother -- has her son sitting at her knees again, as do thousands of other mothers of fighting men back home for keeps. Yes, the Generals return -- Devers, Simpson, Truscott, Bradley -- all of them...and the people pour out their cheers and their gratitude -- they buy the Bonds that help pour out fifty billion dollars to the U. S. Army in one year!
NARRATOR: (cont'd) Yes - the people met the third challenge - the challenge of the "welcome home, soldier!"

MUSIC: THEMATIC BRIDGE SWEEPS UP TO BG

NARRATOR: April was a lovely month - People were beginning to enjoy the soft breezes - it was a time for things to grow and bloom. It was a time for gathering new strength. There was a man who felt that need. He sat down - even as you and I - to breathe in the new life for the strenuous days ahead. He reached his hand upwards to his head and said...

FDR: I have a terrific headache.

MUSIC: CROSS FADE TO

SOUND: SNEAK IN HEARTBEAT UNDER

NARRATOR: The President of the United States slumped in his chair. Gently he was carried to his bed. In the little cottage a doctor kept his vigil while the big kindly heart tolled out its final beat of history.

SOUND: IN CLEAR - THEN SUDDENLY STOPS

CHURCHILL: It's a loss, indeed a bitter loss to humanity that these heartbeats are stilled forever.

NARRATOR: (PAUSE) The President was dead. And Winston Churchill was far from alone in his sorrow. It was April 12, 5:40 P.M. when John Daly CBS news correspondent was handed a brief message.
IMMEDIATELY he went on the air.

Daly: We interrupt this program to bring you a special news bulletin from CBS World News. A press association has just announced that President Roosevelt is dead.

Narrator: There were the words. Now came the time to believe them. Now came the time to find out how deeply the real man was missed. Now came another challenge.

Sound: Bring in train - Hold under

Narrator: (OVER ABOVE) Once again a train pulls out of Warm Springs - slowly it moved through the lovely Southlands while the world wept.

Chinese: Chiang Kai-Shek quit his meal when notified of the great tragedy. He left his food untasted to relapse into sorrowful meditation.

Stalin: Send this: Mrs. Eleanor Roosevelt, Washington: Please accept my sincere condolences on the case of the death of your husband and an expression of sympathy in your great sorrow. Sign it - Josef Stalin.
DEGAULLE: My order is - All the flags of France and the Empire are to be flown at half mast.

SOUND: CROSS FADE TRAIN AND BELLS

NARRATOR: And in the green hills of Hyde Park the church bells toll - and bring the news of the great loss to the President's neighbors.

CROSSFADE BELLS AND TRAIN

NARRATOR: The people lined the tracks through which the train passed to pay their final respects. Through the night they stood - by the thousands, and they wept for the man with the cigarette holder, the man with the Scottie, the man with the flowing cape, the patrician who was above all the man of the people.

SOUND: TRAIN FADES OUT OVER LAST ABOVE

FIR: All that is within me cries out to go back to my home on the Hudson.

MUSIC: SNEAK

NARRATOR: Home had come the voyager. Home to the green hills, the blue Hudson and the rose garden.

MUSIC: SWELLS UP TO SHARP CUTOFF

VOICES: ANGRY MURDER

MAN: Why'd it have to be him!

WOMAN: Why couldn't it have been that Hitler!

NARRATOR: (OVER VOICES) Patience - patience. Their time is at hand - Listen - MUSSO: No...No...

SOUND: VOLLY OF FIRE CUTS HIM OFF

NARRATOR: It's Mussolini. And Hitler?

VOICE: Hitler committed suicide!

MAN 2: Hitler was shot by the SS!

VOICE 3: Hitler was killed by Russian artillery.

NARRATOR: Have it your own way - but Hitler is dead!

MUSIC: STING - TO BE

NARRATOR: And Goebbels - and Himmler. And soon Goering and Ribbentrop. The fourth challenge was a big one. It was a challenge to a country bereft of its greatest leader. But it was met.

NARRATOR: (cont'd) There was the final broadcast to remember - the final words - spoken to the six million volunteer war finance workers.

FDR: To save...to buy and to hold all we can of war Bonds...this is a small service to ask us who do not fight...yet it is one of the biggest things we can do for our fighting men.

NARRATOR: Yes 85,000,000 Americans hold bonds - and in this one year have bought 57 and a half billion dollars worth of government securities. The people met the Fourth Challenge as their fallen leader knew they would.
MUSIC: THEMATIC BRIDGE STEEPS UP TO B.G.

NARRATOR: The country quickly came to know a new figure - a new unfamiliar leader - who was its Fifth challenge. A man with a quick smile, and the country was to learn that he was also the decisive man, and a man you would feel at ease with anywhere.

MUSIC: OUT

TRUMAN: To the People of the United States...

NARRATOR: It's a new voice.

TRUMAN: It has pleased God in his infinite wisdom to take from us the immortal spirit of Franklin Delano Roosevelt, the thirty-first President of the United States.

NARRATOR: (OVER FADE) The voice is strictly Midwest - and good.

WOMAN: You know - I like his sound.

NARRATOR: People everywhere did.

TRUMAN: (FADES ON OVERLAST LINE)... and brings their hopes to task. (FULL ON)
Now, therefore, I, Harry S. Truman, President of the United States of America, do appoint Saturday next, April 14th, the day of the funeral service for the dead President, (FADES) as a day of mourning and prayer throughout the United States.

NARRATOR: (OVER FADE) It's said. There is a new President. Now to get to know him - to hear him - to see him. To get on to him - that becomes a major interest among the peoples of the United States - and the world.

SOUND: TELEGRAPH KEY - UNDER

TOM: Hundreds of thousands lined the way to the White House to watch the funeral rites. The family and friends followed the caisson. And so did President Truman.

DOUG: President Truman - his face frozen in grief - watched as Franklin Roosevelt was returned to the soil.

SOUND: KEY OUT

NARRATOR: A new team was forming. And the President was making other news - big news - in familiar - decisive American fashion.

MAN: President Truman has sent Harry Hopkins to see Stalin.

MAN 2: Joseph E. Davies has gone on another mission - to London.
MAN 3: President Truman meets with former President Herbert Hoover.

SOUND: PLANE FADES IN

NARRATOR: And the President continues to hit the headlines. He flies to the West Coast - to Olympia, Washington, to fish - and to get his speech ready for the San Francisco Conference. And while he flies speculation - rumors fly with him - The answers come quickly. (PLANE OUT) The Big Three will meet - in Berlin. Mr. Stettinius gets the highest office within the President's gift - American representative on the Security Council.

NARRATOR: (cont'd) And James Byrnes becomes Secretary of State. Says the President at the closing session of the San Francisco Parley:

TRUMAN: By this charter, you have moved toward the goal for which that gallant leader in this second world struggle worked and fought and gave his life...Franklin D. Roosevelt.

MUSIC: HIT - then to B.G.

NARRATOR: The new President has come through with flying colors. And the country has met the Fifth of the Seven Challenges. Met it by ending the fiscal year with the largest Treasury balance in history - $24,697 million dollars!

MUSIC: THEMATIC BRIDGE SWEEPS UP TO B.G.
NARRATOR: Decisive action was taking place in the preparations for the International Security Conference - the next challenge. The day the 7th War Loan pre-drive campaign began, there also began ten days of intensive preliminary meetings among the U.S. delegates. And decisions were made by that able group.

MAN 1: It is our desire that the majority shall rule our delegation at San Francisco.

MAN 2: We must be certain that justice shall be a basic part of the world charter.

MAN 3: The Monroe Doctrine and Pan-American unity must not be infringed upon.

NARRATOR: Yes, there was argument and discussion - but unity was born out of it. And importance came when Britain's Eden and Russia's Molotov joined America's Stettinius.

SOUND: GAVEL

NARRATOR: The Conference had begun.

MAN: How to halt an aggressor looms as big issue.

MAN 2: Poland is stumbling block to agreement.

MAN 3: How can the veto problem be handled?
NARRATOR: Tough questions and tough problems - but each is settled and the Conference moves ahead. Finally June 7th, Russia yields on the veto row. The Conference is assured of success. There were still doubts of course but the doubts gave way to sudden hopes of a new world one day when the President of the United States took the charter under his arm - took it to Washington - to the floor of the Senate. Took it where the hopes of peace met failure a generation before and where the new hope gave strength to our fighting men - kept faith with those who died.

(continuation)

NARRATOR: And the people kept the faith too - met this sixth great challenge in their support of the Mighty Seventh. But there was still another challenge. The War in the Pacific.

MUSIC: HIT TO P.G.

NARRATOR: It looked easy the first couple of days on Okinawa. It looked like the war was going to be a pushover. By wireless came the reports.

SOUND: OSCILLATOR

MAN: At the end of the first day's fighting Marine casualties could be counted on the fingers of two hands. So could the total counted Japanese dead!
NARRATOR: Meanwhile at home and on the beachhead we pondered the inhuman ways of the Japanese. We had gone in several thousand yards those first days. But a few days later progress was measured by inches and the casualties were piling up.

MAN: Overall casualties of U.S. forces now total 16,994.

MUSIC: PUNCTUATE

NARRATOR: That was thirty days after we walked in - when it looked like a pushover.

SOUND: PLANE OVER ABOVE.

NARRATOR: And oh yes - the Japanese radio had been boasting about a special attack corps - called "Kamikaze." They were brushed off too - until

SOUND: EXPLOSION

MAN: Loss of 133 on Cruiser Nashville revealed!

SOUND: EXPLOSION

MAN 2: Loss of 123 on Carrier Saratoga announced!

SOUND: EXPLOSION

MAN 3: Loss of 392 on Carrier Bunker Hill admitted!

MUSIC: PUNCTUATE - TO B.G.

NARRATOR: Ever hear of Chocolate Drop Hill? Or Sugar Loaf Hill? Ask the 77th Division or the 6th Marines.
On May 17th Japanese dead totaled 46,505. Quite a lot to pay for a Chocolate Drop - but they paid it.

Twenty-two days later, twenty-two thousand more had joined their ancestors.

Fourteen days later another twenty-seven thousand!

But it was no pushover. The Japs were doomed from the start. But they fought on. And too often they were counted out.

Yes - it took 82 days and more than 45,000 U.S. casualties to make the trip down Okinawa - un molested you could go from one end to the other in ninety minutes!

Oh, yes - Tokyo was laid waste by the B-29's ... and more bombs than ever fell on Germany were promised by General Arnold. And more troops were pledged by the President. And all that meant more bonds. The war with Japan was not over. We walked in on Okinawa - but not all walked out. We may walk in on the islands of Japan - we may walk in on the coast of China - but remember what the new President said ...

Victory is but half won!
NARRATOR: They said the people were too full of victory. They said the people were tired of War Bond Drives. But the people doing all this saying, lacked the faith of the people they so ardently claimed to represent. For the little people are still the people of big faith. The people have met, faced, and overcome the seven challenges.

MUSIC: CURTAIN

NARRATOR: And now, speaking directly to you from his office in Washington, D.C., the Secretary of the Treasury, the Honorable Henry Morgenthau, Jr.

One of the pleasantest tasks I have ever had to perform as Secretary of the Treasury is to report to you tonight the final results of the Seventh War Loan. We set ourselves, as you know, an overall goal of 14 billion dollars. The people of America have subscribed to the Mighty Seventh a total of $2,831,331,331 million dollars.

We asked for seven billion dollars in individual subscriptions. We have received a total of $8,631 million.

Finally, and most important of all, we set for the wage earners of the country the difficult goal of four billion dollars in E Bonds. The final figures show that E Bond sales have amounted to 3,766,500 million. And we can all be mighty proud of this record.
The War Bond Program has been, I think, a magnificent demonstration of the voluntary teamwork of a free people. Through this program, more than 80 million individual Americans have enlisted in the national cause — have engaged in an act of faith.

It has seemed to me from the beginning that the essence of this program lay in its voluntary character. When I asked the Congress of the United States in January, 1941, for authorization to borrow from the general public through a defense savings bond campaign, I said:

"I can think of no other single way in which so many people can become partners of their government in facing this emergency. It is the purpose of the Treasury to raise money for national defense by methods which strengthen national morale."

To achieve its aims, the Treasury sought to make the American people understand the meaning and magnitude of the crisis that they faced. It endeavored to forge, through united action, the national unity needed to overcome our common problems.

How well this has been done the record will attest. I take particular pride in the knowledge that it was done throughout by wholly democratic means.
There has been no resort at any time to coercion or intimidation or social pressure. Instead, the method pursued was to organize state by state, community by community, millions of volunteer war bond workers -- drawn from the ranks of business, of labor unions, of the professions, indeed from all the segments of our society -- and to let them carry the appeal to their fellow-citizens. Every American has been left free to contribute in accordance with his own conscience and his own capabilities. It is a kind of program which could have been undertaken, perhaps, in no other country in the world -- a kind of program adapted to the democratic pattern of American life.

Special praise is due, I think, to the part played in the War Bond Program by the men and women in our Armed Services. These Americans have not been content to bear the brunt of this nation's fight for freedom; they have also played a mighty part, as citizens, in helping to finance the war weapons, they have wielded.

The War Bond Program stands, I believe, as a powerful bulwark to the economy of this nation, both now and in the future. The savings of the American people, set aside during a time when most of our productive energy had to be devoted to making materials of war, played an indispensable part in averting the danger of inflation.
The economy of the United States has been kept sound and secure, so that the men who have fought for us overseas can return to a land of opportunity. And in the difficult days of reconversion which lie ahead, these savings will provide an invaluable backing of mass buying power to start civilian production on its way.

My talk to you this evening is, as you know, somewhat in the nature of a valedictory. I should like, therefore, to say a few words directly to the men and women who have so long and so faithfully and so generously given their time, their skill and their energy to the War Bond Program.

To you belongs the full credit for what has been achieved. The service you have rendered is beyond my praise; the gratitude you have earned is beyond my power of expression. But you have found, I know, the only reward that you have ever sought: the sense of partnership in a great national undertaking.

I want to pay special tribute to the men and women who have been the leaders of the War Finance Division. Under the captaincy of Ted A. Canfield, they have worked devotedly to bring about the magnificent record of the War Bond Program. My warm appreciation goes also to my chief fiscal aid, the Undersecretary of the Treasury, Daniel W. Bell.
I thank all of you from the bottom of my heart for the cooperation you have given to me. I know that your cooperation will be continued with the same devotion and zeal under the able leadership of my successor, Judge Fred Vinson.

There is still a titanic task before us.

In taking leave of you, I should like to express one thought, one testament of faith. Whatever the tasks, whatever the problems of the future, I know that we shall meet and overcome them as we have in the past through the methods and of freedom, through the voluntary unity of free men.

The Columbia Broadcasting System in cooperation with the United States Treasury presents the dramatic story of "The Seven Challenges," with Martin Gabel as narrator, with music by Jack Miller, and an exclusive final report on the Eighty-eighth "Our Loan by Ted R. Sunble, National Director of War Finance and the Secretary of the Treasury, the Honorable Henry Morgenthau, Jr.

INTRODUCTORY

They said it couldn't be done. They said the people were too full of victory. They said the people were tired of war bond drives. They said the people were more interested in meat, gas rations, vacation spending. They were good people doing all this saying, substantial people and learned people - they believed they were of the people. But they lacked the faith of the people they so ardently claimed to represent. For the little people were still the people of the big faith. They were the busy people - the working people - they had no time to be cynics or skeptics or worrybirds. They could take anything and everything. Yes - they could take "The Seven Challenges." (MUSIC CUT) Listen for a moment to the Secretary of the Treasury, Mr. Henry Morgenthau, Jr., speaking from Washington, D. C.
Thank you, Mr. Sabel. You know a lot of people think the Treasury Department just gets an idea, all of a sudden, that maybe this month or next month would be a fine time to have a war bond drive. I wish it were that easy to decide upon. It has not been easy either on you or on us, and by us I mean the six million volunteer war bond salesmen and the staff of the War Finance Division of the Treasury. Planning a war bond drive is as complex work as planning a military campaign. It's hard work...grueling work. It means contact with every phase of our national life. As I said, Mr. Gambles!

