Franklin D. Roosevelt — “The Great Communicator”
The Master Speech Files, 1898, 1910-1945
Series 2: “You have nothing to fear but fear itself:” FDR and the New Deal

File No. 1364

1941 March 29

Jackson Day Dinner Radio Address
I am sitting in the little cabin of the little ship "Potomac," in the harbor of Fort Lauderdale, Florida, after a day of sunshine out in the Gulf Stream. That I cannot in person attend one of the many Jackson Day dinners I regret; but it is good that you are again celebrating the memory of a great American leader who believed, fanatically, in the principles of a democracy based on the freedom of the ballot box.

I try to get away a couple of times a year on these short trips on salt water. In Washington, as you know, the working day of the Presidency in these days averages about 15 hours. Even when I go to Hyde Park or to Warm Springs, the White House office, the callers and the telephone all follow me. But at sea the radio messages and the occasional pouch of mail reduce official work to not more than two or three hours a day.
So there is a chance for a bit of sunshine, or a wetted line, or a biography or a detective story or a nap after lunch. Above all there is the opportunity for thinking things through -- for differentiating between principles and methods, between the really big things of life and those other things of the moment which may seem all important today and are forgotten by the world in a month. That means that if today the fellow next to you catches a bigger fish than you do, or vice versa, you don't lie awake at night thinking about it.

Yes, you recapture your philosophy. But in so doing you do not sit down mentally and become a fatalist. You still seek peace of mind and of spirit -- but you come to realize that today you have to work overtime, and work harder than ever before in your life to make that peace possible later on. If we sit down now we may get run over later. And if our kind of civilization gets run over, the kind of peace we seek will become an unattainable dream.
That is why, in the comparative quiet of this week, I have become more than ever clear that the time calls for courage and more courage -- action and more action.

That is why it is appropriate today to honor the name of Andrew Jackson -- because he was first and foremost a great American, who placed his devotion to country above adherence to party, and provided an ever-living symbol of the rugged, courageous spirit of our people.

Responsibility lay heavily upon the shoulders of Andrew Jackson.

In his day the threat to the Federal Union came from within. It was a sectional threat. More than that, it was a threat which came from Jackson's own people -- indeed, from some members of his own party. It was inspired by refusal to recognize the sovereign authority of the United States. And by his actions Jackson placed himself far above both section and party.
In our own day the threat to our Union and to our democracy is not a sectional one. It comes from a great part of the world which surrounds us, and which draws more tightly around us, day by day.

Again, to do this job, we Americans -- nearly all of us -- have risen above any considerations of party politics.

Long before Jackson became President, the two-party system of government had become firmly entrenched as a basic principle of American political life. It had shown its value as a method of obtaining free and open discussion of public issues, formulating new policies to meet new conditions, and fixing responsibility in affairs of government as an indispensable part of our conception of free elections.

The dictators cannot seem to realize that here in America our people can maintain two parties, and at the same time maintain an inviolate and indivisible nation. The totalitarian mentality is too narrow to comprehend the greatness of a people who can be divided in party allegiance at election time, but remain united in devotion to their country and to the ideals of democracy at all times.

In dictatorships there can be no party divisions.
For all men must think as they are told, speak as they are told, write as they are told, live -- and die as they are told. In those countries the nation is not above the party, as with us;
the party is above the nation; the party is the nation.

Every common man and woman is forced to walk the straight and narrow path of the party line, drawn by the dictator himself.

In our country, disagreements among us are expressed in the polling place. In the dictatorships, disagreements are suppressed in the concentration camp.

Last year we held an American election, in which the people -- Democrats, Republicans, Independents and others -- by secret ballot, and without prodding by the bayonets of storm troopers, voted for their public officers -- local, state, and national.
And we are determined so to act that Americans will go on year after year, holding free elections.

All of the great freedoms which form the basis of our American democracy are part and parcel of that concept of free elections, with free expression of political choice between candidates of political parties. For such elections guarantee that there can be no possibility of stifling freedom of speech, freedom of the press and the air, freedom of worship.

These are the eternal principles which are now being threatened by the alliance of dictator nations.

Ours is the responsibility of defending these principles which have come to us as our national heritage. Ours is the responsibility of passing them on -- not only intact, but stronger than ever, to all the generations yet to come.

We Americans realize how tenuous would be the existence of our party system, our freedom of elections, our freedom of living, if the doctrines of dictatorship were to prevail. For if they were to prevail, it would not be in Europe alone.

The history of nations betrayed during the past year, the history of nations conquered during the past year, should show us and the rest of the world what it means to live in a world organized and ruled by the Gestapo.

Let us ask ourselves, frankly and fearlessly: How long could we maintain our ancient liberties under these terrible conditions? How soon would we have to accept the doctrine that one must fight fire with fire?

How long would it be possible to maintain a semblance of our two party system, with free elections, in a Nazi-dominated world?

How soon would we decide to imitate Nazism and abandon our two party system, and regiment our people into one party -- which would certainly be neither Democratic nor Republican?
Should that evil time come, we would no longer hold these friendly gatherings, either on Jackson Day or on Lincoln Day.

We Americans have already weighed these questions carefully and thoughtfully. We Americans have announced our determination that, with all our resources and all our power, we shall help those who block the dictators in their march toward domination of the world.

The decision we have reached is not a partisan decision. The leader of the Republican party himself -- Mr. Wendell Willkie -- in word and in action, is showing what patriotic Americans mean by rising above partisanship and rallying to the common cause. And now that the plain people of America have spoken their determination, Republicans and Democrats in the Congress and out of the Congress are patriotically cooperating to make that determination take positive form.
The enemies of democracy are now trying, by every means, to destroy our unity. The chief weapon they now use against us is propaganda — propaganda that offends to our kindness.

The propaganda comes in ever increasing quantities, with ever increasing violence, from across the seas. And it is disseminated within our own borders by agents or innocent dupes of foreign powers.

It is directed against all Americans — Republican and Democratic — farmers and bankers — employers and employees.

Propagandists, defeatists and dupes, protected as they are by our fundamental civil liberties, have been preaching, and are still preaching, the ungodly gospel of fear. They use insinuation and falsehood. They have tried to shatter the confidence of Americans in their government and in one another.

