INFORMAL EXTEMPORANEOUS REMARKS BY THE PRESIDENT
FROM THE REAR PLATFORM OF HIS SPECIAL TRAIN
SALT LAKE CITY, UTAH, EN ROUTE TO SAN DIEGO, CALIFORNIA

September 29, 1935, 12:45 P.M.

(There were about 15,000 people gathered on the station platform and on the tracks.)

My friends, it is good on this beautiful morning to get back to Salt Lake City and I am very happy to be greeted by my old friends, the Governor and the Mayor of Salt Lake. I don't suppose there is any spot in the whole of the United States that gives me as much of a thrill as when I wake up in the morning and find that I am coming down into this great Salt Lake valley. I had that same thrill this morning and I have had it on many mornings in other years. It is good to see you all.

I always remember the delightful stay I had in Salt Lake and I am very happy today to see from your faces that things for all of you are a lot better than they were when I was here last, three years ago.

I am sorry not to find another old friend here, but it is my fault. The Secretary of War left a few days ago on a mission to represent me at the inauguration of the first President of the new Philippine Commonwealth but I know that George Dern, your former neighbor and Governor, is going to represent not only me but all of the American people in con-

It is a fact. The president of the firm is a fact that he has no a system to reproduce as of the foundation of the firm.

Everything on the way of selling, because to sell by the name.

George, you're not a lawyer correctly. My decision to come - gratulating the Philippine people on the beginning of what will be their complete independence.

To me it is a very fine and remarkable thing in the history of the world that a great nation, obtaining territory as a result of a war and agreeing to give independence to the people in that far-flung territory, has kept its word and that we are going to see the independence of the Philippine Islands in a very few years. It is an illustration of the fact that our people in this country believe in keeping their word. That is a mighty good thing for all of the world.

I wish I could stay and visit with you today but we have to move on and take part in the great ceremony at Boulder Dam tomorrow, a ceremony representing another step forward by this nation. It is good to see you and I hope to come back again next year and see you again.