You certainly are, Mr. Secretary. No program of the government is in more intimate contact with all people of every race, creed and color than the War Bond Drives these past years. And it's been the very faith of the Treasury Department in the people that has led us to undertake the drives we have, and to set the high quotas necessary to finance the war.

Yes, that faith of the people in their country has never wavered, and we, in turn, have never lost faith in the people. That fact along has made our burdens lighter than they might otherwise have been. We knew before the Seventh War Loan began, that many people felt that once the war was over in Europe there would be less need for Bond buying. But we knew too that once we explained why the need was still as great the people would listen and understand.

Of course, that's where the cynics scoffed - for they claimed that with one war out of the way it would be hard for Americans to understand why the costs wouldn't go down.

And out of our long discussions with the Army, the Navy, and all those charged with the prosecution of the war came the reasons for the urgency and the need to support the Seventh.

Yes - for we told facts only. That Iwo Jima was only an outpost of the Japanese Empire. That Japan's manpower was still largely untouched by the war.

We told the story of the battle of supply - how it takes three ships in the Pacific to do the work of one in the Atlantic. Once these facts became clear to the people understood.

And yet the Mighty Seventh War Loan which, of necessity, was planned months before VE Day, had to overcome what truly have been the most stupendous 90 days in the history of the war. When I opened the Seventh War Loan, I said it would be a challenge to our self-restraint, our self-discipline, our self-control - the greatest challenge to American democracy. There were many great stories and issues that were headline news. Some of them minimized the need for a war loan; some of them were so overpowering as to dwarf all other news. In effect, there were seven great challenges to the successful carrying out of the Seventh War Loan. What they were and how well you carried them out, you will now hear.

MUSIC: INTRODUCTORY ... SHOULD HAVE A QUICK FEELING ... HOLD UNDER.

GABEL: The Homefront — sometimes placid, sometimes volcanic was the first great challenge. Complacent one moment, and the next — full of bickerings and full of a unity sometimes profound — the homefront was the strange paradox. Aware of war — the homefront was also aware of peace.

MAN: Never mind Bonds! What’s wrong with Washington! Where is all the meat? Why is getting it anyway?

GABEL: It’s the black market. But he doesn’t see how it matters if he buys a good steak for twice the ceiling price. He’s only one, he says, so it’s everyone’s fault but his.

MUSIC: BRIEF OVERDOSE

MAN: It’s about time we had more gasoline. I’m getting tired of driving around the block and calling it a day.

GABEL: He’s really a patriotic chap, but the warm weather is in him. He’s got the urge to go spinning along the highway — even without gas coupons.

MUSIC: BRIEF OVERDOSE

MAN: I want to get back to manufacturing peacetime products. And if I can’t get the material one way — then I’ll get it another.

GABEL: His boy is at the front — and he’d call you a ...- what if you said he wasn’t back of his one hundred percent. These were typical remarks of the nine hundred days — though not necessarily representative of the people. And yet the discord made for a challenge.

MUSIC: CROSS PAGES OVER ABOVE TO —

SOUND: TELEPHONE KEY — HOLD UNDER

REPORTER: (OVER SOUND) Monday, April 23rd. The government today has taken action to increase the supply of meat for the public.

REPORTER: Friday, April 27th — Chester Bowles, Price Administrator, plans drastic fight on black markets with help of Justice and Treasury agents.

REPORTER: Friday, May 11 — seventy-three War Production Board controls revoked by Chairman Julius Krug.

REPORTER: National brawns lifted! Surplus eliminated! Running been revoked! 505 more gas for “A” card holders in June!}

SOUND: CROSS FADE TO

MUSIC: HOLD UNDER — MAINTAIN OVER FEELING.

GABEL: Yes, some things are headed by V-E Day. There’ll be more cigarettes, half again as many tires, and 200,000 new autos for passenger use by January 1st. And the biggest harvest of wheat in world history - and more fruit and the prospects for potatoes are good - and the Seventh War Loan has reached 30% of its goal.

Read all about it! Morgenthau out for tax cheats.
(CFADING) Read it here. Morgenthau warns wholesalers,
Get your paper...

(OVER PAGE) The New York Times, Friday, June 1st;

Listen to this, dear,

What is it?

It says here - "The Government set a grim watch on cash deals throughout the country today to catch tax cheaters.

Well!

Secretary Morgenthau ordered all financial institutions in the country to report the name and address of anybody engaging in a suspiciously large currency transaction.

Good! I don't like buying bonds when other people don't even pay taxes!

Yes - in no time at all, 20,000 tax evasion cases are under investigation - arrests and indictments follow promptly. And President Truman endorses the Morgenthau request for 5,000 new Treasury agents!

The Homefront is the first of the seven challenges. And through it rolls the Mighty Seventh. There is talk of reconversion cutbacks and unemployment. There are tax cheat and racketeers - speculators and profiteers.

And yet, while they are being tracked down and punished, the little people of big faith - the honest people back the Seventh - and in one year your out $60,000,000,000 in taxes to prosecute the war! Yes, the people met the challenge of the Homefront!

April 9th. Remember that date? Remember anything that happened on that date?

Sure - we all remember that. British troops were shelling Bremen. The Red Army was in Vienna. American Tanks were past Hanover. But there was something else that happened April 9th.
The Seventh War Loan pre-drive.

That's it - not startling news to be sure and instead of page one it landed on page twenty-one. But without the pre-drive, without the backing of the 30,000,000 workers enrolled in the payroll savings plan, the stories on page one might have been less cheering. Yet - page one was the second great challenge. The challenge of

V-D Day! Page one and the headline news from the loudspeakers.

High Army officials told Senators today that the end of organized fighting in Germany probably would come within a few days.
GABLE: The date - Friday, April the 13th.

MUSIC: HITTING STING

GABLE: Not a good date for the Germans. Nor the best time for War Loan Drives. It's in the air now. Mass roundup of prisoners is taking place.

VOICES: SPEAK IN EXCITED CROWD MURMURS

The feeling of optimism blighted by the Belgian Bulge of December grows. The people are getting victory conscious. They sense it. They feel it. Cocks are popping. Rolls are pealing.

VOICES: IN QUITE LOUD HURRY

EISENHOWER: (PROJECTS) Every enemy force must be erased before we celebrate!

GRADUALLY DIMITISH

GABLE: (Over above) It's the voice of Eisenhowe... the people listin... They go back to work. Back to waiting.

MAN: How much longer 'fore we celebrate V-E Day?

EISENHOWER: Not much longer . but how about putting some of that overtime into extra Bond deductions?

MUSIC: STIRRING CROSS FADE TO

GABLE: She does - because the plant forever, the workers, the unions are busy talkin...

VOICES: Up your quota... Take an extra hundred! Buy more Bonds! Up your quota! (ALL JOIN HERE) Up your quota! Up your quota! Up your quota!

MUSIC: SPEAK IN THE SAME EFFECT THAN TO BE

GABLE: One week later Adolf Hitler has a birthday. His last.

The Allies celebrate it by capturing Nurnberg - the Nazis shrine city. The city where the party leaders stood in the gigantic stadium.

EISENHOWER: (ON MICRO) Well Hitler!

GABLE: But no more. There once there were hundreds of thousands; there is one. A lone G. I. goose-steping for the fun of it.

SOUND: FEET OF LOW FOOTSTEPS THROUGH MICRO

EISENHOWER: OVER) And where once the Fuehrer stood, a U. S. soldier, Harold L. Mershon of Washington D. C. stands. He places a comb to his upper lip - stretches out his hand - the final mockery - the rotent courteous!

EISENHOWER: THEY GRADUALLY INCREASE IN VOLUME AND EXCITMENT UNDER FOLLOWING

GABLE: It's coming now - the whole world is waiting.

EISENHOWER: Money doom is near.

GABLE: That's Eisenhowe...

DOEBELS: We must save Berlin - or die!

GABLE: That's Doebels.

HITLER: My Western Armies are no more than guerrillas.

GABLE: Hitler. The Russians are inside Berlin. The Americans are nearby. Patton's tanks are running wild. But it's not yet time.
One man can stop the rising tide - the thousand peace rumors. The man in the White House - Harry S. Truman.

MAN: OKAY TO SILENCE WHEN...

Thus do the voices of a hundred million Americans speak.

MAN: Thus do the voices of a hundred million Americans speak. And ten thousand who gathered in New York's Times Square go home. But the irresistible tide sweeps on.

MAN 24: The Russian flag flies tonight over the Reichstag.

MAN 24: American troops have captured Munich!

MAN 24: Stand up before Buckingham for King George's VE Day speech!

MAN 24: The people are not again - but there is no surprise. The war was over a week ago - the celebrations have been checked. The first is gone. Except for a brief moment in New York.

MAN: AD LIB - "War is over! Hey - this time it's VE for sure!"

(GIVE ARIE) Yes - VE for sure. And a handful of soldiers - casualties - slitting from an Air Transport Command bow their heads to prayer.

MAN: (OFF) Hey! Maybe now we can celebrate!

MAN: But the people go home. To work, work, work and to pray like their President asks them to. And to keep the Seventh. And the people did and have - for in one year they turned out the goods - provided the money that gave thirty billion dollars to the U.S. Army. Yes - the people met the second challenge - the Challenge of VE Day!

MUSIC: TYPICAL MARCH UP TO BAND

MAN: The celebrating gets a new lease - for men who have won the victories are coming home.

MUSIC: OUT

MAN: The Army announces plans to discharge two million veterans within your year! We've got to give our men and our generals the kind of reception they're entitled to.

MAN: It's not easy to see that the Mighty Seventh is the best way to demonstrate one's enthusiasm.

MUSIC: I want to wave a flag and throw some paper!

WOMAN: How about waving a Band?

WOMAN: Oh, all right.

WOMAN: CHEERING

FAR HOME COMES GENERAL HODGES - on his way to the Pacific.

MAN: There he is! General Clark!

WOMAN: How do you think he'll wear his pearl revolvers?

WOMAN: The people lay out the welcome mat for snubnosed General George S. Patton - the two fisted hardnosed gun-toting leader. And the toughest soldier of them all brushes aside the tears which well up from his heart.
VOICES: Out over the ocean.

MOTHER: You're just my baby boy you know.

DAVID: That's a proud 78-year-old mother who welcomes home her soldier boy in Beaverstown, Pa. He's the commander of U.S. Strategic Air Forces in Europe — his mother's baby — General Carl Spaatz.

DAVID: And now the whole world pays its tribute to Dwight David Eisenhower.

MUSIC: Speak in American — hold down for our listeners.

BRITISH: The people of London and England welcome you!

MISSOURI: The people of Missouri are proud to present you this medal!

DAVID: And back home — in New York — Washington — Kansas City and Abilene there are plans.

VOICES: (OVER ANOTHER) Hi Ike, welcome home! Good old Ike! etc.

DAVID: (OVER ANOTHER) And the people of Washington turn out for Eisenhower Day — an "E" Bond for Eisenhower is the rallying call with tens of thousands waving paper — good paper — "E" Bond paper at General Ike. And then to the Capitol of the United States — he stands before the Congress.

EISENHOWER: My imagination cannot picture a more dramatic moment than this in the life of an American. I stand before the elected federal law makers of our great Republic, the very core of our political life and a symbol of those things we call the American heritage. To preserve that heritage, three million American citizens at your behest, have faced resolutely every terror the ruthless Nazi

MUSIC: Tidal Wave Sweep Up to Be

GIEL: April was a lovely month - People were beginning to enjoy the soft bristles - it was a time for things to grow and bloom. It was a time for gathering new strength. There was a man who felt that need. He sat down - even as you and I - to breathe in the new life for the strenuous days ahead. He raised his hand upwards to his head and said...

FOR: I have terrific hands...)

SOUND: SWING IN HEARTBEAT UNDER

GIEL: The President of the United States slumped in his chair. Gently he was carried to his bed. In the little cottage a doctor kept his vigil while the big kindly heart told out its final beat of history.

SOUND: IN CLEANS - THEN SUDDENLY STOPS

CHURCHILL: Its a loss, indeed a bitter loss to humanity that these heartbeats are still silent.

So commented Winston Churchill.

GIEL: (FLASH) The President is dead. It was April 12, 1945.

DAILY: The London Daily News correspondent was handed a brief message. Immediately he went on the air.

GIEL: There were the words. Now came the time to believe them. Now came the time to find out how truly the real man was missed.

SOUND: BRING IN TRAIN - HOLD UNDER

GIEL: (OVER ABOVE) Once again a train pulls out of Warm Springs...

GIEL: (SPEAK) - slowly it moved through the lovely Southlands while the world wept.

CHINESE: Chiang K'ai-Shek quit his seat when notified of the great tragedy. He left his food untouched to relapse into sorrowful meditation.

STALIN sent this: Mrs. Eleanor Roosevelt, Washington: Please accept my sincere condolences on the occasion of the death of your husband and an expression of sympathy in your great sorrow. Sign it - Josef Stalin.

DAILY: My order is - all the flags of France and the Empire are to be flown at half mast.

SOUND: CROSS FADE TRAIN AND BELLS

GIEL: In the White House; Mrs. Franklin Roosevelt tells Harry S. Truman the news.

THUR: That can I do?

RBS. FOR: Tell us what we can do - Is there anyway we can help you?

GIEL: And in the green hills of Hyde Park the church bells toll - and bring the news of the great loss to the President's neighbors.

GIEL: CROSS FADE BELLS AND TRAIN

GIEL: The people lined the tracks through which the train passes to pay their final respects. Through the night they stood - by the thousands, and they wept for the man with the cigarette holder, the man with the Scottie, the man with the flaxing cape, the patriot who was above all the man of the people.

SOUND: TRAIN PASSES OUT OVER LONG ABOVE

FOR: All that is within me cries out to go back to my home on the Hudson.

MUSIC: SPEAK

GIEL: Home had come the voyager. Home to the green hills, the blue Hudson and the rose garden.
Gabel: Yes 85,000,000 Americans hold bonds - and in this one year have bought 97 and a half billion dollars worth of government securities. The people met the Fourth Challenge as their fallen leader knew they would.

Music: THEMATIC BRIDGE BEGINS UP TO B.G.

Gabel: The country - vigorous and resilient - quickly came to know a new figure. He was a dapper little man with a quick smile, and the country was to learn that he was also the decisive man, and a man you would feel at ease with anywhere.

Music: OUT

Truman: To the People of the United States...

Gabel: It's a new voice.

Truman: It has pleased God in his infinite wisdom to take from us the immortal spirit of Franklin Delano Roosevelt, the thirty-first President of the United States. The leader of his people in a great war, (FADD) he lived to see the assurance of the victory but not to share it. He lived to see the first foundations of the free and peaceful world to which his life was dedicated...

Gabel: (OVER FADE) There are no Groton - Harvard overtones. The voice is strictly Mid-West - but good.

Truman: You know - I like his sound.

Gabel: People everywhere did.

Truman: (FADES ON OVER LAST LINE) ...and brings their hopes to task. (FILL ON) Now, therefore, I, Harry S. Truman, President of the United States of America, do appoint Saturday next, April 11th, the day of the funeral service for the dead President, (FADES) as a day of mourning and prayer through...
Truman: Out the United States.

Gable: (OVER FADE) It's said. There is a new President. How to get to know him - to hear him - to see him. To get on to him - that becomes a major interest among the peoples of the United States - and the world.

SOUND: TELEGRAPH KEY - UNDER

Tom: Hundreds of thousands lined the way to the White House to watch the funeral rites. The family and friends followed the caisson. And so did President Truman.

Doug: President Truman - his face frozen in grief - watched as Franklin Roosevelt was returned to the soil.

SOUND: KEY OUT

Gable: A new team was forming. And the President was making other news - big news.

Man 1: President Truman has sent Harry Hopkins to see Stalin.

Man 2: Joseph E. Davies has gone on another mission - to London.