We have seen what has happened to the great industrialists of Germany who supported the Nazi movement, and then received their reward in Nazi concentration camps or in death.
We have seen how the workers of France were betrayed by their so-called champions, the Communists. For no matter what Communist lips have said, their actions have proved that in their hearts they care nothing for the real rights of free labor.

The agents of Nazism and those who unwittingly help them are still trying to play both ends against the middle. They have attempted to exploit the natural love of our people for peace. They have represented themselves as pacifists, when actually they are serving the most brutal warmongers of all time. They have preached "Peace - Peace!" in the same way that the devil can quote Scripture.

Of course, the purpose of all this has been to spread terror among us. The effect of it has been only to fortify our determination.

When Abraham Lincoln became President, he had to face the awful reality of war between the states. On July 4th, 1861, in his first message to the Congress, he presented this vital question:
"Must a government, of necessity, be too strong for the liberties of its own people, or too weak to maintain its own existence?"

Lincoln answered that question as Jackson had answered it -- not by words, but by deeds. And America still marches on.

We of today have been presented with that same question. We too are answering it by deeds. Our well considered philosophy for the attainment of peace comes not from weakness but -- everlastingly -- from the courage of America.

-Franklin D. Roosevelt

Original reading only U.S.S. Potomac - March 24, 1941
at Port Everglades, Florida.
ADDRESS OF THE PRESIDENT
Broadcast from the U. S. S. POTOMAC, Port Everglades, Florida,
March 29, 1941.

LADIES AND GENTLEMEN:

I am sitting in the little cabin of the little ship "POTOMAC", in the harbor of Fort Lauderdale, Florida, after a day of sunshine out in the Gulf Stream. That I cannot in person attend one of the many Jackson Day dinners I regret; but it is good that you are again celebrating the memory of a great American leader who believed, fanatically almost, in the principles of a democracy based on the freedom of the ballot box.

I try to get away a couple of times a year on these short trips on salt water. In Washington, as you know, the working day of the Presidency in these times averages about fifteen hours, and even when I go to Hyde Park or to Warm Springs, the White House office, the callers, the visitors and the telephones all follow me. But at sea the radio messages and the occasional pouch of mail reduce official work to not more than two or three hours a day.

So there is a chance for a bit of sunshine or a wetted line, or a biography or a detective story or even a nap after lunch. But above all there is the opportunity for thinking things through -- for differentiating between principles and mere methods, between the really big things of life and those other things of the moment that may seem all important today and yet are forgotten by the world in a month. That means that if today the fellow next to you catches a bigger fish than you do, or vice versa as sometimes happens, you don't lie awake at night thinking about it.

Yes, you recapture your philosophy. But in so doing you do not "sit down" mentally and become a fatalist. You still seek peace of mind
Franklin D. Roosevelt Library

This is a transcript made by the White House stenographer from his shorthand notes taken at the time the speech was made. Underlining indicates words extemporaneously added to the previously prepared reading copy text. Words in parentheses are words that were omitted when the speech was delivered, though they appear in the previously prepared reading copy text.
and peace of spirit -- but you come to realize that you have to work overtime nowadays, and work harder than ever before in your life to make that kind of peace possible later on. It is a fact that I think we all recognize that if we sit down now, we may get run over later. And if our kind of civilization gets run over, the kind of peace that we seek will become a mere unattainable dream.

And so that is why, in the comparative quiet of this week, I have become more than ever clear that the time calls for courage and more courage -- calls for action and more action.

That is why it is appropriate today to honor the name of Andrew Jackson -- because he was first and foremost a great American, who placed his devotion to his country above adherence to party, and provided an ever-living symbol of the rugged, courageous spirit of our people.

Responsibility lay heavily on the shoulders of Andrew Jackson.

In his day the threat to the Federal Union came from within. It was a sectional threat. More than that, it was a threat that came from some of Jackson's own people -- indeed, from some members of his own party. It was inspired by refusal to recognize the sovereign authority of the United States. And by his actions Jackson placed himself far above both section and party.

In our own day the threat to our Union and to our democracy is not a sectional one. Far from it, it comes from a great part of the world that surrounds us, that draws more tightly around us, day by day.

Again, to do this job, we Americans -- nearly all of us -- have risen above any considerations of party politics.

Long before Jackson became President, the two-party system of government had become firmly entrenched as a basic principle of American political life. It had shown its value, it had shown its value as a method of obtaining free and open discussion of public issues, formulating new policies to meet new conditions, fixing responsibility in affairs of government as an indispensable part of our conception of free elections.

Now the dictators of some lands cannot seem to realize that here in America our people can maintain two parties, and at the same time maintain an inviolate and indivisible nation. The totalitarian mentality is too narrow to comprehend the greatness of a people who can be divided in party allegiance at election time, but remain united in devotion to their country and to the ideals of democracy at all times.

In dictatorships there can be no party divisions. For all men must think as they are told, speak as they are told, write as they are told, live — and die as they are told. In those countries the nation is not above the party, as with us; the party is above the nation; the party is the nation.

Every common man and woman is forced to walk the straight and narrow path of the party line, not strictly, not strictly speaking a party line, but rather a line drawn by the dictator himself, who owns the party.

In our country, disagreements among us are expressed in the polling place. In the dictatorships, disagreements are suppressed in the concentration camp.

Last year we held an American election, in which the people — Democrats, Republicans, Independents and others — by secret ballot, and without prodding by the bayonets of storm troopers, voted for their public officers — local, and state, and national.

And we are determined so to act that Americans will go on year after year, holding free elections.
For all of the great freedoms that form the basis of our American democracy are a part and a parcel of that concept of free elections, with free expression of political choice between candidates of political parties. For such elections guarantee that there can be no possibility of stifling freedom of speech, or freedom of the press, or freedom of the air, or freedom of worship.

These are the eternal principles that are now being threatened by the alliance of dictator nations.

Ours is the responsibility of defending these principles that have come to us as our national heritage. Ours is the responsibility of passing them on -- not only intact today, but stronger than ever, to all of the generations yet to come.

