Jersey Highlands Banked with Multitude Hoping to See Portion of Race.

REWARDED FOR LONG WAIT

These Failingly Data Clear Views of Competing Craft and Excitement Filled the Scene.

In today's New York Times, it is disclosed that the history of the "race" of the New York Times Yacht Club's Destroyer, which was supposed to be witnessed by the shore crowd, was marred by thick haze. The race was scheduled for yesterday, but due to the heavy fog, it was postponed until today. The crowd was kept waiting for several hours, but eventually, the race began and the yacht club's Destroyer was seen, but only briefly, due to the thick haze. The crowd was disappointed but happy to be rewarded for their long wait. The race was scheduled to take place in the Rockaway Beach area, and the crowd was hoping to see the Destroyer and other yachts in action. However, due to the thick haze, the view was limited and only a few yachts could be seen. The crowd was disappointed but happy to be rewarded for their long wait.