Man 3: President Truman meets with former President Herbert Hoover.

SOUND: PLANE FADES IN

Gable: And the President continues to hit the headlines. He flies to the West Coast - to Olympia, Washington, ostensibly to fish - and to get his speech ready for the San Francisco Conference. And while he flies speculation - rumors fly with him - The answers come quickly. (PLANE OUT) The Big Three will meet - in Berlin. Mr. Stettinius gets the highest office within the President's gift - American representative on the Security Council. And James Byrnes becomes Secretary of State. Says the President at the closing session of the San Francisco Parley.

Truman: By this charter, you have moved toward the goal for which that gallant leader in this second world struggle worked and fought and gave his life...Franklin D. Roosevelt.

music: HIT - then to B.G.

Gable: The new President has come through with flying colors. And the country has not the Fifth of the Seven Challenges. Not it by ending the fiscal year with the largest Treasury balance in history - $21,697 million dollars.

music: THEMATIC BRIDGE SUSPEND UP TO B.G.
GABE: Decisive action was taking place in the preparations for the International Security Conference. The day the 7th War Loan pre-drive campaign began, there also began ten days of intensive preliminary meetings among the U.S. delegates, and decisions were made by that able group.

MAN 1: It is our desire that the majority shall rule our delegation at San Francisco.

MAN 2: We must be certain that justice shall be a basic part of the world charter.

MAN 3: The Monroe Doctrine and Pan-American unity must not be infringed upon.

Yes, there was argument and discussion - but unity was born out of it. And importance came when Britain's Eden and Russia's Molotov joined America's Stettinius.

SOUND: (OVER ANUSE) The trains roared across the country. From the North, the South, through the great Central States the delegates came. And overhead, across the rivers, the farm belt, over the Grand Canyon - from the Atlantic to the Pacific came other delegates, and on April 20th.

SOUND: GAVEL

GABE: The Conference had begun.

MAN: How to halt an aggressor looms as big issue.
At the end of the first day's fighting Marine casualties could be counted on the fingers of two hands. So could the total counted Japanese dead.

Meanwhile at home and on the beachhead we ponder the unfathomable ways of the Japanese. We had gone in several thousand yards those first days. But a few days later progress was measured by inches and the casualties were piling up.

Overall casualties of U.S. forces now total 16,904.

That was thirty days after we walked in - when it looked like a pushover.

And oh yes - the Japanese radio had been boasting about a special attack corps - called "Kamikaze." They were brushed off too - until.

FHJr: Oh, you've got this thing with him -- I mean you don't have to -- you know.

F: I know I'm not being -- I'm being perfectly honest about it, I'd be delighted to have you.

FHJr: Well, I tell you....

F: Or if that isn't convenient, I can come to lunch on Friday.

FHJr: Friday I've got Wilson, I wouldn't want to change him.

F: So, I think you shouldn't. Well, why don't you come tomorrow anyway, just....

FHJr: Are you in town Saturday, or are you going out of town?

F: I expect to be here Saturday. Let's see -- maybe we can do it Saturday?

FHJr: Now are you fixed Saturday?

F: Well, the only thing - to be perfectly honest, the only thing I do Saturday is play golf at lunch time.
Operator: McKellar

Senator: McKellar: Hello.

N: Hello.

M: Senator, I need help and I don't think anybody else can help, but you can give it to me.

N: What kind is it?

M: Well, there is something going on about this Bretton Woods which I just don't understand. Have you got a moment?

N: Yes, sir.

M: Senator Wagner has tried every way he can to get it on the floor, see? And he told our boys yesterday there was something funny going on, and I understand that Senator Wagner wants it also, but for some reason or other Senator Barkley didn't want it until Monday. Now the schedule is so tight...

N: Was it to come up tomorrow?

M: Well, that is when I'd like it to come up. Hello?

N: Yeah.

M: Because I think, you see, with the House going away there is a chance that we'll get - we'll just get sidetracked and forgotten.

N: Well, I'll tell you what I'll do - I don't know anything about it - that doesn't come before any of my committees and I don't know anything about it, but I'll find out about it and call you back.

M: Well, as the President told you, you have one of the most influential positions there.

N: Well, I'll look into it and see.

M: And I assure you I can be very appreciative.

N: All right, thank you very much.

Senator: Mr. Secretary.

N: Yes, Senator.

M: This is McKellar.

N: Yes, sir.

M: I'll tell you what -- they are all up in conference - not conference, in the hearings on the San Francisco....

N: Letter...

M: And I've just been able to talk to them, and I've talked to several.

N: Yes.

M: Now, they plan to take up the Bretton Woods on Monday, and they are going to dispose of that before they take up the San Francisco Charter.

N: I see.

M: And Barkley says that he is convinced that the Bretton Woods conference won't take over three days.

N: I see.

M: And he said that he was going to keep the Senate here to pass the Bretton Woods agreement first, and then take up the San Francisco and pass that, and there is no danger in the world - he has already given our notice and they are obliged to take that vote this week, in the hearings in the other case, but it will be promptly taken up on next Monday. I believe that is correct.

N: Well...

M: I don't think you need to have any apprehension at all that the Bretton Woods conference won't go through.

N: Well, my only worry was that there might have been a little sense gone there, and...
N: Oh, no. I don't think there is the slightest doubt about it. I talked to him, George and Connelly.

NMJr: Yeah.

N: They said that if we took up the Bretton Woods tomorrow, we would have to postpone the hearings and they expect to get through the hearings on this this week and that next week they'll take up Bretton Woods on Monday and dispose of that before they take up the other.

NMJr: Well, that is the first time I've heard it in a clean-cut manner.

N: Well, that is what they told me.

NMJr: I believe it now.

N: Well, I'm glad - that's all right. I'm sure it will work out that way.

NMJr: Well, I'm ever so much obliged.

N: And if you hear anything else that is dissentary about it, let me know.

NMJr: I'll do that right away.

N: All right.

NMJr: Ever so much obliged.

NMJr: Lux.

Mr. Luxford: Yes, Mr. Secretary.

NMJr: Uh, got a little argument here. Would you mind telling me which one of these things you thought would come first next week? Hello?

Li: The way things look now.

NMJr: Yeah - no, what did you say this morning?

Li: You mean on the Charter?

NMJr: Yeah.

Li: I told you this morning that it looked like the Charter would come first....

NMJr: Yeah.

Li: But that isn't by any means certain.

NMJr: But that was your impression?

Li: Well, that's right, but on the basis of the information now, it is pretty close to neck and neck.

NMJr: No, it's not.

Li: No?

NMJr: No, my plan worked out.

Li: Did it?

NMJr: It's no neck and neck.

Li: Good enough.

NMJr: Bretton Woods is definitely slated Monday morning, no if, and, or buts.

Li: Good enough.

NMJr: No if, and, or buts.

Li: I'm glad to hear that - very much.

NMJr: Well, I just wanted to check with you as to what you thought it was.
L: Well, that is what I told you.
MN Jr: Yeah, but you also thought it was hopeless.
L: I never think it is hopeless.
MN Jr: Well, hopeless as far as my doing anything.
L: Yeah, I do agree to that.
MN Jr: Yeah. Well, I think I made a little contribution.
L: Well, keep your fingers crossed now.
MN Jr: No, I think on this thing - this fellow went to Connelly, Barkley, - (who else did he say) - George, Connelly and Barkley.
L: It's good enough.
MN Jr: And they all four of them agreed this name Monday morning first.
L: Good enough.
MN Jr: And would be put through.
L: Good enough.
MN Jr: And the other thing is sidetracked.
L: Good enough. That's very nice.
MN Jr: What?
L: That's very nice.
MN Jr: But I wouldn't say anything to Wagner - let him hear that himself.
L: Yeah.
MN Jr: It would be interesting to let him hear it and let him tell it to you as a great secret.
L: Yeah, I will.
MN Jr: But it was Connelly, Barkley, George and McKeller agreed that ours comes first.
L: Swell.

Mr. Ted Eubank:

Hello.

Mr. Secretary:

Speaking.

I just wanted to tell you that in my absence, Lane and Little will both be available for anything that you want them for, and I've given the story on who is in charge, so that if you want anything over here.

Mr. Eubank:

You're going to be in New York?

Mr. Secretary:

I'm going to be in New York tonight and tomorrow, and then I'll be back here Sunday night.

Mr. Eubank:

How did you arrange the thing to get New York and Washington over?

Mr. Secretary:

Well, it was very easy. They were within a very close margin, you see, and we have the jurisdictional jurisdiction of money raised through the local allocation of money raised through the Armed Services when we allocate it to the various states.

Mr. Eubank:

That's an arbitrary matter and we do it on the basis of the populations that they have represented in the services. We also do it on the basis of the number establishments that they have in their states, and we do it according to a formula, but it is subject to some variations - some flexibility, so it was perfectly proper.

Mr. Secretary:

I see, O.K.

Mr. Eubank:

All right, sir.

Mr. Secretary:

Thank you.

Mr. Eubank:

Goodbye.

Secretary Morgenthau and Justice Roberts Have Resigned.

The Secretary Is Expected to Receive an Office With the World Organization.

Washington D. C., July 8.

Secretary of the Treasury, Henry Morgenthau and Supreme Court Justice, Owen J. Roberts have announced their decisions to resign from their offices. This announcement was made by President Truman.

The President said that Morgenthau will remain in office until his return from the conference of the Big Three, which is expected to take place in July. The President was asked whether there is any truth in the unconfirmed report circulating here, that Morgenthau will be appointed American representative in the International Financial Council, created pursuant to the Bretton Woods Agreement. The President said that he could not give an answer to this question at the present time. Inasmuch as the administration of the Treasury has been very satisfactory, it is quite probable that Morgenthau will be given a very high and important office.

Asked about the successor to the Secretary of the Treasury, the President stated that he has already chosen a successor and that he will announce his choice as soon as he returns from the Conference of the Big Three, which will take place in Europe.

Will Clayton called me up last night and he wanted to know whether Glasser could be in London on the first of August. Will you please speak to me about it? I told him I thought that the whole matter was settled. Then he asked whether it was all right with me if he talked with the English about the future of their finances. I said that I thought that was up to my successor to say. He said, "No, you are still in charge." I said that he should use his own judgment because I knew he would do what he wanted to anyway.
Office Memorandum
UNITED STATES GOVERNMENT

TO:  Chief, Washington, D.C.

FROM: AIG Fitzgerald, Protective Research Section, The White House

DATE: July 11, 1945

SUBJECT: Preliminary report on analysis of bacon sprayed by an "Edig Anti-Virus" and analysis of the liquid itself alleged to be the Anti-Virus

CONFIDENTIAL

Preliminary report was received by telephone from Mr. John F. Williams, Chief, Division of Laboratories, Bureau of Customs, Washington, D.C., relative to chemical analysis of two sides of bacon shipped by express to Secretary of the Treasury, U.S.A. Treasury Bldg., Washington, D.C., by Mr. R. Meyer, Sr., of the Meyer Laboratory and Clinic, Shreve, Texas. One of the sides of bacon was said to have been sprayed as a test with an alleged "Edig Anti-Virus" claimed to be a preventive of mold and an Anti-Virus for Polio, Mumps, Pox, Flu, etc. Chemical analysis was also made of the so-called liquid "Edig Anti-Virus" itself, 20 bottles of which were also shipped to the Secretary on June 29, 1945 for demonstration. It was suggested in a cover letter that the Secretary supervise the administering of the Anti-Virus by Army or Navy Doctors to 50 or more cases of Polio, Flu, etc., and unknown fever, and observe that the cases so treated would promptly recover.

Mr. Williams stated that the bacon was found to contain the normal elements in both sides, and that no arsenic or other metallic poison was present.

Analysis of 3 four oz. bottles of liquid alleged to contain the "Edig Anti-Virus" developed that it is a cough syrup expectorant containing menthol and peppermint oil, non-alcoholic. No opium or narcotic drug was present and no arsenic or metallic poison. It contained 35% sugar, 5% protein (nitrogen) glasside.

Mr. Williams will submit a written report on receipt of complete analysis estimated to take about two weeks time.

The Honorable
Henry Morgenthau, Jr.
Secretary of the Treasury
Washington, D. C.

Dear Henry:

This is just a note to remind you of our telephone conversation last evening about Harold Glasser. I hope you will see to it that Harold arrives in London about August 1st to assist in certain conversations with the British prior to the U.N. Council meeting.

If agreeable to you, I will appreciate it also if you will tell Harold what you told me last night that so far as you are concerned, you are willing to leave to my discretion whether and to what extent I may discuss tentatively and informally British financial problems.

With renewed assurances of my high esteem and hoping that you and Mrs. Morgenthau will have a good summer,
I remain

Sincerely yours,

Hello.

Mr. Sidney Hillman: Hello.

HH Jr.: I'm very good. I'm in town and I just wanted to say hello.

Hi: Well, that is very nice. How have things been with you?

HH Jr.: Very good... extremely, really things are moving quite satisfactorily in things I'm interested in.

Hi: Well, anytime you have time, I have time.

Hi: Well, you know, -- would it be all right for me to drop in on you sometimes today?

HH Jr.: Sure.

Hi: All right, what time would it be ....?

HH Jr.: Eleven-thirty.

Hi: Eleven-thirty -- I'll drop in on you at eleven-thirty.

HH Jr.: Be glad to see you.

HH Jr.: Bye.

---

...so the Senators are getting busy.

Mr. Luxford: Yeah.

HH Jr.: I don't know whether there is anything I can do about that, but I saw a statement that Taft was trying to postpone the thing because Byrnes didn't know anything about Breeton Woods.

Hi: Byrnes didn't, eh?

HH Jr.: No. If my memory serves me correct, in his report that he made on the third of January, Byrnes recommended Breeton Woods.

Hi: January 3rd.

HH Jr.: See? That's a pretty good memory.

Hi: That's a perfect memory.

HH Jr.: And if that is true I would get that to Wagner, see?

Hi: Sure.

HH Jr.: And I think you -- well, of course, what's his name -- Byrnes and Vinson haven't expressed themselves. This is a delegate...

Hi: He testified.

Hi: What?

HH Jr.: Vinson testified in the House.

HH Jr.: Well, the other thing, I'll send back this thing to you, but the Byrnes thing -- I'm almost sure it is in his annual report.

Hi: I will check it right away.

Hi: Right.

Hi: All right, sir.
Jr: Hello.
Judge Rosenman: Hello.
Jr: Hello.
R: Yes, Henry.
Jr: Sam, if you are free tomorrow morning, I would like to continue that discussion.
R: All right. Let's see - I have an appointment with General O'Day at 10, and then I have another one at 11.
Jr: How about eleven?
R: Eleven is all right.
Jr: I'll look forward to seeing you.
R: All right, fine.
Jr: Eleven o'clock.
R: Yes.
Jr: Thank you.
R: O.K.

Mr. Stuart Shotwell: Hello.
Jr: Hello, good afternoon.
Shotwell: Hello, Mr. Shotwell, good afternoon. Look, Mr. Shotwell, did Mark call you up about all of our securities?
Jr: Well, he called up but he was very vague about it, he didn't say anything except that you were going to call up.
Shotwell: He's been in the family 50 years. For the first 40 years he was with Mr. Patman, I guess it taught him to be very secretive - or maybe he was born that way. Anyway, he is a good man. Well, the point is, we have them here in the Treasury and I want to send them up to New York, and I would like to send them up to you. It seems to me that is the sensible thing to do.
Jr: Yes.
Shotwell: If you will agree to take care of them for me.
Jr: I'd be delighted to, sir.
Shotwell: I don't know what the charge is, but whatever it is you let me know later on.
Jr: Yeah, well, that will be all right. At least 1% - we'll wait until H&L gets back and see what he thinks. We'll get him in on it.
Shotwell: O.K.
Jr: All right, sir, fine. Now, you are just going to send them....
Shotwell: I think we will send them up Monday. I've got a truck going up anyway with a guard on it, you see?
Jr: I see.
Shotwell: Can those things be insured?
Jr: Oh, we can have them insured here at our end under our blanket policy, but I don't know about transportation by truck.
Shotwell: No, I mean in transit.
S: They can be insured if they come by registered mail.