We Americans realize how tenuous would be the existence of our party system, our freedom of elections, our freedom of living, if the doctrines of dictatorship were to prevail. For if they were to prevail, it would not be in Europe alone.

The history of nations betrayed during the past year, the history of nations conquered during the past year, should show us and should show the rest of the world what it means to live in a world organized and ruled by the Gestapo.

Let us ask ourselves, frankly and fearlessly: How long could we maintain our ancient liberties under these terrible conditions? How soon would we have to accept the doctrine that one must fight fire with fire?

How long would it be possible to maintain a semblance of our two-party system, with free elections, in a Nazi-dominated world?

How soon would we decide to imitate Nazi-ism and abandon our two-party system, and regiment our people into one party -- which would certainly be neither Democratic nor Republican?

Should that evil time come, we would no longer hold these friendly gatherings, either on Jackson Day or on Lincoln Day.

We Americans have already weighed these questions carefully and thoughtfully. We Americans have announced our determination that, with all our resources and all our power, we shall help those who block the dictators in their march toward domination of the world.

The decision we have reached is not a partisan decision. The leader of the Republican party himself -- Mr. Wendell Willkie -- in word and in action, is showing what patriotic Americans mean by rising above partisanship and rallying to the common cause. And now that the plain people of America have spoken their determination, Republicans and Democrats in the Congress and out of the Congress are patriotically cooperating to make that determination take positive forms.

The enemies of democracy are now trying, by every means, to destroy our unity. The chief weapon they now use against us is propaganda -- propaganda that appeals to selfishness, that propaganda comes in ever increasing quantities, with ever increasing violence, from across the seas. And it is disseminated within our own borders by agents or, equally menacing, by innocent dupes of foreign powers.

It is directed against all Americans -- Republican and Democratic -- farmers and bankers -- employers and employees.

Propagandists, defeatists and dupes, protected as they are by our fundamental civil liberties, have been preaching, and are still preaching, the ungodly gospel of fear. They use insinuation and falsehood. They have tried to shatter the confidence of Americans in their Government and in one another.
We have seen what has happened to the great industrialists of Germany for example, industrialists who supported the Nazi movement, and then received their reward in Nazi concentration camps or in death. We have seen how the workers of France were betrayed by their so-called champions, the Communists. For no matter what Communist lips have said, their actions have proved that in their hearts they care nothing for the real rights of free labor.

The agents of Nazi-ism and those who unwittingly help them are still trying to play both ends against the middle. They have attempted to exploit the natural love of our people for peace. They have represented themselves as pacifists, when actually they are serving the most brutal warmongers of all time. They have preached "Peace -- Peace!" in the same way that the devil can speciously quote the Scriptures.

Of course, the purpose of all this has been to spread terror among us. But the effect of it has been only to fortify our determination.

When Abraham Lincoln became President, he had to face the awful reality of a war between the states. On July 4, 1861, in his first Message to the Congress, he presented this vital question:

"Must a government, of necessity, be too strong for the liberties of its own people, or too weak to maintain its own existence?"

Lincoln answered that question as Jackson had answered it before -- not by words, but by deeds. And America still marches on.

We of today have been presented with that same question. We too are answering it by deeds. Our well considered philosophy for the attainment of peace comes not from weakness but -- eternally -- from the courage of America.
I am sitting in the little cabin of the little ship "Patuxent," in the harbor of Fort Lauderdale, Florida, after a day of fishing out on the Gulf Stream. That I cannot in person attend one of the many Jackson Day dinners I regret; but it is good that you are again celebrating the memory of great American leaders who believed fundamentally, almost in the principles of a democracy, based on the freedom of the ballot box.

I try to get away a couple of times a year on these short trips on salt water. In Washington as you know the working day of the Presidency these journeys is about 15 hours. Even when I go to Hyde Park or to Warm Springs, the White House office, the callers and the telephone all just seem. But at sea the radio messages and the occasional pouch of mail reduce official work to not more than two or three hours a day.

So there is a chance for a bit of fishing or a mellow tune, or a biography or a detective story or a nap after lunch. Above all there is the opportunity for thinking.
things through — for differentiating between the principles and methods, between the really big things of life and those other things of the moment which may seem all important today and are forgotten by the world in a month. That means that it today the fellows next week catch a bigger fish than you do, or vice versa. You don't sit awake at night thinking about it.

Yes, you recapture your philosophy, but in so doing you do not sit there mentally and become a fatalist. You are for peace of mind and a spirit but you came to realize that sometimes you have to work overtime and work harder than ever before in your life to make that peace possible later on. If we sit down now we may get run over later. And if ever kind of civilization gets run over the kind of peace we seek will become an unattainable hope.

That is why the time talks in the conversation quiet of this week I have dreamt more than ever clear that
The time calls for courage and more courage; action and more action. That is why it is appropriate today to honor

A.
B.
C.
D.
E.
The immediate occasion for these Jackson Day dinners being held tonight throughout the United States is a celebration, by a political party, in honor of one of the really great leaders of that party. But every Democrat honors the name of Andrew Jackson because he was first and foremost a great American, who placed his devotion to country above adherence to party, and provided an ever-living symbol of the rugged, courageous spirit of our people.

Long before Jackson became President, the two-party system of government had become firmly entrenched as a basic principle of American political life. It had shown its value as a method of obtaining free and open discussion of public issues, as a means of formulating new policies to meet new conditions, and as a method for fixing responsibility in affairs of government.

Since Jackson's time the two-party system of government has become ever more deeply imbedded in our political life; today it is an indispensable part of our conception of free elections.

The dictators cannot seem to realize that here in America our people can maintain two or more political parties, and at the same time maintain an inviolate and indivisible nation. The totalitarian mentality is too rigidly limited to comprehend the greatness of a people, who can be divided in party allegiance at election time, but remain united in devotion to their country and to the ideals of democracy at all times.

In dictatorships there can be no party divisions. For all men must think as they are told, speak as they are told, write as they are told, worship as they are told, live - and die as they are told. In those countries the nation is not above the party, as with us; the party is above the nation; the party is the nation.

