I had not intended to make any speech today but I cannot resist the opportunity of thanking you men who are building this dam and, through you, many hundreds and thousands of other men who are doing equally splendid jobs in this Tennessee watershed, to thank you for a contribution that you are making to our American civilization.

I have never seen this particular operation before but I have seen most of the others and I know what you are doing is not merely putting an obstruction across a river just to make a few kilowatts of electricity. We are doing a much bigger job than that. We are not only improving navigation, we are not only making highways across the tops of these structures, we are not only helping to reforest cut-over land but, taking it by and large, we are doing something constructive that will affect the lives of our grandchildren in the United States.

Because of the example that this work is setting, you will cause equal progress not only in the Tennessee Valley but in other parts of the country -- even in parts of the country where there are no rivers to put dams across.
That is why I want you to know that not only your Government is proud of the work that is being done in the Tennessee watershed -- not only the people of Tennessee and the other states in the watershed -- but also people all over the United States are watching your work. That goes down to the common labor, the day labor on this job and extends all the way up through the different trades and professions to the Commission itself.

I am glad to have been here and glad to have had this opportunity of thanking you on behalf of the Nation.

INFORMAL, EXTEMPORANEOUS REMARKS OF THE PRESIDENT
At Chickamauga Dam
Near Chattanooga, Tennessee
November 21, 1939

I had not intended to make any speech today but I cannot resist the opportunity of thanking you men who are building this dam and, through you, many hundreds and thousands of other men who are doing equally splendid jobs in this Tennessee watershed, to thank you for a contribution that you are making to our American civilization.

I have never seen this particular operation before but I have seen most of the others and I know what you are doing is not merely putting an obstruction across a river just to make a few kilowatts of electricity. We are doing a much bigger job than that. We are not only improving navigation and stopping floods, we are not only making highways across the tops of these structures, we are not only helping to reforest cut-over land and conserving soil but, taking it by and large, we are doing something constructive that will affect the lives of our grandchildren in the United States.

Because of the example that this work is setting, you will cause equal progress not only in the Tennessee Valley but in other parts of the country -- even in parts of the country where there are no rivers to put dams across.

That is why I want you to know that not only your Government is proud of the work that is being done in the Tennessee watershed -- not only the people of Tennessee and the other states in the watershed -- but also people all over the United States are watching your work. Words in parentheses are words that were omitted when the speech was delivered, though they appear in the previously prepared reading copy text.

I have never seen this particular manuscript before. However, I have seen your article in the New York Times, and I know that you are going to make a major point about the role of the President in the American political process, and I think it is a point that is very important. In fact, it is a point that I have been making for some time now.

I believe that the President has an important role to play in the political process. He is the chief executive of the United States, and he is responsible for enforcing the laws of the land. He is also the leader of the Democratic Party. He is the leader of the Democratic Party, and he is responsible for setting the agenda of the party.