HMJr: Well, there are so many of them.

S: I never heard of insuring them by trucks, but I don't know why not if it is a Treasury truck. I would assume that it could be, but I'll have to check that up, sir, I can't tell you off-hand.

HMJr: Well, if they came by registered mail, they'd be insured?

S: If you will tell me what day they will be sent and the approximate total value of them, I can have them insured at this end, sir, by registered mail, yes.

HMJr: Well, don't we insure them at this end?

S: Well, I mean I can have them insured under our policy.

HMJr: Oh, I see. Well, they will be going most likely Monday, I guess.

S: Yes.

HMJr: Anyway, Mrs. Klotz will contact you on that.

S: All right.

HMJr: And we'll let you know. There is quite a batch of them.

S: Maybe we can insure them if they come by trucks, but I never heard of such a thing. I never had that experience of handling them that way before, and I don't know frankly whether that comes under our insurance policy, or not.

HMJr: Would you inquire?

S: I will. I will be prepared to tell Mrs. Klotz when she calls.

HMJr: Thank you.

S: All right, sir.

HMJr: Bye.

Mr. Cass: Hello.

HMJr: Morgenthau.

C: Yes, this is Cass Canfield.

HMJr: Yes.

C: You got the messages I passed on to Mrs. Klotz yesterday?

HMJr: That's right. Now let me just tell you where we stand.

C: Yeah.

HMJr: At other-by tomorrow Morris Krenz will have drawn up this - I can't think of any other name.

C: Yeah.

HMJr: Who will sign the contract between you - you will sign the contract for the trust fund. Hello?

C: Yeah.

HMJr: Because the trust fund will be the recipient of all monies.

C: Yeah.

HMJr: And he ought to be ready by tomorrow.

C: Fine.

HMJr: The delay has been on us trying to get time to telephone a couple of friends to go on as trustees.

C: Yeah.

HMJr: Well, I think by tonight I'll have those.

C: Fine.

HMJr: Then the other thing is - Loth will be in New York tomorrow for three of four days.

C: Oh, good.
HHWJr: And he's going to get in touch with you.
C: Well, I'll be very anxious to see him.
HHWJr: And I gathered from Morris that you want to go ahead.
C: Well, I do, yes. And, as I told Mrs. Klitz yesterday, I was greatly impressed by what I read at the tremendous difference between that material, and what I read in February just before I went abroad.
HHWJr: Yes.
C: And there's lots of factual material which I haven't seen anywhere else. I think that it will make a fine book.
HHWJr: Good. The so-called chapters one and two "On the Road to Peace." Hello?
C: Yeah.
HHWJr: That I let you have. Those are the only parts that I have worked on myself.
C: Yeah. Well, I can see a difference between those and the rest of it, but even the rest of it was a lot -- very different, as I say, from what I saw.
HHWJr: Well, the thought we have here now is that Loth, and I and some of my friends here are going to push this thing right through. We ought to be able to do it in a couple of weeks.
C: That's wonderful.
HHWJr: Couple of weeks. Now when it gets down to things like names and that sort of thing, well, we can talk about that anytime.
C: Yeah.
HHWJr: But is that enough for today?
C: I didn't quite catch what you said. I mean, what?
HHWJr: When it gets down to picking a name for the book.
C: Yeah. Well, we ought to -- yes, that doesn't have to be decided finally now, but we would, within the next few days, like to give some information to our salesmen so they can start selling it.
HHWJr: Well, I would say that if you, Morris and Loth could get together up there, maybe you people would have some ideas.
C: Yeah. Well, all right. What would you think for the moment? This would just be a tentative title, or calling the book, "Germany! Problem No. 1?"
HHWJr: Well, it didn't hit me so well. Mrs. Klitz mentioned it. She gave me your whole message.
C: Yeah.
HHWJr: It didn't hit me right.
C: We just want something to go on now. We can change it all right.
HHWJr: Well, if you wouldn't mind doing it, get hold of, see if you and Loth and Morris couldn't have lunch together or something like that.
C: Yeah, all right.
HHWJr: And then give me another ring.
C: Yeah.
HHWJr: Will you do that?
C: All right.
HHWJr: When it comes to things like titles -- I mean I'll bow to you. I'm not -- that is your profession.
C: Yeah.
HHWJr: I'm just -- I don't know what.
C: (Laughes)
HHWJr: What?
C: All right, fine.
HHWJr: I'm just the author.
C: Well, that is pretty important -- thing to be.
HAWJr: All right, but I'm awfully happy you are going to do it, and I expect to get some fun out of association with you.

C: Well, I'm very excited about it, and I think we can do a good job.

HAWJr: And if I get a little time, I will come up myself.

C: Well, that's grand and I can expect Lustig to probably call me tomorrow.

HAWJr: Lustig is going to call you tomorrow.

C: Swell.

HAWJr: Yeah.

C: All right, good.

HAWJr: Thank you.

C: Righto.

PRE-PRESS

Present: Mr. D. W. Bell
Mr. O'Connell
Mr. Fallis
Mr. Little
Mr. Peale
Mrs. Kiotts

MR. FUSSELL: Mr. Secretary, there are going to be a lot of questions asked on the basis of stories in the paper this morning. One is going to be asked on this Lustig case by several people. We have nothing that indicates any more than what you have said before. That is two million two hundred thousand plus several hundred thousand which would bring it up in the neighborhood of between two and three million, but nowhere near five million.

MR. O'CONNELL: But it is also true that the Secretary has never mentioned Lustig's name. We have never said we had a case on Mr. Lustig.

MR. FUSSELL: You will probably be asked several questions about the Roosevelt-Bartford case, and we have given a report of progress to the Committee on the Hill. We have not reported the things in the paper this morning we were supposed to have said. I think all we want to say is that we have reported progress.

MR. O'CONNELL: We have reported progress, and the ways and means Committee said they were satisfied.

H.A.W.Jr: Who went up?

MR. O'CONNELL: Norman Cann. He called me when he came back.
H.W.Jr.: And the Committee is satisfied?

MR. O'CONNELL: They are satisfied and issued a general press release yesterday which indicated that your Internal Revenue officials and indicated that the Internal Revenue officials had indicated they were not ready and it would take a few days for us to make a definite report to the Committee. The article in the paper this morning had a lot of off-the-record statements attributed to various Congressmen which didn't like very well with each other, and I think the less said about them would be better.

MR. FISSELL: You will probably be asked about Breston Woods.

MR. O'CONNELL: Taft has just finished making a long speech on the floor of the Senate opposing Breston Woods and suggesting that action on it be postponed and attacking both the Bank and the Fund. I just read another item on the ticker from Berkeley. In answering Taft, he rather ridiculed Taft's position and indicated we were going to take Breston Woods up on the floor of the Senate next Monday, which is one of the most encouraging direct words we have had in some time.

H.W.Jr.: I may not have time to report my conversation with Hekeller, who assured me of it. I asked Hekeller, and he assured me yesterday.

MR. WHITE: You are not going to mention that, are you?

H.W.Jr.: Yes, I am going to tell them what the payoff is.

MR. WHITE: They will probably ask you about the Export-Import Bank. It is a different bill from the one that went in.

MR. O'CONNELL: They didn't go into Executive Session until two o'clock this afternoon, and the Senate Finance Committee reported the Interim Tax Bill exactly as we wanted it. They cut out an amendment which was inserted in the House, but they agreed this morning, and are reporting to the Senate a new tax bill exactly as it was introduced by Doughton.

MR. FISSELL: Judge Vinson has been designated since you held your last press conference. You might be asked for comment on that.

In connection with the Seventh War Loan you might be asked how you feel about the proportion of subscriptions as to individuals and banks.

The Senate Finance Committee has approved the Reconversion Tax Bill with the exception of that railroad section. They are drafting a new one on that.

H.W.Jr.: What else have you got?

MR. FISSELL: I have this flock of new cases here.

H.W.Jr.: Gaston, do you think I should give them some new cases?

MR. GASTON: I think it would be a good idea. That thing about the Purple Heart box is a striking thing, but they are bound to find out who it is, I should think. It is about as dirty a case as I have seen.

H.W.Jr.: What is this one?

MR. FISSELL: It is the Crucible Steel Castings Company. It is a Milwaukee company.

MR. O'CONNELL: The investigation isn't quite completed yet, but it has been referred to for six weeks.

H.W.Jr.: Didn't we refer to that once before?

MR. O'CONNELL: No, sir.

MR. GASTON: Instead of saying he is the man who makes wooden boxes for Purple Heart medals, I would say it is a man who makes containers for medals for war heroes. I wouldn't identify him so closely.

MR. FISSELL: There are two there from one state, Mr. Secretary. I didn't think perhaps you would want to use more than one of them.
H.H.Jr: No, I will just pick out this one. Is this a good one?

Mr. Hill: It is fair.

H.H.Jr: Now, that other material there, I think, Mr. Secretary, could be given as a very welcome contrast to these gyps. They are people who have been going right along making donations ever since the war started. Now, there is a series of cases where voluntary disclosures were given.

I wouldn't give out the Purple Heart one if you are going to change it.

Mr. Hill: We haven't given out any figures on what the banks took for their savings accounts. We won't get the final report until Saturday. The figures we have will be substantially correct if you want to give them a billion three hundred million dollars.

H.H.Jr: They could subscribe up to how much?

Mr. Hill: They could subscribe up to ten percent of their savings accounts or five hundred thousand, whichever was smaller. If you want to give out that total, this is a good time to give it out.

Mr. Shumaker: Sylvia Porter is here. She would like to say hello to you after the conference.

TO Members of the 9:30 Staff
FROM Charles S. Bell

Attached is an outline of suggested topics which might be covered in arranging the twelve-year accomplishment story of Secretary Morgenthau's administration. It is thought desirable that all material be coordinated in one office, and Mr. Rees has already started assembling the material.

It is understood that Mr. Rees will call upon certain members of the staff to furnish specific information and will, to an extent, use the attached outline as a guide.
SUGGESTED TOPIC OUTLINE FOR THE STORY OF
SECRETARY MORGANTHA'S ADMINISTRATION OF THE FEDERAL DEPARTMENT

FEDERAL FINANCING PROGRAM

A. Scope and Volume
   1. Summary paragraph giving the total picture for the years of Secretary Morgantha's service; i.e., total borrowing, total expenditures, total receipts by classes.
   2. Paragraph on the controlling policies of the period; including, steady movement towards lower interest rates, theory of war financing by taxation to the greatest possible extent, spreading the base of the debt starting with the "Juby Bond" program in 1934.

B. TECHNIQUES OF WAR FINANCE
   1. Juby Bonds become Defense Bonds then War Bonds
   2. Voluntary system pursued...Secretary's opposition to any compulsory savings program
   3. Origin and development of the War Finance Staff
      a. Operating methods...patriotic service... advertising...volunteer aid by the citizenry,
      the banking community, etc.
   b. Records of the War Loan Drives
A. LEGISLATIVE ACTION

1. "Loophole" plugging of 1937
2. Elimination of tax exemption on Federal Securities
3. Rate changes and widening of the tax base during the period...summary figures on number of returns, total receipts, etc.
4. Collection at the source
6. Salary Stabilization program administered by Internal Revenue

B. ORGANIZATIONAL DEVELOPMENT OF THE BUREAU

1. Total figures on the size of the Bureau during the period
2. Decentralization of the Revenue Agents and Technical Staff
3. Current drive to expand and strengthen the Bureau

C. INTERNATIONAL MONETARY PROBLEMS

A. STABILIZATION POLICY

1. Summary statement on the policy approach to international money problems
2. "Gold Legislation"

3. Agreements with nations...France, England, China, Mexico, Ireland, etc.
4. Inter-American Conference results
5. Lease-Leasing of Silver
6. Technical assistance to other nations

ECONOMIC WARFARE

C. PROCUREMENT OF WAR MATERIALS
- 1. Strategic and critical materials stockpile
- 2. Procurement of Lend-Lease goods
- 3. Procurement of war relief supplies

LAW ENFORCEMENT PROGRAMS

A. ALCOHOL CONTROL...PROHIBITION DRIVE

B. NARCOTIC ENFORCEMENT

C. CUSTOMS AGAINST THE SMUGGLERS

D. SECRET SERVICE "WASH YOUR MONEY"
The following is quoted from the report:

"It is considered that Henry Lustig, S. Allan Lustig, Wallace Platt, Martin Platt, and Joseph Sobel in connection with the above two corporations. The additional taxes, penalties, and interest computed is almost $200,000 as to these two. There are five other corporations. Reports on three of them, which will recommend an additional million dollars, should be forthcoming in the next two weeks.

You will recall that this case originated on information furnished to the Bureau by the Department of Internal Revenue deposits by Lustig. If nothing else, this case aptly illustrates the advantage of the application of new methods and new techniques in tax investigations."
MR. LUXFORD: As far as Wagner is concerned, he didn't know.

H.M. JR: Well, McKellar spoke to Connally, George, and Barkley.

MR. O'CONNELL: I didn't know that. I knew you had spoken to McKellar. Then I had better tell the Commissioner to send over a recommendation on that.

H.M. JR: Yes, today. When it comes over, I will give McKellar a ring. I don't think there is any question that that is what did it. I don't think it is too expensive. I don't see any sense in holding it. I think it is what did do it. Does anybody want to argue?

MR. LUXFORD: The whole atmosphere changed right at that point.

H.M. JR: Did you sense it?

MR. LUXFORD: There was a complete change, because at that point Wagner couldn't get any assurance at all. In fact, the whole story was that Bretton Woods was going in second.

H.M. JR: It shows that virtue has its own reward.

MR. O'CONNELL: I didn't want to argue about it, but there is certainly no way of assuming that Mr. McKellar had it in, and that was true from the time it went in, and all you had to have was you speaking to McKellar and the bill going on the Floor next Monday. And Mr. McKellar can understand that we claim a certain amount of credit, and I thought it would have gone on the Floor whether you spoke to McKellar or not. But the debt is there, anyhow.

H.M. JR: Well, I feel I have a debt. There is nobody here for war bonds. Herbert, have you got something?

MR. O'CONNELL: I can't think of anything, no.

H.M. JR: Joe, do you have anything?

MR. O'CONNELL: I can't think of anything in particular.

H.M. JR: Roy, how about you?

MR. MCLAUGHLIN: I am just back from a fine vacation, thank you.

MR. D. W. MELL: He almost got called back.

H.M. JR: Well, we might as well stop right at Roy.

Who has got a law that says I should report to Congress if and when I feel like it, and so forth?

MR. O'CONNELL: I can get it in a minute.

(Mr. O'Connell leaves the conference temporarily.)

H.M. JR: Roy, we are going to get out a report. We are in the process of getting it out immediately. I wonder if we wanted to put anything in it like this. There are going to be recommendations in it. Do you have any tax recommendations you would like to put in?

MR. BLOUGH: How far ahead do you have in mind speaking here? Is it for immediate action?

H.M. JR: For the rest of my life.

MR. BLOUGH: It very well may be. I haven't given it any thought. It just came to my attention a few minutes ago.

MR. D. W. MELL: Post-war taxes.

MR. MCLAUGHLIN: Yes, I have nothing immediate, except of a minor character, on which you would wish to waste time.
H.M.JR: On a rather broad scale?

MR. BLOUGH: I rather think it would be, Mr. Secretary.
I would like to talk it over with the others in the next few hours.

H.M.JR: Then go to work on it?

MR. BLOUGH: Oh, absolutely.

H.M.JR: I don't think there would be any harm in talking and possibly consulting with Mr. Paul, Roy.

MR. BLOUGH: All right.

H.M.JR: That might be helpful. If you don't mind telling him--tell him you are doing it at my suggestion.

MR. BLOUGH: All right, sir.

H.M.JR: Russell, I think we got away all right with that yesterday, didn't we?