Every common man and woman is forced to walk the straight and narrow path of the party line, as drawn by the dictator himself.

In our country, disagreements among us are expressed in the polling place. In the dictatorships, disagreements are suppressed in the concentration camps.

Last year we held an American election, in which the people - the Democrats and the Republicans - by secret ballot, and without prodding by the bayonets of storm troopers, voted for their public officers - local, state, and national.

And next year we shall have another American free election, another contest between two parties, each with its own candidates arguing against each other, pointing with pride, viewing with alarm, and perhaps even calling names. And then again, in 1944 we shall have another free election, in which a new President will be chosen, and Senators, and Congressmen; Governors and Mayors; Sheriffs and Constables.

And we are determined so to act that Americans will go on year after year, holding such free elections, in the old way - "come hell or high water!"

All of the great freedoms which form the basis of our American democracy are part and parcel of that concept of free elections, with free expression of political choice between candidates of political parties. For such elections guarantee that there can be no possibility of stifling freedom of speech, freedom of the press and the air, freedom of worship.

These are the eternal principles which America is now arming itself to defend. These are the eternal principles which are now being threatened by the alliance of dictator nations. Ours is the responsibility of defending these principles which have come to us as our national heritage. Ours is the responsibility of passing them on—not only intact, but stronger than ever, to all the generations yet to come.

That sense of responsibility lay heavily upon the shoulders of Andrew Jackson.

In his day the threat to the Federal Union came from within. It was a sectional threat. More than that, it was a threat which came from Jackson's own people—indeed, from some members of his own party. It was inspired by refusal to recognize the sovereign authority of the United States. And by his actions Jackson placed himself far above both section and party. He did the job which had to be done—the preservation of the Union.

In our own day the threat to our Union and to our democracy is not a sectional one. It comes from the world which surrounds us, and which draws more tightly around us, day by day. The great job of our generation is to protect our democracy from this danger, which presses upon us from across the Atlantic and the Pacific.

Again, to do this job, we Americans have all risen above any considerations of party politics.

We Americans realize how tenuous would be the existence of our party system, our freedom of elections, our freedom of living, if the doctrines of dictatorship were to prevail. For if they were to prevail, it would not be in Europe alone. There would be an immediate domination of every continent on earth except our own.

The history of European nations betrayed during the past year, the history of European nations conquered during the past year, has shown us and the rest of the world what it means to live in a world organized and ruled by the Gestapo.

Let us form in our minds a clear picture of what such a world would be like.

We are now mobilizing the entire strength of our nation for what we recognize as a temporary emergency. But—in the event of Nazi victory—this emergency would not be temporary; it would be permanent.

We should be required permanently to organize our entire industry for war.

We should be engaged permanently in armament races with the hostile powers, who would control and dominate every continent but our own.

To defend this hemisphere from invasion, we should have to patrol continuously the Atlantic and Pacific with our fleets—all the way from the Arctic to the Antarctic. We should have to keep huge armies constantly under arms, constantly on the alert, constantly ready for action along far-flung lines of battle.

Let us ask ourselves, frankly and fearlessly:

How long could we maintain our ancient liberties under these terrible conditions? How long could we maintain our civil liberties when, in all the rest of the world,
How soon would we have to accept the doctrine that one must fight fire with fire and that one nation, fighting alone, cannot successfully endure, in a completely totalitarian world, without surrendering its own freedom and becoming totalitarian itself?

How long would it be possible to maintain a semblance of our two party system, with free elections, in a Nazi-dominated world?

How soon would we decide to imitate our triumphant opponents, and abandon our two party system, and regiment our people into one party - which would certainly be neither Democratic nor Republican?

Should that evil time come, we would no longer hold these friendly gatherings, either on Jackson Day or on Lincoln Day.

We Americans have already weighed these questions carefully and thoughtfully. We Americans have announced our determination that, with all our resources and all our power, we shall help those who block the dictators in their march toward domination of the world.

The decision we have reached is not a partisan decision. The leader of the Republican party himself - Mr. Wendell Willkie - in word and in action, by forgetting partisanship and rallying to the common cause. And now that the plain people of America have spoken their determination, Republicans and Democrats, in the Congress and out of the Congress, are patriotically cooperating to make that determination take positive form.
Last November, on the evening before Election Day, speaking to the nation from my home, I said:

"After the ballots are counted, the real rulers of this country will have had their say, as they have had it every two years or every four years during our whole national existence.

"After the ballots are counted, the United States of America will still be united."

That was no expression of mere pious hope.

It was a statement of the faith that is the mind and heart of every one of us. It was the plain truth. And today, the whole world knows that it is the truth.

The enemies of democracy are now trying, by every means, to destroy our unity. The weapons they use against us are propaganda and sabotage.

The propaganda comes in every increasing quantities, with ever increasing violence, from across the seas. And it is disseminated within our own borders by agents or innocent dupes of foreign powers.

It is directed against all Americans - Republican and Democratic - farmers and bankers - employers and employees.

We have witnessed a terrible, tragic demonstration of the power of propaganda and sabotage in the defeat of the French Republic.

In France the agents of both Fascism and Communism collaborated in working to divide a great people and destroy their powers of resistance.

The Fascists sowed their seeds of discord among the wealthier classes. The Communists spread their own tremendous brand of poison among the workers.

The Fascists and the Communists in our own midst are few in number—but they are and their dupes are still capable of making a great deal of noise. Protected as they are—certainly all men in our democracy always will be—by our fundamental civil liberties, they have been preaching, and are still preaching, the ungodly gospel of fear. They have tried to shatter the confidence of Americans in their government and in one another.

The Fascists have told the business men and financiers that our government is Communist—and under the domination of “labor racketeers.”

The Communists have told the workers that our government is Fascist—and under the domination of international bankers.

We have seen what has happened to the great industrialists of Germany who supported the Nazi movement, and then received their reward in Nazi concentration camps or in death.

We have seen how the workers of France were betrayed by their so-called champions, the Communists. For no matter what Communist lips have said, their actions have proved that in their hearts they care nothing for the real rights of free labor.