MR. FUSSELL: I think so. We didn't get any play in the Washington papers, but the ones in Baltimore used the story.

H.M.JR: My idea in getting away with it is that I get no publicity.

MR. FUSSELL: I would like to start out right now if I could with a localized plan for getting publicity in each section on the cases dealing particularly with that section.
I would like to be able to follow that up by getting a little help from collectors in passing out material that we will prepare for them.

H.M.JR: It is all right with me if it is all right with O'Connell and Buman.

MR. O'CONNELL: I have mentioned it to Buman. We will have to dish something up to them all ready, but he will not use the collectors, except on the basis that we give them something to do through the collectors, but on that basis I think he will without question go along on anything.

MR. FUSSELL: We have already given some material to the collectors to hand out.

MR. O'CONNELL: But I thought the first idea was to use local newspaper people to funnel stuff of interest to the people in the community and to them. That doesn't involve collectors.

MR. FUSSELL: No, but at the same time we have prepared to use four collectors.

MR. O'CONNELL: There is no trouble about things like that because we have to work through the Commission. The only thing he was reluctant about was giving collectors who know probably nothing about what goes on in their areas any kind of a free hand with respect to choosing the sort of publicity they give out. With that general proposition,
I think he might have some sympathy.

H.M.JR: It is all right with me. What else do you have?

MR. FUSSELL: That is all.

I have a very nice little story from Vanderpool I want to show you. Perhaps you will want to write a little letter.

MR. O'CONNELL: Here is the section you want: "The Secretary of the Treasury shall make report, and give information to either branch of the Legislature in person or in writing as may be required respecting all matters referred to him by the Senate or House of Representatives or which shall pertain to his office and shall generally perform all such services relative to the finances as he shall be directed to perform."

MR. D. V. BELL: That isn't the one. The one we had in mind was the one that says he shall submit an annual report on the state of finances from time to time. It was on the annual report of the state of finance.

MR. MACON: This gives him general power to report at any time on anything he wants to in person or in writing.
MR. O'CONNELL: This is the one you were talking about.

MR. GASTON: That is the one I was talking about.

H.W. Jr.: Have you got the right statute?

MR. O'CONNELL: I have the statute that Herbert was talking about and I was talking about, but I am apparently referring to the one on the annual report.

H.W. Jr.: Is there one on the annual report?

MR. O'CONNELL: I haven't found it, but I assume there is.

MR. D. W. HELL: The one that requires you to report on the state of finances annually and at any other time.

MR. LUXFORD: I just wondered whether your political will is going to have the chapter on full employment or a section on that.

H.W. Jr.: This isn't my political will; this is my political coming-out party.

MR. D. W. HELL: We do have a request from Senator Wagner for a report on the Full-Employment Bill which has been kicked around. Would you like to sign that before you leave as Secretary of the Treasury?

H.W. Jr.: Yes.

MR. D. W. HELL: We have two versions of it, and I think we can get together today and tomorrow and get it out. This is a thirteen-page letter that has been prepared and is rather technical. It is for your signature. Mr. Luxford suggested that you merely write a short letter hitting the high spots and then enclose the letter that has been prepared in the form of a memorandum by the technicians of the Department, which appeals to me.

MR. LUXFORD: I would like to retract from that letter a little bit. I would like to see a stronger letter. If it is a political coming-out party, I think it should be a stronger letter.

H.W. Jr.: Is there anything else?

MR. LUXFORD: No, sir.

H.W. Jr.: I am prepared Saturday and Sunday to read anything in this report as fast as you feed it to me.

MR. D. W. HELL: I doubt if you will have it by Saturday night, will you, George?

MR. HARRIS: We will have a piece by Saturday night. We will get the tenor on finances. We are pretty well along on that.

H.W. Jr.: I am prepared to read it and send it to the printers as fast as you can feed it to me.

MR. D. W. HELL: I doubt if you should send it to the printers. I think you ought to multilith it and sign it.

H.W. Jr.: Luxford, what I think you should do in view of these ten silver Senators meeting is, I think that the letter which I wrote and President Truman O.K.'d to issue the silver certificates--I think a copy of that should be given to Wagner and Barkley. Have you seen it, White?

MS. WHITE: I don't remember. Yes, I did, I remember it now.

H.W. Jr.: Well, I personally think that Barkley, Hurdock, and Wagner should all have copies of it.

MR. D. W. HELL: Hurdock has a copy of the memorandum on which the letter was based. And, by the way, we have done nothing on that. We are just kind of biding our time until Bretton Woods is through. I understand you didn't want it to show up in the dailies right away. We have to re-value the silver as we put out the silver certificate, and it would immediately show up that the silver is being re-valued. That raises a question.

H.W. Jr.: What we told Hurdock was that we could begin right away.
MR. D. W. BELL: I think we said it would take several days before, and I think we had an understanding among ourselves afterwards that we would go slowly and not explain it publicly.

H. M. JR: Joe, I think if that letter could be addressed on the silver certificates—to whom did I address that letter?

MR. D. W. BELL: That letter was addressed to the President approving it. It is for our files.

MR. O'CONNELL: What do you want me to do?

H. M. JR: I said it should go to Barkley, Wagner, and Murdock. Each should have a copy of it.

MR. O'CONNELL: I will do that.

H. M. JR: White and you fellows get together and decide how it should be done. Are you here, Harry?

MR. WHITE: I was listening fully.

MR. O'CONNELL: I have the annual report section. "It shall be the duty of the Secretary of the Treasury annually to lay before Congress, on the first day of the regular session thereof, an accurate, combined statement of the receipts and expenditures during the last preceding fiscal year of all public moneys, including those of the Post-Office Department, designating the amount of the receipts, whenever practicable, by ports, districts, and States, and the expenditures, by each separate head of appropriation."

Now, the other provision, of course, is much more apropos.

MR. D. W. BELL: That still isn't it.

MR. HARRY: That is a special report.

MR. O'CONNELL: Here is one: "The Secretary of the Treasury shall each year prepare and submit in his annual report to Congress estimates of the public revenue and the public expenditures for the fiscal year current, and also for the fiscal year next ensuing at the time said report is submitted, together with a statement of the receipts and expenditures of the Government for the preceding completed fiscal year."

Here is another one: "The Secretary of the Treasury shall lay before Congress at the commencement of each regular session—there are probably sixteen others in here.

MR. D. W. BELL: I will have that for you before lunch time.

H. M. JR: I was pleased that I remembered that Byrnes said he was ready for Bretton Woods.

MR. O'CONNELL: It is too bad that Barkley didn't know in answering Taft that Vinson was the Vice Chairman of the delegation.

MR. WHITE: Tobey did. Tobey took him to task on that point.

H. M. JR: Was it public on the floor?

MR. WHITE: On the floor Senator Taft said that it ought to be postponed and the new Secretary given an opportunity to become acquainted with Bretton Woods legislation. Senator Tobey answered him and said that it didn't matter how much the Senator understood, but that it was the Secretary of the Treasury's business, and he reminded him of Vinson's role in the Bretton Woods proposal.

MR. LEXINGTON: Mr. Secretary, there is one other point.
We got word yesterday that Crowley has apparently been kicking up the traces on the Export-Import Bank in the management of that bank. I got word last night that that was reported out to the House Committee, and in some respects it conflicts with the Council we were working on.

MR. D. W. BELL: I don't think it is the same Council.
I saw Byrnes yesterday, and he said that the Council in control of the organization would be more or less in charge of this.

MR. WHITE: When did you hear that?
MR. D. W. HELL: At lunch yesterday.

MR. WHITE: I don't know definitely, but yesterday afternoon I heard about it. I think you ought to take some measures on it or call Vinson on it. From what we heard, they are bailing the thing all up.

MR. O'CONNELL: Maybe we can find out the facts this morning.

H.W.JH: Here is what the paper says: "The bill revises the bank's administrative setup, dropping the Secretary of Commerce and Secretary of Treasury, among others, from the board of directors."

MR. WHITE: That isn't all; there is something else. The Bretton Woods Council was supposed to have had advisory authority over the Export-Import Bank. Now, the Bill is substituting some other advisory--

H.W.JH: Well, Harry, will you get me something before one o'clock?

MR. WHITE: I think that will be too late. Has the report come out?

MR. LUNSFORD: I understand they voted it out eighteen to two last night.

MR. D. W. HELL: It has to go to conference, anyhow.

MR. O'CONNELL: It hadn't even been at the Senate yesterday.

MR. LUNSFORD: It isn't too late, but I should think Vinson was right in on the middle of that deal.

H.W.JH: Could anything happen between now and one o'clock?

MR. O'CONNELL: No, nothing that we could stop.

H.W.JH: Then will you give me a memorandum?

MR. WHITE: I will find out if I can what has been done.

MR. PARTELL: Mr. Secretary, the only thing that I have is that arrangements have been completed with the Federal Reserve Bank of New York to turn over the balance of those ten million dollars of yellow seal dollars to the Chinese representative, and Chi was told to contact the Bank.

MR. D. W. HELL: By the way, did anybody tell you that two hundred thousand of that was lost on the first shipment?

H.W.JH: Yes.

MR. D. W. HELL: General Richards called me this morning and asked me if this arrangement had been made. He said he had heard rumors, and he questioned the advisability of circulating yellow seal dollars over in China. He wondered how that would interfere with the Army's program over there. They sell other kinds of currency. I told him that they would circulate side by side with other currency there. But he wondered if Doctor King would sell yellow seal dollars and then turn the yuan over to us.

H.W.JH: Wasn't the Army informed?

MR. D. W. HELL: I don't recall that we informed them.

H.W.JH: Well, every time they see one of those yellow seals they say, "There goes a King dollar."

MR. WHITE: The first time we wanted to recommend that there be a different arrangement which the Army would be in on in granting the dollars.

H.W.JH: Well, it is dollars over the dam, so what the heck! It is done!

MR. MAAS: I have nothing, Mr. Secretary.

H.W.JH: George, if there are any reports of the War Emposer Commission, weekly or monthly, showing what the unemployment situation is, would you find out what they get out?
MR. HAAS: Yes, we have gotten into that.

MR. JR: Have you got private citizens?

MR. HAAS: Yes, we have.

MR. JR: Would you see what they have and bring it in?

MR. HAAS: Yes, sir. They have a weekly bulletin; they keep changing it.

Do you know what you were doing five years ago today?

MR. JR: No.

MR. HAAS: You were trying to get Allison engines up to Curtiss-Wright. I happened to know because I moved into a house and you were calling me on the telephone. I remember that day very distinctly. It is hard to realize that five years have gone by.

MR. D. W. BELL: A lot of dollars have gone over the dam, too, since then.

MR. JR: I had breakfast with Jimmy Forrestal this morning. He said, "well, as we say in Wall Street, we are getting the top of the market."

MR. FEDE: I have nothing, Mr. Secretary.

MR. WHITE: The French arrangement is practically finished. We are going to send it off today.

MR. D. W. BELL: By the way, General Richards was in last night. He has told the story to the Sub-Committee on Appropriations of the House. They like it, and they will defend it on the Floor if it comes out. He is going to see Cannon, the Chairman, and Senator McLaren, the Chairman of the Senate Appropriations Committee, this morning. He has seen the General Accounting Office and has received the Controller General's approval. He is also going to the Budget this morning to tell them the story so that everybody will know about it that can possibly object when the thing comes out.

H.M.JR: When will it come out?

MR. WHITE: I don't know.

H.M.JR: Do you have anything else, Harry?

MR. WHITE: No.

H.M.JR: Dan, do you have anything?

MR. D. W. BELL: On June 23 you signed a letter to the President asking him to approve issuance of notes to the Foreign Service Retirement Disability Fund. They have lost that letter at the White House, and have asked you to sign two duplicates. (Hands Secretary two letters to the President dated June 23, 1945, which the Secretary signs.)

(Secretary holds a telephone conversation with Mr. Gamble.)

H.M.JR: If you fellows will take care of Mr. Hale and let me know, I will call up Senator McKellar; and as rapidly as you give me the report, I will work on it.

MR. D. W. BELL: Well, George can give you this preliminary draft. I don't know whether he has gone over it.

MR. HAAS: It was a little different type of document. It has to be changed quite a little.
JUL 12 1945

Dear Ed,

Thank you for your letter of July 5, and for your generous comment on my contribution to the work of the War Refugee Board.

It is my understanding that it is unnecessary to take any formal action by way of resignation from the War Refugee Board. The Executive Order of January 22, 1944, establishing the Board, named as members the Secretary of State, the Secretary of the Treasury, and the Secretary of War. The persons holding such positions automatically are members of the Board so long as they continue to serve in such positions, and upon a successor being named the successor automatically becomes a member of the Board.

It has been a great pleasure for me to work with you on this task and I personally appreciate very much your fine support and cooperation.

Sincerely,

Dear Henry,

On June 27th the President accepted my resignation as Secretary of State, and I now wish to lay before you and the Secretary of War my resignation as a member of the War Refugees Board. It has been a privilege to have been associated with you in this most important work and I feel that the Board, largely through your efforts, has played a most important role in assisting these unfortunate persons.

With kindest regards,

Sincerely yours,

E. R. Stettinius, Jr.

Secretary of the Treasury
range for the prompt execution of the plans and programs developed and the measures inaugurated by the Board, to supervise the activities of the special attaches and to submit frequent reports to the Board on the steps taken for the rescue and relief of war refugees.

G. The Board shall be directly responsible to the President in carrying out the policy of this Government, as stated in the Proclamation, and the Board shall report to him at frequent intervals concerning the steps taken for the rescue and relief of war refugees and shall make such recommendations as the Board may deem appropriate for further action to overcome any difficulties encountered in the rescue and relief of war refugees.

FRANKLIN D. ROOSEVELT

THE WHITE HOUSE
January 22, 1944.
EXECUTIVE ORDER

ESTABLISHING A WAR REFUGEES BOARD

ECONOMICALLY, it is the policy of this Government to take all measures within its power to save the victims of enemy aggression who are in imminent danger of death and otherwise to afford such victims all possible relief and assistance consistent with the successful prosecution of the war.

NOW, THEREFORE, by virtue of the authority vested in me by the Constitution and the statutes of the United States, as President of the United States and as Commander in Chief of the Army and Navy, and in order to effectuate with all possible speed the rescue and relief of such victims of enemy aggression, it is hereby ordered as follows:

1. There is established in the Executive Office of the President a War Refugees Board (hereinafter referred to as the Board). The Board shall consist of the Secretary of State, the Secretary of the Treasury, and the Secretary of War. The Board may request the heads of other agencies or departments to participate in its deliberations whenever matters specially affecting such agencies or departments are under consideration.

2. The Board shall be charged with the responsibility for carrying out the policy of the Government, as stated in the preamble, in carrying out the functions of the Board shall include without limitation the development of plans and programs and the implementation of effective measures for (a) the rescue, transportation, maintenance and relief of the victims of enemy aggression, and (b) the establishment of havens of temporary refuge for such victims. To this end the Board, through appropriate channels, shall take the necessary steps to enlist the cooperation of foreign governments and enlist their participation in the execution of such plans and programs.

3. It shall be the duty of the State, Treasury and War Departments, within their respective spheres, to execute at the request of the Board, the plans and programs as developed and the measures as inaugurated. It shall be the duty of the heads of all agencies and departments to supply or obtain for the Board such information and to extend to the Board such supplies, shipping and other specified assistance and facilities as the Board may require in carrying out the provisions of this Order. The State Department shall appoint special attachés with diplomatic status, on the recommendation of the Board, to be stationed abroad in places where it is likely that assistance can be rendered to war refugees, the duties and responsibilities of such attachés to be defined by the Board in consultation with the State Department.

4. The Board and the State, Treasury and War Departments are authorized to accept the services or contributions of any private persons, private organizations, State agencies, or agencies of foreign governments in carrying out the purposes of this Order. The Board shall cooperate with all existing and future international organizations concerned with the problems of refugee rescue, maintenance, transportation, relief, rehabilitation, and resettlement.