The Wahfully Allegiance of Fascists and Communists still trying to play both ends against the middle. They have attempted to exploit the natural love of our people for peace. They have represented themselves as pacifists, when actually they are agents of the most brutal warmongers of all time. They have preached "Peace - Peace!" in the same way the devil can quote Scriptures.

These foreign agents have committed physical sabotage in many parts of our great defense structure. When I say physical sabotage, I mean dynamiting of defense plants, wrecking of trains, endangering the very lives of the men in our armed forces. And, even worse than this, are the attempts of these foreign agents and their dupes to commit spiritual sabotage on our national will.

Of course, the purpose of all this war has been to spread terror among us. The effect of it has been only to fortify our determination.

When Abraham Lincoln became President, he had to face the awful reality of war between the states. On July 4th, 1861, in his first message to the Congress, he presented this vital question:

"Must a government, of necessity, be too strong for the liberties of its own people, or too weak to maintain its own existence?"

Lincoln answered that question as Jackson had answered it - not by words, but by deeds.

We Americans of today have been presented with that same question. We too are answering it by deeds. I believe that it is within our power to answer by the same sword.
I am sitting in the little cabin of the little ship "Potomac," in the harbor of Fort Lauderdale, Florida, after a day of sunshine out in the Gulf Stream. That I cannot in person attend one of the many Jackson Day dinners I regret; but it is good that you are again celebrating the memory of a great American leader who believed, fanatically almost, in the principles of a democracy based on the freedom of the ballot box.

I try to get away a couple of times a year on these short trips on salt water. In Washington as you know the working day of the Presidency in these days averages about 15 hours. Even when I go to Hyde Park or to Warm Springs, the White House office, the callers and the telephone all follow me. But at sea the radio messages and the occasional pouch of mail reduce official work to not more than two or three hours a day.

So there is a chance for a bit of sunshine or a wetted line, or a biography or a detective story or a nap after lunch. Above all there is the opportunity for thinking.
things through -- for differentiating between principles and methods, between the really big things of life and those other things of the moment which may seem all important today and are forgotten by the world in a month. That means that if today the fellow next to you catches a bigger fish than you do, or vice versa, you don’t lie awake at night thinking about it.

Yes, you recapture your philosophy, but in so doing you do not sit down mentally and become a fatalist. You peace of mind and of spirit, you come to realize that today you have to work overtime, and work harder than ever before in your life to make that peace possible later on. If we sit down now we may get run over later. And if our kind of civilization gets run over, the kind of peace we seek will become an unattainable hope.

That is why, in the comparative quiet of this week, I have become more than ever clear that the time calls for courage and more courage -- action and more action.

That is why it is appropriate today to honor the name of Andrew Jackson -- because he was first and foremost a great American, who placed his devotion to country above adherence to party, and provided an ever-living symbol of the rugged, courageous spirit of our people.

Responsibility lay heavily upon the shoulders of Andrew Jackson.

In his day the threat to the Federal Union came from within. It was a sectional threat. More than that, it was a threat which came from Jackson's own people -- indeed, from some members of his own party. It was inspired by refusal to recognize the sovereign authority of the United States. And by his actions Jackson placed himself far above both section and party. He did the job which had to be done -- the preservation of the Union.

In our own day the threat to our Union and to our democracy is not a sectional one. It comes from a great part of the world which surrounds us, and which draws more tightly around us, day by day.

Again, to do this job, we Americans have risen above any considerations of party politics.

Long before Jackson became President, the two-party system of government had become firmly entrenched as a basic principle of American political life. It had shown its value as a method of obtaining free and open discussion of public issues, formulating new policies to meet new conditions, and fixing responsibility in affairs of government as an indispensable part of our conception of free elections.

The dictators cannot seem to realize that here in America our people can maintain two parties, and at the same time maintain an inviolate and indivisible nation. The totalitarian mentality is too rigidly limited to comprehend the greatness of a people who can be divided in party allegiance at election time, but remain united in devotion to their country and to the ideals of democracy at all times.

In dictatorships there can be no party divisions. For all men must think as they are told, speak as they are told, write as they are told, live — and die as they are told. In those countries the nation is not above the party, as with us; the party is above the nation; the party is the nation.

Every common man and woman is forced to walk the straight and narrow path of the party line, as drawn by the dictator himself.

In our country, disagreements among us are expressed in the polling place. In the dictatorships, disagreements are suppressed in the concentration camps.

Last year we held an American election, in which the people — Democrats, Republicans — by secret ballot, and without prodding by the bayonets of storm troopers, voted for their public officers — local, state, and national.

And we are determined so to act that Americans will go on year after year, holding free elections.

All of the great freedoms which form the basis of our American democracy are part and parcel of that concept of free elections, with free expression of political choice between candidates of political parties. For such elections guarantee that there can be no possibility of stifling freedom of speech, freedom of the press and the air, freedom of worship.

These are the eternal principles which are now being threatened by the alliance of dictator nations.

Ours is the responsibility of defending these principles which have come to us as our national heritage.

Ours is the responsibility of passing them on — not only intact, but stronger than ever, to all the generations yet to come.
We Americans realize how tenuous would be the existence of our party system, our freedom of elections, our freedom of living, if the doctrines of dictatorship were to prevail. For if they were to prevail, it would not be in Europe alone.

The history of nations betrayed during the past year, the history of nations conquered during the past year, should show us and the rest of the world what it means to live in a world organized and ruled by the Gestapo.

Let us ask ourselves, frankly and fearlessly:

How long could we maintain our ancient liberties under these terrible conditions? How soon would we have to accept the doctrine that one must fight fire with fire.

How long would it be possible to maintain a semblance of our two-party system, with free elections, in a Nazi-dominated world?

How soon would we decide to imitate Nazism and abandon our two-party system, and regiment our people into one party -- which would certainly be neither Democratic nor Republican?

Should that evil time come, we would no longer hold these friendly gatherings, either on Jackson Day or on Lincoln Day.

- 6 -
We Americans have already weighed these questions carefully and thoughtfully. We Americans have announced our determination that, with all our resources and all our power, we shall help those who block the dictators in their march toward domination of the world.

The decision we have reached is not a partisan decision. The leader of the Republican party himself -- Mr. Wendell Willkie -- in word and in action, is showing what patriotic Americans mean by rising above partisanship and rallying to the common cause. And now that the plain people of America have spoken their determination, Republicans and Democrats in the Congress and out of the Congress are patriotically cooperating to make that determination take positive form.

The enemies of democracy are now trying, by every means, to destroy our unity. The weapons they use against us is propaganda.

The propaganda comes in ever increasing quantities, with ever increasing violence, from across the seas. And it is disseminated within our own borders by agents or innocent dupes of foreign powers.
It is directed against all Americans -- Republican and Democratic -- farmers and bankers -- employers and employees.

Propagandists, defeatists and dupes, protected as they are by our fundamental civil liberties, have been preaching, and are still preaching, the ungodly gospel of fear. They have tried to shatter the confidence of Americans in their government and in one another.

We have seen what has happened to the great industrialists of Germany who supported the Nazi movement, and then received their reward in Nazi concentration camps or in death.

We have seen how the workers of France were betrayed by their so-called champions, the Communists. For no matter what Communist lips have said, their actions have proved that in their hearts they care nothing for the real rights of free labor.

The agents of Nazism and those who unwittingly help them are still trying to play both ends against the middle. They have attempted to exploit the natural love of our people for peace. They have represented themselves as pacifists, when actually they are serving the most brutal warmongers of all time. They have preached "Peace - Peace!" in the same way the devil can quote Scripture.

Of course, the purpose of all this has been to spread terror among us. The effect of it has been only to fortify our determination.

When Abraham Lincoln became President, he had to face the awful reality of war between the states. On July 4th, 1861, in his first message to the Congress, he presented this vital question:

"Must a government, of necessity, be too strong for the liberties of its own people, or too weak to maintain its own existence?"

Lincoln answered that question as Jackson had answered it -- not by words, but by deeds. And America still marches on.

We Americans of today have been presented with that same question. We too are answering it by deeds. Our well considered philosophy for the attainment of peace comes not from weakness but -- everlastingly -- from the courage of America.
Ladies and Gentlemen:

I am sitting in the little cabin of the little ship "Potomac," in the harbor of Fort Lauderdale, Florida, after a day of sunshine out in the Gulf Stream. That I cannot in person attend one of the many Jackson Day dinners I regret; but it is good that you are again celebrating the memory of a great American leader who believed, fanatically almost, in the principles of a democracy based on the freedom of the ballot box.

I try to get away a couple of times a year on these short trips on salt water. In Washington, as you know, the working day of the Presidency in these times averages about 15 hours, and even when I go to Hyde Park or to Warm Springs, the White House office, the callers, the visitors and the telephone all follow me. But at sea the radio messages and the occasional pouch of mail reduce official work to not more than two or three hours a day.

So there is a chance for a bit of sunshine or a wetted line, or a biography or a detective story or even a nap after lunch. But above all there is the opportunity for thinking things through — for differentiating between principles and mere methods, between the really big things of life and those other things of the moment that may seem all important today and yet are forgotten by the world in a month. That means that if today the fellow next to you catches a bigger fish than you do, or vice versa, as sometimes happens, you don’t lie awake at night thinking about it.

Yes, you recapture your philosophy. But in so doing you do not "sit down" mentally and become a fatalist. You still seek peace of mind and peace of spirit — but you come to realize that you have to work overtime nowadays, and work harder than ever before in your life to make that peace possible later on. It is a fact that I think we all recognize that if we sit down now, we may get run over later. And if our kind of civilization gets run over, the kind of peace that we seek will become a mere unattainable dream.

And so that is why, in the comparative quiet of this week, I have become more than ever clear that the time calls for courage and more courage — calls for action and more action.

That is why it is appropriate today to honor the name of Andrew Jackson — because he was first and foremost a great American, who placed his devotion to his country above adherence to party, and provided an ever-living symbol of the rugged, courageous spirit of our people.
Responsibility lay heavily on the shoulders of Andrew Jackson.

In his day the threat to the Federal Union came from within. It was a sectional threat. More than that, it was a threat that came from some of Jackson's own people — indeed, from some members of his own party. It was inspired by refusal to recognize the sovereign authority of the United States. And by his actions Jackson placed himself far above both section and party.

In our own day the threat to our Union and to our democracy is not a sectional one. Far from it; it comes from a great part of the world that surrounds us, that draws more tightly around us, day by day.

Again, to do this job, we Americans — nearly all of us — have risen above any considerations of party politics.

Long before Jackson became President, the two-party system of government had become firmly entrenched as a basic principle of American political life. It had shown its value as a method of obtaining free and open discussion of public issues, formulating new policies to meet new conditions, fixing responsibility in affairs of government as an indispensable part of our conception of free elections.

Now the dictators of some lands cannot seem to realize that here in America our people can maintain two parties, and at the same time maintain an inviolate and indivisible nation. The totalitarian mentality is too narrow to comprehend the greatness of a people who can be divided in party allegiance at election time, but remain united in devotion to their country and to the ideals of democracy at all times.

In dictatorships there can be no party divisions. For all men must think as they are told, speak as they are told, write as they are told, live — and die as they are told. In those countries the nation is not above the party, as with us; the party is above the nation; the party is the nation.

Every common man and woman is forced to walk the straight and narrow path of the party line, not strictly, not strictly speaking a party line, but rather a line drawn by the dictator himself, who owns the party.

In our country, disagreements among us are expressed in the polling place. In the dictatorships, disagreements are suppressed in the concentration camp.

Last year we held an American election, in which the people — Democrats, Republicans, Independents and others — by secret ballot, and without prodding by the bayonets of storm troopers, voted for their public officers — local, and state, and national.

And we are determined so to act that Americans will go on year after year, holding free elections.
For all of the great freedoms that form the basis of our American democracy are a part and a parcel of that concept of free elections, with free expression of political choice between candidates of political parties. For such elections guarantee that there can be no possibility of stifling freedom of speech, or freedom of the press, or freedom of the air, or freedom of worship.