5. To the extent possible the Board shall utilize the personnel, supplies, facilities and services of the State, Treasury and War Departments. In addition the Board, within the limits of funds which may be made available, may employ necessary personnel without regard for the Civil Service law and regulations and the Classification Act of 1923, as amended, and make provisions for supplies, facilities and services necessary to discharge its responsibilities. The Board shall appoint an Executive Director who shall serve as its principal executive officer. It shall be the duty of the Executive Director to ar-

July 12, 1945

Under date of May 15th I requested you to assume, as an Assistant to the Secretary, a series of special assignments under me, and in order to assure your full time on these assignments I assigned the supervision of the Procurement Division to Charles Bell, my Administrative Assistant, until further notice.

My resignation from the Treasury Department, dated July 6, 1945, to take effect in the near future, brings to a conclusion the tasks which you have been working on for me. I am, therefore, issuing Treasury Department Order No. 61 returning the supervision of the Procurement Division to you with the request that the reorganization which was commenced by you in April, 1945, and carried on by Mr. Bell, be continued under your supervision.

Dear Mr. Aldrich:

When we last talked I said that after our report of the investigation of the French branches of the Chase was completed, I would get in touch with you.

The report is now completed. If one of your representatives will call upon Mr. Frank C. T., Director of Monetary Research, he will, in accordance with my instructions, inform you of the findings of the investigation.

Very truly yours,

By dear Mr. Secretary:

I am enclosing for your information a copy of a letter which I am sending to the Secretary of War regarding a settlement which we have reached with China on U. S. Army expenditures in China during the last quarter of 1944.

Sincerely yours,

The Honorable,

The Secretary of State.

By dear Mr. Secretary:

I am pleased to inform you that we have reached an agreement with Mr. Han in respect to the settlement of U. S. Army obligations in China for the fourth quarter of 1944. I am attaching a copy of my letter to Mr. Han of June 27, 1945 which sets forth the terms of our agreement, together with a copy of his reply thereto.

I would like to take this occasion to express my appreciation for the assistance we received from General Richards and the members of his staff throughout these negotiations with the Chinese. The cooperation and support which we received from General Richards considerably facilitated these difficult negotiations.

We have already taken the preliminary steps to begin the negotiations for a settlement for U. S. Army obligations in China for the first quarter of 1945.

Sincerely yours,

The Honorable,

The Secretary of War.

L.P./s to 7/5/45
27 JUNE 1945

Dear Dr. Fang:

I am informing the War Department that we have successfully terminated the negotiations with respect to U.S. Army yen obligations in China for the last quarter of 1944. The terms of the settlement of these negotiations, as agreed upon at our conference on last Friday afternoon, June 22, are as follows:

1. The War Department shall transfer to the account of the National Government of China or the account of such agency of the National Government of China as the National Government of China designates a sum of forty-five million U.S. dollars (450,000,000) in settlement for all U.S. Army obligations in China for the period October 1, 1943, to December 31, 1944, amounting to the sum of eight billion forty-two million eight hundred ten thousand five hundred sixty-three Chinese National dollars ($8,042,500,000).

2. This settlement does not include any yen expended by the Government of the Republic of China for board and lodging of American armed forces in China. Such sums will be credited to the National Government of China as reciprocal aid under Article VI of the Mutual Aid Agreement of June 2, 1942, as amended by the request of the National Government of China.

3. It is understood that counterclaims may be made by the U.S. Treasury for reimbursement in U.S. dollars for expenditures by the U.S. Army on behalf of China for which deductions were not made at the time of settlement. Reimbursements for such counterclaims will be made by China at rates corresponding to the rates of settlement covering the periods of time during which the expenditures were actually made.

Sincerely yours,

EXECUTIVE TREATY
NATIONAL GOVERNMENT OF CHINA

June 28, 1945

Honorable Henry Morganthau, Jr.,
Secretary of the Treasury
Washington, D.C.

Dear Mr. Secretary:

I am in receipt of your letter of June 27, 1945 in which you stated that you were informing the War Department of the successful termination of the negotiations with respect to Japanese yen obligations in China for the last quarter of 1944. The terms of the settlement of these negotiations as agreed upon at our conference on last Friday afternoon, June 25, are as follows:

1. The War Department shall transfer to the account of the National Government of China from the account of the Security of the National Government of China as the National Government of China designates a sum of forty-five million U.S. dollars (¥69,000,000) in settlement for all U.S. Army obligations in China for the period October 1, 1944, to December 31, 1944, amounting to the sum of eight million forty-five million eight hundred ten thousand five hundred sixty-three Chinese National dollars (¥840,910,680,963).

2. This settlement does not include any yen paid by the Government of the Republic of China for board and lodging of American armed forces in China. Such sums will be credited to the National Government of China as reciprocal aid under Article VI of the Mutual Aid Agreement of June 7, 1945, at the request of the National Government of China.

3. It is understood that counterclaims may be made by the U.S. Treasury for reimbursement in U.S. dollars for expenditures by the U.S. Army on behalf of China for which deductions were not made at the time of settlement. Reimbursements for such counterclaims will be made by China at rates corresponding to the rates of settlement covering the periods of time during which the expenditures were actually made.

With reference to paragraph 3, you will recall that in our last settlement I had the pleasure to undertake for my government to provide for this item as mutual aid, and I am glad to be able to include a like provision in respect of the period October 1, 1944 to December 31, 1944. You will of course appreciate that after this date, and as to the future, with the number of American troops increasing considerably and likely to become very much greater and the lack of supplies needed by American troops, I am not in a position to commit the Chinese Government to a continuation of this arrangement.

I wish to take this opportunity to express to you my appreciation for your close cooperation in the difficult years of the war and feel confident that you will continue your splendid work of promoting and strengthening the friendship between our two countries.

Yours sincerely,

HMJr: Hello.
Mr. Fred Vinson: Hello.
HMJr: Fred?
V: Yeah.
HMJr: Henry talking.
V: Yes, sir.
HMJr: Fred, Judge Samuel I. Rosenman is here at my desk with me.
V: I see.
HMJr: I think you know who he is.
V: Let me see, he's the young man who has been around.
HMJr: He's been around.
V: For a while.
HMJr: That's right. Well, he and I have been going over something that affects you and me, see?
V: I see.
HMJr: And I suggested that before he do anything about it, he show all the papers to you to be sure that everything contained therein is -- that you like it. See?
V: I see.
HMJr: So if it is agreeable to you, he'd like to come back to the White House right now and show it to you.
V: All right, Henry, I'll be glad to see him.
HMJr: C. K.
V: And I'm due over there at one?
HMJr: One o'clock.
V: All right, fellow.

R: Raise it with you?

R: I don't know, but I think you ought to bring it up in some way, and then hear it from his own

R: Did you put it to him as your own idea?

R: Yes, sir. And I'm sending it over as my own suggestion.

R: And he wouldn't let you say, 'and I showed it to R: Well, I didn't ask him that. He didn't want me to say 'I showed it to Vinson' and he joins in the R: Yeah, well, it is another straw in the wind.

R: I don't think so, Henry.

R: Yeah.

R: I think he is very friendly.

R: Well, up to the point, sir?

R: Well, let me read this to you.

R: All right.

R: First, would he as per your instructions I have spoken with Henry Morgenthau and he has been

R: I am suggesting the following exchange of cables, which he has approved, be released at the White House as soon

R: Then, * the foregoing two cables are to be exchanged without any strings or conditions of any kind. Henry wants me to make that perfectly clear to you. How-

R: The other one I don't think we need any O.K. from him on that.

R: Is he going to raise the question about that letter from the President to me?
R: (cont) cable would come at the time when Bretton Woods legislation is signed, and that it would apply to the governorship of the fund and bank. I repeat that this cable is in no way to be treated as a part of the foregoing exchange or two cables, and that Henry wants to make it perfectly clear in any way. If you do approve then, of course, the foregoing two cables are to be released anyway.

HN: Yes. The only suggestion I think you protested a little bit too much. What? You say in the beginning there are no strings or conditions.

R: Yes.

HN: And I don't think you've got to bring in the rest at the end.

R: I see.

HN: I mean I think you overdo it a little bit.

R: I see. Well, I wanted to make it perfectly clear, no strings.

HN: Well, you do when you say there are no conditions.

R: All right.

HN: Don't you think so?

R: Well, ....

HN: You can't say anymore than that. there are no conditions and no strings attached to it.

R: And I say - I repeat this cable is in no way to be treated as a part of the foregoing exchange of two cables, and that Henry wants to make it perfectly clear.

HN: Now, that is the part I think you are putting it on a little too think there.

R: I see. All right.

HN: But if in this thing you could get in an extra sentence that if he decided to do this thing, it would be pleasing to me.

R: Yes.
HMJr: That's right.
R: Yes.
HMJr: That's right.
R: Is that all right? Any other suggestions?
HMJr: None.
R: O.K.
HMJr: But I'm bothered about Vinson.
R: I don't think you should be. Maybe I should hold this up until after you have had your lunch with him, it wouldn't make any difference you know. It wouldn't get there probably --- HMJr: It is six hours later there now anyway.
R: About five o'clock there now anyway.
HMJr: Yeah, I'd hold it.
R: O.K.
HMJr: Yeah.
R: All right.
HMJr: Thank you.
R: All right. Call me, will you?
HMJr: I'll certainly call you. Thank you very much.
R: All right.
Mr. Harry White: I've got these French documents relating to the adjustment that have to have your approval today. If we don't get it today, then it will postpone by a month what the soldiers can get.

HMJr: Oh, Michel,

W: That's right — one month's pay.

HMJr: Oui, oui.

W: All right, and the reason I'm calling now is because I'm supposed to be up to discuss these bills today with Joe at four so it will have to be within the next ten or fifteen minutes.

HMJr: Well, why don't you come in now?

W: O.K. I'll come in with some of the boys.

HMJr: You had better bring Russell so — it there going to be publicity?

W: There will be subsequently, yes. It won't be clearly decided, but it will be Monday, Tuesday or Wednesday, I don't know when.

HMJr: They'll probably have to be — don't wait too long.

W: O.K. (Laughs) Right. I'll come around.
HMJr:  Hello.

 Senator

McKellar:  Hello, Mr. Secretary.

 HMJr:  Senator?

 M:  Yes, sir.

 HMJr:  I thought you'd like to know that we are appointing Mr. Hale to that position.

 M:  Well, that's grand. Thank you so much.

 HMJr:  And I thought you might like to tell him yourself.

 M:  I certainly will. I'll call him right away.

 HMJr:  To show you how wet the ink is, the papers have not yet arrived here but are on the way over from Internal Revenue.

 M:  Well, that's grand. Thank you so much.

 HMJr:  Not at all.

 M:  All right, I appreciate it more than I can say.

 HMJr:  Well....

Mr. White

It is our understanding that the bill on the Export-Import Bank which was voted out of the Banking and Currency Committee of the House yesterday afternoon made the following important alterations compared with an earlier version:

1. The Board of Trustees of the Export-Import Bank provided for in the bill now includes five members named by the President and approved by the Senate—not more than three of which can be members of one political party. The head of the FEA is designated Chairman of the Board. The Secretary of State is the only other person named as member of the Board. (Congressman Spence told me that the Secretary of State was included at the last moment because Dean Acheson made a fight for such inclusion.)

2. In addition to the above Board, there is created an Advisory board consisting of the same members as make up the Breton Woods Council, i.e., the Secretary of State, Secretary of the Treasury, Secretary of Commerce, the Chairman of the Board of Governors of the Federal Reserve System, and the Chairman of the Board of Trustees of the Export-Import Bank.

When this Council meets as the Breton Woods Council, the Secretary of the Treasury is the Chairman. When, however, the same group of individuals meet as the Advisory Council to the Export-Import Bank, the Chairman of the Board of Trustees, namely the head of FEA, acts as Chairman.

Mr. President:

When I wrote to you on July 6th, submitting my resignation as Secretary of the Treasury, I agreed, at your request, to remain in office until your return from Europe.

I have been giving further thought to this matter, and now take the liberty of suggesting that you may wish to reconsider this arrangement. Since you have now made your decision as to my successor, it seems to me that the delay we contemplated is no longer necessary but, on the contrary, may prove a handicap to Judge Vinson for whom I have the highest admiration. It is my earnest desire to be of every assistance to him in taking over the great responsibilities of this office.

Such matters as the continuation of war financing, the tax enforcement drive, revenue legislation, and many other Treasury problems call for prompt decisions. My successor should be given the opportunity to make these decisions, since it will become his duty to carry them out.

These considerations are given added weight by the possibility of a recess of the Senate, which would delay Judge Vinson's confirmation.

Accordingly, I urge that you appoint my successor at your earliest convenience, and make my resignation effective upon his appointment and qualification.

Sincerely yours,

The President,

The White House.

I recently received, from Mr. McKitterick of the Bank for International Settlements, a letter, dated May 2, 1945, and a copy of a letter of the same date which Mr. McKitterick sent to the British Chancellor of the Exchequer.

I do not contemplate answering the letter addressed to me. Since you likewise participated in the United Nations Monetary and Financial Conference, which unanimously recommended the liquidation of the Bank for International Settlements at the earliest possible moment, I am sending herewith copies of these letters to you for your information.

My dear Senator:

I want to thank you for your letter of July 9 regarding reports of loans made to Mr. Elliott Roosevelt. You may be assured that the department welcomes any credible information bearing on the tax status of any individual. As you have previously been advised, the department is proceeding intensively with this investigation, the results of which will be presented to the Committee of the Ways and Means of the House of Representatives.

Dear Mr. Latta:

My dear Mr. President:

Under Section 18 of the Act approved May 24, 1924 (43 Stat. 144), establishing the Foreign Service Retirement and Disability Fund, deductions from the salary, pay or compensation of employees entitled to the benefits of the Act shall, in effect, bear interest at the rate of 4% per annum. In pursuance to recommendations of the Acting Secretary of the Treasury, approved by President Coolidge under date of August 6, 1927, such portion of the fund not needed for immediate payments is invested in special 4% obligations of the United States.

Section 3 of the Act of April 24, 1939 (Public Law 40, 76th Congress), amended the Act of May 24, 1924 (43 Stat. 144), by providing that any Foreign Service Officer may, at his option and under such regulations as may be prescribed by the President, deposit additional sums to be returned, at the date of his retirement, in a lump sum, or to be used to purchase additional annuities. These additional deposits bear interest at the rate of 3% per annum, compounded on June 30 of each year.

On May 28, 1945, the amount of $6,000, representing additional deposits not needed for immediate payments, became available for investment for account of the Foreign Service Retirement and Disability Fund. In order that there might be no loss of interest to the fund, this amount was invested in special series of Treasury notes, maturing June 30, 1949 and bearing interest at the rate of 3% per annum, which corresponds to the earning requirements of the Act. It is anticipated that from time to time as additional funds become available, investments will be made in similar Treasury issues for the purpose outlined above.

Since the Second Liberty Bond Act provides that notes may be issued only with the approval of the President, I trust that the method of investment which became effective May 26, 1945 in connection with the amount of $6,000, meets with your approval.

Faithfully,

(Signed) H. Morgenbesser, Jr.

MEMORANDUM FOR THE SECRETARY

July 13, 1945

Mail Report

Overshadowing all other topics, the resignation of the Secretary dominated the mail of the past week. The chorus of good will and approval of his record from Treasury representatives in the field, particularly War Bond Chairman and workers, included also many letters from obscure and unknown citizens who spoke both intelligently and warmly about the record of the last few years. Nasty personal attacks were negligible, with only 5 abusive ones, and 2 unpleasant in tone.

It must be admitted that the box score was a resignation week casualty. Most of the letters about the resignation have been abstracted; omitted being the more strictly personal letters, and those which came in the end of the week. Now that the Secretary is acknowledging all such letters personally, a separate abstract on them will not be kept for the coming week, but outstanding ones will still be quoted.