These are the eternal principles that are now being threatened by the alliance of dictator nations.

Ours is the responsibility of defending these principles that have come to us as our national heritage. Ours is the responsibility of passing them on — not only intact today, but stronger than ever, to all of the generations yet to come.

We Americans realize how tenuous would be the existence of our party system, our freedom of elections, our freedom of living, if the doctrines of dictatorship were to prevail. For if they were to prevail, it would not be in Europe alone.

The history of nations betrayed during the past year, the history of nations conquered during the past year, should show us and should show the rest of the world what it means to live in a world organized and ruled by the Gestapo.

Let us ask ourselves, frankly and fearlessly: How long could we maintain our ancient liberties under these terrible conditions? How soon would we have to accept the doctrine that one must fight fire with fire?

How long would it be possible to maintain a semblance of our two-party system, with free elections, in a Nazi-dominated world?

How soon would we decide to imitate Nazism and abandon our two-party system, and regiment our people into one party — which would certainly be neither Democratic nor Republican?

Should that evil time come, we would no longer hold these friendly gatherings, either on Jackson Day or on Lincoln Day.

We Americans have already weighed these questions carefully and thoughtfully. We Americans have announced our determination that, with all our resources and all our power, we shall help those who block the dictators in their march toward domination of the world.

The decision we have reached is not a partisan decision. The leader of the Republican party himself — Mr. Wendell Willkie — in word and in action, is showing what patriotic Americans mean by rising above partisanship and rallying to the common cause. And now that the plain people of America have spoken their determination, Republicans and Democrats in the Congress and out of the Congress are patriotically cooperating to make that determination take positive forms.
The enemies of democracy are now trying, by every means, to destroy our unity. The chief weapon they now use against us is propaganda — propaganda that appeals to selfishness, that comes in ever increasing quantities, with ever increasing violence, from across the seas. And it is disseminated within our own borders by agents or, equally menacing, by innocent dupes of foreign powers.

It is directed against all Americans — Republican and Democratic — farmers and bankers — employers and employees.

Propagandists, defeatists and dupes, protected as they are by our fundamental civil liberties, have been preaching, and are still preaching, the ungodly gospel of fear. They use insinuation and falsehood. They have tried to shatter the confidence of Americans in their government and in one another.

We have seen what has happened to the great industrialists of Germany for example, industrialists who supported the Nazi movement, and then received their reward in Nazi concentration camps or in death.

We have seen how the workers of France were betrayed by their so-called champions, the Communists. For no matter what Communist lips have said, their actions have proved that in their hearts they care nothing for the real rights of free labor.

The agents of Nazism and those who unwittingly help them are still trying to play both ends against the middle. They have attempted to exploit the natural love of our people for peace. They have represented themselves as pacifists, when actually they are serving the most brutal warmongers of all time. They have preached "Peace — Peace!" in the same way that the devil can spastically quote the Scriptures.

Of course, the purpose of all this has been to spread terror among us. But the effect of it has been only to fortify our determination.

When Abraham Lincoln became President, he had to face the awful reality of a war between the states. On July 4th, 1861, in his first message to the Congress, he presented this vital question:

"Must a government, of necessity, be too strong for the liberties of its own people, or too weak to maintain its own existence?"

Lincoln answered that question as Jackson had answered it before — not by words, but by deeds. And America still marches on.

We of today have been presented with that same question. We too are answering it by deeds. Our well considered philosophy for the attainment of peace comes not from weakness but — everlasting — from the courage of America.
Jackson Day Speech  3/19/41
Delivered by FDR on boat while on trip. This is copy of speech by RESS eloped to his boat.
The immediate occasion for these Jackson Day dinners being held tonight throughout the United States is a celebration, by a political party, in honor of one of the really great leaders of that party. But every Democrat honors the name of Andrew Jackson because he was first and foremost a great American, who placed his devotion to country above adherence to party, and provided an ever-living symbol of the rugged, courageous spirit of our people.

Long before Jackson became President the two party system of government had become firmly entrenched as a basic principle of American political life. It had shown its value as a method of obtaining free and open discussion of public issues, as a means of formulating new policies to meet new conditions, and as a method for fixing responsibility in affairs of government.

Since Jackson's time that two party system of government has become ever more deeply imbedded in our political life; today it is an indispensable part of our conception of free elections.

The dictators cannot seem to realize that here in America our people can maintain two or more political parties and at the same time maintain an inviolate and indivisible nation. The totalitarian mentality is too rigidly limited to comprehend the greatness of a people, who can be divided in party allegiance at election time, but remain united in devotion to their country and to the ideals of democracy at all times.

In dictatorships there can be no party divisions. For all men must think as they are told, speak as they are told, write as they are told, worship as they are told, live - and die as they are told. In those countries the nation is not above the party, as with us; the party is above the nation; the party is the nation.

Every common man and woman is forced to walk the straight and narrow path of the party line, as drawn by the dictator himself.

In our country, disagreements among us are expressed in the polling place. In the dictatorships, disagreements are suppressed in the concentration camps.

Last year we held an American election, in which the people - the Democrats and the Republicans - by secret ballot, and without prodding by the bayonets of storm troopers, voted for their public officers - local, state, and national.

And next year we shall have another American free election, another contest between two parties, each with its own candidates arguing against each other, pointing with pride, viewing with alarm, and perhaps even calling names. And then again, in 1946 we shall have another free election, in which a new President will be chosen, and Senators, and Congressmen; Governors and Mayors, Sheriffs and Constables.

And we are determined so to act that Americans will go on year after year, holding such free elections in the same old way - "come hell or high water!"

All of the great freedoms which form the basis of our American democracy are part and parcel of that concept of free elections, with free expression of political choice between candidates of political parties. For such elections guarantee that there can be no possibility of stifling freedom of speech, freedom of the press and the air, freedom of worship.

These are the eternal principles which America is now arming itself to defend. These are the eternal principles which are now being threatened by the alliance of dictator nations. Ours is the responsibility of defending these principles which have come to us as our national heritage. Ours is the responsibility of passing them on not only intact, but stronger than ever, to all the generations yet to come.