This does not mean that the week was without its complaints. There were a number of gripes in the various classifications of the mail, and the rewriting of checks over a year old reached a high-water mark. In all, 129 were sent to the Secretary, many of them being only a month or so over the year. More than three quarters of these were from service men -- some had been in this country on furlough long enough for the checks to catch up with them, and urged that a good check be sent promptly so that they could have their money while here. Charging for the cashing of Government checks was reported 5 times; there were 2 complaints on unwillingness to cash bonds; and 1 complaint on refusal to change a $60 bill since the owner did not have an account in that bank.

On the bond front, "Here's Your Infantry" had unanimous praise in the 10 letters speaking of it. Only twice were adverse rumors on the value of bonds reported, while 16 service men, or their families, complained of nonreceipt of bonds, and 2 others in civilian life were short in their receipts. There were scattered complaints of interest delays, and a great many inquiries about matured bonds, Adjusted Service Bonds, etc. Of the latter, 27 were sent in to be cashed, while 15 War Bonds were received.
Memorandum for the Secretary.

July 13, 1945

A number of reports on the 7th Drive and suggestions for the 8th reached us from the field. There are still requests for some sort of insignia to indicate purchase of bonds, and also suggestions in regard to the Roosevelt memorial bond. The most frequent of these is that a recording of the late President delivering one of his speeches be given with each memorial bond purchased.

The tax evaders drive received much less attention, with very few applications for jobs either from service men or others, and with dwindling reports of evaders. Complaints from those who have applied for jobs and have not got them began to appear this week.

One man (letter abstracted) listed experience for which Civil Service gave him no credit. Another letter was from a woman who asked why women who had taken and passed the examination for agents’ appointments a year ago were steadily refused such jobs. This letter particularly criticized the Boston office as antagonistic to women. There were in all, 13 letters giving names and addresses of evaders -- 10 were anonymous, 3 signed. One of each reported more than one evader in the town or city from which the letter was written. The Roosevelt-Hartford loan elicited 4 letters, all naturally deeply critical. There were half a dozen requests for refunds; several complaints that information on by-gone returns could not be obtained although more than one request had been filed with Internal Revenue; and similar scattered protests.

The Roosevelt bond and the Roosevelt dime each had one or two letters favorable, and one or two unfavorable. There were 3 anti-England outbursts, and 1 protest on the 40-hour week. The writer said that even the Post Office can work out a 44-hour week, so why not the Treasury.
Memorandum for the Secretary.

July 13, 1945.

A bank criticized interest rates as too low, and by inference blamed the Secretary for the fact that, according to the writer, banks are losing their savings deposits because of the way they are treated in the new financing.

A New Orleans citizen sent in the clipping of an advertisement from local papers announcing the sale of U. S. Savings Bonds, Series E, by the sheriff at auction, seized from the owner by Judicial Writ. The sender asked if this did not contradict statements in the Departmental circular in regard to seizure of Series E Bonds.

In general, the mail totaled between three and five hundred pieces a day. Receipts from the White House, on the other hand, were very low and a page analyzing the subject matter is attached.

Favorable

Comments on Secretary's Resignation

J. R. Fair, President, The City National Bank of Winston-Salem, Winston-Salem, North Carolina. It is with a great deal of regret that I read of your resignation as Secretary of the Treasury. Although I regret your resignation, I am writing to extend service that you have rendered to the Nation as Secretary of the Treasury. You have had a most outstanding success and deserve the appreciation of the people of the United States, and I have had an opportunity to know you and to follow a large number of your policies and recommendations as Secretary of the Treasury.

Your stand on the question of voluntarily selling bonds to the American citizen goes down to your credit. In future plans that you might undertake.

Bruno Shaw, Commentator, WJZ, The Blue Net Work, New York City. The news of your resignation comes as a great shock to all Americans who have at heart the best interests of our country. The tremendous ability you have brought to the important task to which you have devoted yourself for the past eleven years will long be remembered with gratitude by all. For myself, these critical days will no longer be able to continue years of happiness ahead will in some measure compensate for the busy and hard-worked ones from which you are now retiring.
Pleo. Albert C. Wilkerson, Newport News, Virginia. I was very sorry to hear that you have given up your post as Secretary of the Treasury. I just can't see how another man can walk in and try to fulfill your position. * * *

Mrs. Rufus Flood, Concord, New Hampshire. * * * Your service to our country as the Secretary of the Treasury has truly been second to none. These dark war days certainly have been most difficult. You are deserving a much-needed rest from such a burden that you have been carrying for eleven years. Our best wishes to you in all your fields of endeavor, along with a very happy and peaceful future for both you and Mrs. Morgenthau. I have had the pleasure of meeting you both when I was in Washington for a War Bond conference. This conference was for the purpose of establishing Women's Divisions in all the states. * * *

R. S. Dougherty, Vice President, New York Central System, New York City. You may recall the underrail from the Albany days and one or two meetings since 1920. On the occasion of your retirement from the Treasury, let me express to you my sincere admiration of your administration under the most difficult of circumstances and my very best wishes for future success and happiness.

Herbert Bayard Swope, New York City. You have carved a place in history which will always be yours, and always be shining.

Fred C. Pohst, Collector of Customs, Galveston, Texas. * * I take this occasion to congratulate you on your remarkable accomplishments during your tenure of office. Your contribution through the war years assures you a place of glory in the history of this Government. It has been a distinct pleasure for me to serve under your leadership in the Treasury Department.

Donald P. Ross, State Chairman, Delaware War Finance Committee, Wilmington, Delaware. We have learned with regret of your resignation as Secretary of the Treasury, following the return of the President from the Big Three Meeting. Both personally and on behalf of my associates in the Delaware War Finance Committee, I want to express to you our appreciation of your cooperation with our Committee since the beginning of the War Finance Program and to extend to you our best wishes for any future responsibilities that you may undertake. * * *

Mark B. Carroll, Pier 18, Staten Island, New York. (U.S.N.C., Patrol Base) I was very sorry indeed to learn of your having tendered your resignation to the President, but I can fully appreciate your reasons. At this time I want to tell you that I think you have turned in an outstanding job to the people of the country and deserve a vote of thanks from the entire country. * * *

Lt. Joseph L. Wolf, USNR, Hoboken, New Jersey. I, and all other men and women of the armed forces, of our faith, are proud of your achievements. We thank you and wish you the future health and happiness that you so deserve.

Henry A. Taylor, State Chairman, War Finance Committee, Henderson, Kentucky. * * * I am sincerely sorry to hear of your resignation from your Cabinet post, Mr. Secretary. You have rendered a distinct service to your country and as one "in the ranks", I am deeply grateful for your contribution. I only hope that your knowledge and ability will now be put to work in the international field where it is so sorely needed. * * *

Earle Morris, St. Louis, Missouri. The news announcement of your resignation came as a shock to me. I do not like to see the men that have given this country such good guidance in the past troubled times stepping down and out. I think I reflect the ideas of many others when I state that those changes cause us to feel that things are slowly falling apart; that we are getting set for another Republican Depression, this time under a Democratic Administration. I want you to know that I am deeply grateful to you for your valuable service to our country in the past, and I hope most sincerely that you may enjoy both rest and peace back there on the Hudson. * * *

Joseph Wheeler, Chicago, Illinois. I am just one of the many millions in the country that appreciate the wonderful job you have done as Secretary of the Treasury, and I want to sincerely wish you the very best of luck in the future, which you so richly deserve, and hope that you will live long and be happy always.

Benjamin C. Marcus, South Norwalk, Connecticut. I was saddened to hear that you had resigned as Secretary of the Treasury. It must, however, give you great satisfaction to know you will be leaving the U.S. Government with a magnificent record. * * *

Henry P. Rising, Henry Rising Paper Company, Los Angeles, California. As you are retiring from your office as Secretary of the Treasury, I wish to thank you for the splendid manner you have conducted this important post and for the fine ability you have shown in carrying on the War Loan Drives. The people of this nation owe you a great debt for your work and for your patriotism in helping them when the safety of our Government was so threatened by the Germans and the Japs, and some by the Italians. * * *

Donald A. Delley, Postmaster, Rochester, New York. * * * You have carried out the duties of your office in a most commendable way during the trying times our country has been through and I want to congratulate you on the excellent job you have done. You have earned a well-deserved rest and I trust you will be blessed with good health for many years to come.

E. Blumenstine, Blumenstine Electric, Harrisburg, Pa. If it be true that you are going to leave your present position, I, as one of the many millions are going to feel very regretful, as it is going to take my men a long time to fully grasp the situation as it now stands. * * * Never in the history of our country has the call been so urgent for men of developed minds to operate every phase of our Federal Government, and you have one of our very most important positions, since, if our financial structure goes wrong (breaks down), our everything is affected and our entire country will be thrown back many years to come, and since you saw our national debt grow from its many sources from a baby to a giant, I do think you should stay on and work and see it diminish to a dwarf, and you can do it, if you only will. * * *

G. Cernek, Chicago, Illinois. Another friend goes home. We will miss you, Mr. Morgenthau.
Chester Bryant, Enosville, Tennessee. It is with regret that I read that you may resign as Secretary of the Treasury. Congratulations on the fine job you have done while serving those fateful years for your Government. Hoping that you may not resign and that you may have many more years to serve as Secretary of the Treasury.

F. R. VonWindegger, President, The Plaza Bank of St. Louis, St. Louis, Missouri. In retiring from the position which you have so adequately and nobly filled during the most critical years in our history, it must be a great satisfaction to you to feel that your service has been of such inestimable benefit to the economy, not only of our country, but of the world. You retire with our gratitude for your unselfish efforts and our utmost admiration for the success of those efforts. May the balance of your life be a happy and peaceful one. You have well earned such a reward.

Harold J. Vogler, Day & Zimmermann, Inc., Engineers, Packard Building, Philadelphia. It is with great regret that I note in the public press you have resigned as Secretary of the Treasury. I feel that we have lost a splendid executive and a real guardian of our Treasury.

Moses Lipson, Brooklyn, New York. Congratulations on your projected assumption of the office of the "Acting President of the United States of America." It is indeed a most fitting tribute for the years of unpretentious service you are rendering to your country. Please accept the wishes of one who would like for you best of health, happiness, and prosperity.

Gale F. Johnston, New York City. Your resignation as Secretary of the Treasury puts a tinge of sadness in my heart. America and the world owe so much to you for the way in which you have guided our finances through this trying period. I know the time comes when great public service must end, but history forever will record the greatness of the task you performed.

William S. Rainey, National Association of Manufacturers, New York City. To those of us who worked with you during the exciting days of the War Bond Campaign the news of your desire to resign brings back many happy and nostalgic memories. I am sure the majority of Americans recognize and appreciate the great service you rendered to this country during the most difficult and critical period. I consider it to be one of the richer portions of my life to have worked under your guidance and inspiring direction.

W. J. Storern, Collector of Customs, Charleston, South Carolina. I read in this morning's paper with great regret that you have resigned from the office of Secretary of the Treasury. I know that it will be a great relief for you to be rid of the responsibility and worry that goes with that office, but I feel, as an American citizen, that our country is losing one of its ablest administrators. You have held the office during the most critical time in the history of the United States and under your direction seven of the largest war loans that the world has ever seen were successfully put over. Your management of the country's finances was really remarkable. I, therefore, feel that you will go down in history as the best Secretary of the Treasury that our country has had.
You have the unique honor of being a living servant of our nation whose selfless devotion to duty, and whose ability is attested unanimously by the gratitude of every living citizen. --- Well done, Mr. Secretary.

Jerry Sullivan, New York City. Please don't go away from the white house. You no you are wanted there and who can do your work as good as you do. I am sure no one can. Why are all the men resigning. I heard in the radio six men resigned - don't you like it there any more. I wish I was big. I would like to be in the white house. I am only nine years old now. ---

J. U. Reisman, Surgical Selling Company, Atlanta, Ga.
Without doubt you are receiving many, many thousands of letters just like this one, yet I write to tell you for Mrs. Reisman, as well as for myself, that we have watched your good work and were made to feel proud that you were doing what you did, and which now brings you such praise as evidenced by the attached editorial. You have proved yourself to be a leader, and it is good that such great universal tribute is being paid to you. You well deserve it. We salute you with sincere esteem and respect.

W. W. Waymack, Editor, The Register and Tribune, Des Moines, Iowa. --- I guess the real reason for taking now the dictaphone, equivalent of a pen in hand, is that your resignation has been announced and I want to thank you, as a citizen, for a long period of excellent public service. I could mention various other things, but, to attest my sincerity, I choose one about which I have to confess that your judgment was good and mine was rotten. I'd have been willing to bet, and give odds, that the attempt to sell enough Government Bonds during the war without adopting some form of "compulsory savings" would fail. Obviously, I misinterpreted your determination and a number of other things. So I take my hat of. I may add that, while some aspects of the tremendous bond-selling drives have seemed to me to involve a bit of exaggeration, I'm inclined to think that there have been quite important national values wholly aside from the job of getting the money. --- This was one patriotic effort that everybody could work at, Democrats and Republicans, liberals and conservatives, everybody. It occurs to me that the country needed something like that.

Comments on Secretary’s Resignation

Miss Dollie Hobbs, The Hobbs Farm, Louisville, Ill.
"Praise God from whom all blessings flow." You’ve resigned? Now when will Grandpa take step out?

Bill Goebelin, Chicago, Illinois. Thanks, Hank, ol’ horse! And, on your way out will you pull some snitches that palooka, Dickstein, of the immigration department and take him with you? Back to no-nos and notions, me lads, and g’luck.

Harry Snyderman, Baltimore, Maryland. I am very glad that you have resigned, Mr. S. Because it may help to overcome certain expressions made by some of our Anti-Semitic and ignorant, so-called Americans.

Need I say any more? Best wishes.

W. B. Blaster, Worthington, West Virginia. Pursuant to your radio appeal to men who had the necessary training and experience to fit them for use as income tax examiners, I filled out a civil service blank entitled Special Agent, CAF-7, and, in order that you can see the result, I enclose their opinions. Please note that they allow me nothing for my former training planned and executed by the F.B.I., and given to officers in order to fit them for greater usefulness as investigators; for my former studies and experience in making out income tax reports, I drew another zero; as a former honorably discharged U.S. soldier, another zero; for my ability to operate a typewriter, still another, although I only claimed a speed of sixty words or a little better a minute. May I ask in just what way am I ineligible? Certainly, I do not seek to pose as a high-class specialist -- on the contrary, I am just a plain ordinary citizen, an ex-service man with the sort of experience that is possessed by thousands of others who once served the U.S. and if we are to be shunted aside because in filling out a long and cumbersome blank, somewhere in the closely crowded space we failed to dot an i or cross a t, then much experience may be lost and many others ignored.

Master Michael Demnebe, Streator, Illinois. Will you please send me your signature? Please send it to me in a week or when you get to it.

Marvin C. Hill, Nashville, Tennessee. This check was issued to me when I left employment of the O.P.C. office in Nashville, Tennessee, and was mailed to my home address. Someone followed the postman and took this check out of the mail box. He bought a used car with it and was caught that night. The Secret Service Department here in Nashville had me fill out some papers and said they would have to hold the original check for evidence in the case, but that the Treasury would issue me a duplicate check for this amount. It has been almost seven months now, since this incident and I will appreciate it very much if you can have someone take the time to find out what is holding this check up, or to see if they can't get it mailed to me sometime in the near future.

Favorable Comments on Bonds

Mr. George Brown, Bronx, New York. I am a World War Veteran. On June 15 I received my check for the bonds which amounted to $686.00, which you advised me to invest in War Bonds. I did buy 7th War Loan from all my check I received and I hope all the 1st World War Veterans will follow that advice and all the 180,000,000 Americans will keep buying BONDS, until the final victory and that will bring our boys back home sooner victoriously for us and our Allies. P.S. I have my only son overseas now for 18 months.