That same sense of responsibility lay heavily upon the shoulders of Andrew Jackson.

In his day the threat to the Federal Union came from within. It was a sectional threat. More than that, it was a threat which came from Jackson's own people indeed, from some members of his own party. It was inspired by refusal to recognize the sovereign authority of the United States. And by his actions Jackson placed himself far above both section and party. He did the job which had to be done — the preservation of the Union.

In our own day the threat to our Union and to our democracy is not a sectional one. It comes from the whole world which surrounds us, and which draws more tightly around us, day by day. The great job of our generation is to protect our democracy from this danger, which presses upon us from across the Atlantic and the Pacific.

To do this job, we Americans have all risen above
any considerations of party politics.

We Americans realize how temrous would be the existence of our party system, our freedom of elections, our freedom of living, if the doctrines of dictatorship were to prevail. For if they were to prevail, it would not be in Europe alone. There would be an immediate domination of every continent on earth except our own.

The history of European nations betrayed during the past year, the history of European nations conquered during the past year, has shown us and the rest of the world what it means to live in a world organized and ruled by the Gestapo.

Let us form in our minds a clear picture of what such a world would be like.

We are now mobilizing the entire strength of our nation for what we recognize as a temporary emergency. But in the event of Nazi victory – this emergency would not be temporary; it would be permanent.

We should be required permanently to organize our entire industry for war.

We should be engaged permanently in armament races with the hostile powers, who would control and dominate every continent but our own.

To defend this hemisphere from invasion, we should have to patrol continuously the Atlantic and Pacific with our fleet – all the way from the Arctic to the Antarctic. We should have to keep huge armies constantly under arms, constantly on the alert, constantly ready for action along far-flung lines of battle.

Let us ask ourselves, frankly and fearlessly: For how long could we maintain our ancient liberties under these terrible conditions? For how long could we maintain our civil liberties then, in all the rest of the world, civil liberties were dead? How soon would we have to accept the doctrine that one must fight fire with fire - and that one nation, fighting alone, cannot successfully endure, in a completely totalitarian world, without surrendering its own freedom and becoming totalitarian itself?

How long would it be possible to maintain a semblance of our two party system, with free elections, in a Nazi-dominated world?

How soon would we decide to imitate our triumphant opponents, and abandon our two party system, and regiment our people into one party - which would certainly be neither Democratic nor Republican?

Should that evil time come, we would no longer hold these friendly gatherings, either on Jackson Day or on Lincoln Day.

We Americans have already weighed these questions carefully and thoughtfully. We Americans have announced our determination that, with all our resources and all our power, we shall help those who block the dictators in their march toward domination of the world.

The decision we have reached is not a partisan decision. The leader of the Republican party himself - Mr. Wendell Willkie - in word and in action, has shown what patriotic Americans mean by forgetting partisanship and rallying to the common cause. And now that the plain people of America have spoken their determination, Republicans and Democrats, in the Congress and out of the Congress, are patriotically cooperating to make that determination take positive form.
Last November, on the evening before Election Day, speaking to the nation from my home, I said:

"After the ballots are counted, the real rulers of this country will have had their say, as they have had it every two years or every four years during our whole national existence.

"After the ballots are counted, the United States of America will still be united."

That was no expression of mere pious hope.

It was a statement of the faith that is the mind and heart of every one of us. It was the plain truth.

And today, the whole world knows that it is the truth.

The enemies of democracy are now trying, by every means, to destroy our unity. The weapons they use against us are propaganda and sabotage.

The propaganda comes in every increasing quantities, with ever increasing violence, from across the seas.

And it is disseminated within our own borders by agents or innocent dupes of foreign powers.

It is directed against all Americans - Republicans and Democratic - farmers and bankers - employers and employees.

We have witnessed a terrible, tragic demonstration of the power of propaganda and sabotage in the defeat of the French Republic.

In France the agents of both Fascism and Communism collaborated in working to divide a great people and destroy their powers of resistance.

The Fascists sowed their seeds of discord among the wealthier classes. The Communists spread their own brand of poison among the workers.

The Fascists and the Communists in our own midst are few in number - but they and their dupes are still capable of making a great deal of noise.

Protected as they are - and as all men in our democracy always will be - by our fundamental civil liberties, they have been preaching, and are still preaching, the ungodly gospel of fear. They have tried to shatter the confidence of Americans in their government and in one another.

The Fascists have told the business men and financiers that our government is Communist - and under the domination of labor.

The Communists have told the workers that our government is Fascist - and under the domination of international bankers.

We have seen what has happened to the great Fascist-minded industrialists of Germany who supported the Nazi movement, and then received their reward in Nazi concentration camps or in death.

We have seen how the workers of France were betrayed by their so-called champions, the Communists. For no matter that Communist lips have said, their actions have proved that in their hearts they care nothing for the real rights of free labor.

The Unholy Alliance of Fascism and Communism are still trying to play both ends against the middle. They have attempted to exploit the natural love of our people for peace. They have represented themselves as pacifists, when actually they are agents of the most brutal war.
mongers of all time. They have preached "Peace – Peace!" in the same way the devil can quote Scripture.

These foreign agents have committed physical sabotage in many parts of our great defense structure.

When I say physical sabotage, I mean dynamiting of defense plants, wrecking of trains, endangering the very lives of the men in our armed forces. And, even worse than this, are the attempts of these foreign agents and their dupes to commit spiritual sabotage on our national will.

Of course, the purpose of all this indirect war was to spread terror among us. The effect of it has been only to fortify our determination.

When Abraham Lincoln became President, he had to face the awful reality of war between the states. On July 4th, 1861, in his first message to the Congress, he presented this vital question:

"Must a government, of necessity, be too strong for the liberties of its own people, or too weak to maintain its own existence?"

Lincoln answered that question as Jackson had answered some – not by words, but by deeds.

We Americans of today have been presented with that same question. We too are answering it by deeds. I believe—that it is within our power to answer it once and for all time.
Jackson Day Speech - 3/29/43

One Draft sent by S.I.R. & R.F.S. to President on boat.
(See Memo on it.) Corrections by S.I.R. & R.E.S.