Lieutenant (USN) Horace D. Mann, New London, Conn.
On behalf of myself, officers and men, I wish to thank you for the splendid cooperation received from you and your associates during our brief, but very enjoyable stay in the Nation's Capital. It was very kind of you to take part in the broadcast in the opening ceremonies, and I feel sure this act on your part was instrumental in making our mission the huge success that it was.  It has been a real pleasure to work for the Treasury Department during this great Seventh War Bond Drive. The Treasury representatives in all six cities that I visited did an excellent job and it was a real pleasure to be associated with them. I wish to thank you again for the aid given the U-538 by your office.  To a Navy man there is nothing so pleasing as the completion of a successful mission.
Unfavorable Comments on Bonds

Mrs. Fanny Moss, Cleveland Heights, Ohio. When I heard of your plan to issue War Bonds with the likeness of the late President Roosevelt printed upon them, I was immediately interested in purchasing one for each of my two grand-daughters. However, when I discovered that the intention of the Treasury Department was to issue them in $200 denominations, I decided to write you a letter, voicing my opinion in the matter. You see, Mr. Morgenthau, there are many of us who are desirous of purchasing these Roosevelt Memorial War Bonds as historic keepsakes, with no intention of disposing of them at any time in the future. Therefore, I should like to make this suggestion -- would it not be possible to print the Roosevelt Memorial War Bond in $2 denominations, or at the most, $50 units? This would make it possible for many people to buy them who would be unable to invest in the $200 issue. I believe that this would substantially increase your total sales, and would provide a means for many, many Americans like myself to be the proud possessors of the late President's likeness.

Al. Balfour, A Disillusioned Veteran, San Jose, Calif. Here is one reason the 7th War Loan is having such a hard time going over. My experience is representative. I tried to operate a small apartment house in San Jose. It paid a very small profit, but still a profit. I put that profit into War Bonds, but the OPA agents refused to accept any, and at my registered prices, which the OPA agents allow to increase to meet my increased expenses, I must operate at a loss. This I cannot do, so I am closing up, thus throwing out several military personnel and defense workers and their families, and it is in a locality already overburdened with more population than can be adequately housed. I am gradually cashing in the War Bonds already bought so as to live until I get a good job.

The OPA at San Jose denies there is any increase in costs, yet real estate selling at $3,000 in 1942 brings $9,000 today; electricity 15c in 1942 costs 36c today; lettuce 8c in 1942 costs 16c today; clothing, shoes, etc., the same. The Bureau of Labor Statistics admits an increase of over 50% in living costs. Isn't that inflation?

W. H. Whittling, Dallas, Texas. A press report states that you propose to have printed on a forthcoming issue of Series E Savings Bonds a rather platitudinous statement of the late President Roosevelt. * * * I am writing this respectful protest against giving such recognition to that man, who all but wrecked this great country and who doubtless would have finished the wrecking job had the good Lord not intervened and put in the White House a man, who, as the Hon. James A. Farley says, has COMMON SENSE. In connection with the plan mentioned, you have perhaps overlooked the fact that more than twenty millions of our citizens voted against Mr. Roosevelt in the last election and millions more likely would have voted to oust him. * * * When I think of F. D. Roosevelt, I always think of BROKEN PROMISES -- lies to get into office, then the lavish expenditure of PUBLIC funds to perpetuate himself there. * * * I repeat, I want no security or promise of any kind with the F. D. Roosevelt name on it.

A. D. Harrison, First Vice President, Coconut Grove Exchange Bank, Miami, Florida. On June 28, the writer entered a subscription for $100,000 of Treasury Bonds of 1967-72. The subscription was declined by the Jacksonville Branch, Federal Reserve Bank of Atlanta. They gave as their reason that it did not conform in all respects with the request made by you in your letter dated March 23, 1944. Prior to entering my subscription for these bonds, I received the proceeds from a loan of $100,000.00 from the First National Bank in Palm Beach. The bank was perfectly agreeable to extending the loan, and I am reluctant to say whether or not it will run thirty days or six months. It is my intention to buy these bonds for a future and permanent investment, and I do not feel that I should liquidate other securities at this time. However, I can assure you that I do not intend liquidating the loan from the sale of the government securities. It is my opinion that had the First National Bank in Palm Beach felt that I was speculating in the government bond market, my application for the loan would have been declined.

John M. Halbach, Seattle, Washington. I mad an application last month for 1 Gallon Coal Oil-Kerosene. to Hanse 909 Madison Str and Broadw, Seattle. The told me it is not Essential, I should get Cleaning Fluid or Something els. I support the American Government with 70,000.00 dollar bonds and War Bonds. I cant see why the refuse me for 1 Gallon Coal Oil-Kerosene. I was ready to buy 5,000.00 7 Loan Bonds. I cant get 1 Gallon. I buy no Bonds. you better send me a Coupon for 1 Gallon and I by 5,000.00.

Good morning.

Mr. Dean Acheson: Did you have a good rest while you were away.

HMJr: Well, yes.

(Ha) You had to think that over quite carefully.

HMJr: Yeah, just like that. I'd love to see you sometime.

A: I want very much to see you.

HMJr: When would you like to do it?

A: Anytime you say. We are having Bretton Woods on the floor next week - I don't know whether they will want me up there all the time.

HMJr: Do you want to come over today, or do you want to go until next week?

A: I'd be delighted to come over today. When would you say?

HMJr: Oh, how about three o'clock? Do you work.....

A: No, I wanted to get away this afternoon.

HMJr: Well, how about 11:30?

A: 11:30?

HMJr: Yes.

A: Fine. 11:30 it is.

HMJr: I'll look forward to seeing you.

A: I was going to speak with you over the phone, but I'll bring this with me. I've got something that Clayton left here that he wanted me to ask you to join him in sending to Brand, which is - the general of it is to ask the British Government to make a public statement on loosening up on the dollar-control, I think Frank Coe has been working with them over at your place. I thought I had better take it over and leave it with you.

HMJr: Good. I'll look forward to seeing you.

A: At 11:30, Henry.

HMJr: See, bye.
H.W.Jr: There are fifty people in the Treasury who know I am getting ready to move. I would like anybody who wants to, to speak his piece now.

Mr. D.W. Bell: I think it is unfortunate that you can’t take out all the personal references to people and keep a copy of it for official reference to back actions in history, because some things that are going to be done here are going to be very important in the future, which will not be explained.

H.W.Jr: As to the period prior to 1941, just as rapidly as they can over the week end, they are going to remove all official originals. The originals will stay here in the Treasury, and they will be photostated and I will get the photostats, which I will put back into my book.

I have a micro-film, which I obtained. It amounts to some four thousand dollars, and I am going to pay for it. I am writing my attorney today to add a codicil to my will, saying that I want my diary and the micro-film to be left to the Roosevelt Memorial Library, which is a Government institution.

Mr. White: I hope you don’t die for at least twenty-five years.

H.W.Jr: --and it shall not be opened for ten years after my death. Now, that is the program, and, both as Government officials and my friends, I would like to ask your advice and any suggestions as to what I might do other than that. I understand that all Secretaries of the Treasury have taken copies of papers with them heretofore.

Mr. D.W. Bell: I don’t know of any.

H.W.Jr: They have a copy book right out there.

Mr. D.W. Bell: That is copies of official letters that they signed. They used to have a copy book in front of every Secretary, Under Secretary, and Assistant Secretary, and as they signed the mail, it was recorded in the book. As they went out, they just took the reply that was signed by them.

In your letter you have ten years after your death, and it is none of my affair, but I would like to see you put, say, twenty-five years as a limit on it, not before twenty-five years.

Mr. Philp: You mean twenty-five years from now.

Mr. D.W. Bell: Yes.

H.W.Jr: Twenty-five years from now?

Mr. D.W. Bell: Or ten years after your death, whichever is the later.

There are some things in there that I think would be embarrassing to a lot of people. We have talked quite frankly in your conferences about a lot of people.

Mrs. Klotz: It would be very embarrassing.

Mr. D.W. Bell: We have talked about some of our friends and neighbors.

Mr. White: Yes, and particularly since the copy is in the hands of only one man, and not all the people present at the conferences.

H.W.Jr: But that was understood all the time.

Mr. Garson: Maybe we can get copies at four thousand dollars apiece, Harry.

Mr. White: You can have mine for a nickel. (Laughter)
MR. PEHLE: Do you want me to read this memorandum and letter, Mr. Secretary?

H.W.JR.: Yes.

MR. PEHLE: This is a proposed memorandum which the Secretary would send to Charlie Bell.

(Mr. Pehle quotes Attachment A.)

H.W.JR.: All right.

MR. BELL: Yes, sir.

H.W.JR.: Herbert?

MR. GASTON: All right.

H.W.JR.: Harry?

MR. WHITE: Yes.

(Mr. Pehle quotes Attachment B.)

H.W.JR.: That is very good.

MR. GASTON: You could express the thought that Dan expressed. "Ten years after my death, providing that date does not occur."

MR. PEHLE: Why make it complicated? Twenty-five years covers all the eventualities.

H.W.JR.: Twenty-five years from my death or from now?

MR. PEHLE: From now. I think I would just say twenty-five years from now. I don't think anybody here is going to care twenty-five years from now.

MR. WHITE: I just want time enough to get out of town. (Laughter)
MR. PEARL: If the Republicans got in and were investigating the Roosevelt regime, I don't know whether they could ask you for papers or not.

MR. GASTON: If the official records were all left here, they can't ask him for anything.

MR. JA.: Well, as an attorney, are you sure?

MR. PEARL: I am not at all sure that, if a Congressional committee with the power of subpoena went after these records, they couldn't get them. I think they could.

MR. D.W. REIL: I think they could, too.

MR. PEARL: That is why I think, if this material was carefully edited and the personal and flippant matters deleted, it would be in your own interest and in the public interest.

MR. D.W. REIL: They would be very valuable documents for the Department if you took out all of the personal references.

MR. JA.: I am proposing to take out all of the official letters.

MR. D.W. REIL: I was thinking of the memoranda of the verbatim stuff in the conferences that we have had in the past twelve years.

MR. JA.: Who is going to spend twenty-five thousand dollars doing that? With nine hundred volumes I would have to get five or six people to spend several years at it.

MR. D.W. REIL: I was hoping they might be left here, and Mrs. Kloet might be in charge of editing. She knows what has gone on and what is personal and what is not personal.

Dear Morris:

During my tenure as Secretary of the Treasury I have kept, as protection against any possible personal litigation or personal attacks on me, a diary covering important official acts in which I have participated.

As protection against fire or other accidental destruction I have had prepared, at my expense, a micro-film of these papers.

These personal notes, memoranda, and other documents, in my judgment will provide an important historical perspective on the Roosevelt Administration.

In order that this material may be appropriately kept and dealt with after my death, I would like to have you prepare, as soon as convenient to you, a codicil to my will instructing my executor to deposit such papers, and the micro-film copies thereof, with the Board of Trustees of the Franklin D. Roosevelt Library; to be kept sealed for a period of twenty-five years after my death, and then to be dealt with as in the judgment of the trustees is in the best public interest.

Sincerely,

Mr. Morris Ernst,
265 Madison Avenue,
New York, New York.

Mr. Charles Bell
Secretary Morgenthau

As you know, during my tenure of office as Secretary of the Treasury I have kept a personal diary covering all important matters which I have handled.

I understand that in the volumes of this diary are some original incoming letters addressed to me as Secretary of the Treasury, covering official matters. There probably are also in the diary copies of some outgoing official letters. In most cases I believe there are photostats or other copies of such letters in the Department files but it may not be possible to locate such copies readily.

Accordingly, before my papers are removed from the Department, please arrange to have the original letters referred to above removed from the diary and placed in the regular Department files. The same procedure should be followed in regard to copies of outgoing official letters, and any other documents which should be in the official files.

Replacement copies should of course be made of all documents removed.

My dear Mr. Secretary:

Reference is made to Mr. Green’s letter of July 5, 1945 concerning the transfer on July 3, 1945 of the Polish Embassy property in Washington, D.C., by the Polish Ambassador to an organization known as the American Polish Congress and requesting that this Department take what steps it can to prevent the consummation of the transfer and particularly to prevent the recording of the deed in case it has not already been recorded.

As a result of the telephone conversations referred to in the above letter, an examination was made on the morning of July 6th at the Office of the Recorder of Deeds for the District of Columbia. The records disclose that Jan Olechowski, Ambassador to the United States from Poland, for a stated consideration of $17,000 transferred the Polish Embassy property at 3640-16th Street, N.W., Washington, D.C., to the Polish American Congress, a corporation organized under the laws of Illinois. The deed was filed for recording on July 3, 1945 at 10:31 p.m. Apparently, the transaction had been consummated even before your Department was advised of the transfer by the Polish Ambassador.

This Department confirms your understanding of the application of Executive Order No. 9185, as amended, to the transfer in question. We have been orally advised by members of your Department that in consequence of the above-mentioned telephone conversations the Polish Ambassador was duly informed of the effect of the freezing Order with respect to the transfer and that on July 5 the ambassador stated that he had persuaded the transferee to reverse the transaction.

Excellency:

I recently received, from Mr. Moittirck of the Bank for International Settlements, a letter, dated May 2, 1945, and a copy of a letter of the same date which Mr. Moittirck sent to the British Chancellor of the Exchequer.

I do not contemplate answering the letter addressed to me. Since you likewise participated in the United Nations Monetary and Financial Conference, which unanimously recommended the liquidation of the Bank for International Settlements at the earliest possible moment, I am sending herewith copies of these letters to you for your information.

Very sincerely yours,

A further examination was made of the records at the office of the Recorder of Deeds for the District of Columbia and it appears that the Polish American Congress, Inc., by quit-claim deed dated July 5th and acknowledged on that day, re-transferred the embassy property to the Republic of Poland for the stated consideration of $1.00. This quit-claim deed was filed for recording on July 6 at 1:15 p.m.

Accordingly, it does not appear that any affirmative action on our part is now required. We should appreciate being informed of any further developments.

Sincerely yours,

(Rigas) H. Margraff, Jr.

The Secretary of State.

MEMORANDUM FOR THE FILES:

Res: Republic of Poland

An examination of the records at the office of the District of Columbia Recorder of Deeds at 9 a.m., July 5, 1945, disclosed that Jan Glebovsky, Ambassador to the United States from Poland, signed a deed on July 3, 1945, conveying the property at 2620 Sixteenth Street, Washington, D.C. (Polish Embassy) to the Polish American Congress, a corporation organized under the laws of Illinois, in consideration of $17,500. The deed recited: "The Republic of Poland acting herein by its duly appointed Ambassador to the United States, by order of the Prime Minister, Minister of Finance, and Minister of Foreign Affairs meeting in executive session, party of the first part, etc." The deed was filed for record at 1:15 p.m., July 6, 1945.

Memorandum for the file:

Re: Polish Embassy

An examination of the records of the Recorder's Office of the District of Columbia made on July 9, 1945, revealed that on July 6, 1945, at 1:16 p.m., a quitclaim deed bearing the Recorder's number 22483 was filed for record. By such deed, the Polish American Congress, Inc., a corporation organized under the laws of the state of Illinois, as party of the first part and grantor, in consideration of the sum of $1, quitclaimed the premises on which the Polish Embassy stands to the Republic of Poland. The deed was dated July 5, 1945, and was acknowledged on the same day. It bore no U. S. revenue stamps.

These are the same premises which were conveyed by the Republic of Poland to the Polish American Congress, Inc., by warranty deed on July 3, 1945, for a reported consideration of $17,500.

By dear Senator:

Your letter of June 27, 1945, refers further to our correspondence concerning special refunds of employment taxes overpaid by employees. You point out that pending legislation you have introduced may make it possible to further simplify obtaining such refunds but urge that something be done now to help those who according to your understanding are not getting refunds under present procedure.

The Commissioner of Internal Revenue, Mr. Joseph B. Ruman, Jr., advises me that he has directed a careful examination of the present routines and that he is hopeful that procedures with respect to “special” refunds of overpaid employment taxes may be adjusted to eliminate unnecessary complexities. When a decision has been reached you will be further advised.
