Franklin D. Roosevelt — “The Great Communicator”
The Master Speech Files, 1898, 1910-1945
Series 3: “The Four Freedoms” and FDR in World War II

File No. 1404

1941 December 15

Radio Address on 150th Anniversary of Bill of Rights
Fellow Americans:

No date in the long history of freedom means more to liberty-loving men in all liberty-loving countries than the fifteenth day of December, 1791. On that day, one hundred and fifty years ago, a new nation, through an elected Congress, adopted a declaration of human rights which has influenced the thinking of all mankind from one end of the world to the other.

There is not a single Republic of this Hemisphere which has not adopted in its fundamental law the basic principles of freedom of man and freedom of mind enacted in the American Bill of Rights.

There is not a country, large or small, on this continent, which has not felt the influence of that document, directly or indirectly.
Indeed, prior to the year 1933, the essential validity of the American Bill of Rights was accepted at least in principle. Even today, with the exception of Germany, Italy and Japan, the peoples of the world -- in all probability four-fifths of them -- support its principles, its teachings and its glorious results.

But, in the year 1933, there came to power in Germany a political clique which did not accept the declarations of the American Bill of human rights as valid: a small clique of ambitious and unscrupulous politicians whose announced and admitted platform was precisely the destruction of the rights that instrument declared. Indeed the entire program and goal of these political and moral tigers was nothing more than the overthrow, throughout the earth, of the great revolution of human liberty of which our American Bill of Rights is the mother charter.

The truths which were self-evident to Thomas Jefferson -- which have been self-evident to the six generations of Americans who followed him -- were to these men hateful.
The rights to life, liberty and the pursuit of happiness which seemed to us, inalienable, were, to Hitler and his fellows, empty words which they proposed to cancel forever.

The propositions they advanced to take the place of Jefferson's inalienable rights were these:

That the individual human being has no rights whatever in himself and by virtue of his humanity;

that the individual human being has no right to a soul of his own, or a mind of his own, or a tongue of his own, or a trade of his own; or even to live where he pleases or to marry the woman he loves;

that his only duty is the duty of obedience, not to his God, and not to his conscience, but to Adolf Hitler; and that his only value is his value, not as a man, but as a unit of the Nazi state.
To Hitler the ideal of the people, as we conceive it -- the free, self-governing and responsible people -- is incomprehensible. The people, to Hitler, are "the masses" and the highest human idealism is, in his own words, that a man should wish to become "a dust particle" of the order "of force" which is to shape the universe.

To Hitler, the government, as we conceive it -- is an impossible conception. The government to him is not the servant and the instrument of the people but their absolute master and the dictator of their every act.

To Hitler the church, as we conceive it, is a monstrosity to be destroyed by every means at his command. The Nazi church is to be the "National Church", "absolutely and exclusively in the service of but one doctrine, race and nation".

To Hitler, the freedom of men to think as they please and speak as they please and worship as they please is, of all things imaginable, most hateful and most desperately to be feared.
The issue of our time, the issue of the war in which we are engaged, is the issue forced upon the decent, self-respecting peoples of the earth by the aggressive dogmas of this attempted revival of barbarism; this proposed return to tyranny; this effort to impose again upon the peoples of the world doctrines of absolute obedience, and of dictatorial rule, and of the suppression of truth, and of the oppression of conscience, which the free nations of the earth have long ago rejected.

What we face is nothing more nor less than an attempt to overthrow and to cancel out the great upsurge of human liberty of which the American Bill of Rights is the fundamental document: to force the peoples of the earth, and among them the peoples of this continent, to accept again the absolute authority and despotic rule from which the courage and the resolution and the sacrifices of their ancestors liberated them many, many years ago.
It is an attempt which could succeed only if those who have inherited the gift of liberty had lost the manhood to preserve it. But we Americans know that the determination of this generation of our people to preserve liberty is as fixed and certain as the determination of that earlier generation of Americans to win it.

We will not, under any threat, or in the face of any danger, surrender the guarantees of liberty our forefathers framed for us in our Bill of Rights.

We hold with all the passion of our hearts and minds to those commitments of the human spirit.

We are solemnly determined that no power or combination of powers of this earth shall shake our hold upon them.

We covenant with each other before all the world, that having taken up arms in the defense of liberty, we will not lay them down before liberty is once again secure in the world we live in.

For that security we pray; for that security we act -- now and evermore.

---

Signature

[Signature]
Freedom has, for us Americans, a long and noble history with many dates worth marking. The General Fundamentals of Plymouth of 1636 asserted for the colonists of Massachusetts Bay the free liberties of the freeborn people of England. The Declaration of Independence of 1776 held this proposition to be self-evident - "that all men are created equal, that they are endowed by their Creator with certain inalienable rights, that among these are Life, Liberty and the Pursuit of Happiness". The Constitution, drafted in 1787, created a Union to "secure the Blessings of Liberty to ourselves and our Posterity".

But no date in the long history of freedom means more to liberty-loving men than the fifteenth day of December, 1791. On that day, one hundred and fifty years ago, there was adopted, by the newly united states of America, a declaration of human rights which has influenced the thinking of mankind from one end of this earth to the other, and not in the Americas alone but in the nations of Asia and of Europe and of Africa as well.

There is not a single republic of this hemisphere which has not adopted in its fundamental law the basic principles of freedom of men and mind enacted in the American Bill of Rights.

There is not a country of any continent which has not felt the influence of that document, directly or indirectly, over the century and a half now past.

Indeed, prior to the year 1933, there was hardly a country of the earth in which the validity of the declaration of the American Bill of Rights was not, in principle at least, accepted.
December 13, 1941

Dear Grace:

Three things.

1. Here's the second draft of the speech on the Bill of Rights for Monday evening. I have discarded the first draft entirely and have rewritten as the President directed. The length may be something over the six minutes the President won't mind too much. For one thing, it is hard to compress so tremendously important a subject beyond a certain point. For another, elaborate preparations have been made from one coast to the other to have people assembled in schools, churches, meeting houses, to listen to the President's speech and I am sure they would like to have as much as he felt like giving them. The original plan, as you recall, was for a twelve minute speech. However, I don't think this will run over seven or eight minutes at the most. If anything needs to be done to it, please call me at any hour of the day or night, except from three-thirty to four-thirty Monday, when the Attorney General and I are speaking at a meeting here in the Library.

2. I gather there will be an announcement about Pearl Harbor following Frank Knox's return. I suggested to Bob Sherwood, before the speech last Tuesday, a form of announcement which he liked but which reached him too late for consideration in that connection. The suggestion was this: That we should say that the story on Pearl Harbor is now in hand; that the essential fact which stands out is that the Japanese purpose was to knock us out of the war before we got into it. This purpose is made apparent by the elaborate deceptions practiced, by the enormous preparations made for the attack, by the huge risks run by the attackers, by the synchronization of the attacks on Pearl Harbor and attacks elsewhere, etc. etc. All this adds up to the fact that the real purpose was to knock us out of the war altogether and entirely by one audacious blow. That purpose failed. [With this as a start, we can then go on to tell what happened in so far as we plan to tell it.]

3. I am enclosing herewith a personal letter to the President which I should very much like him to have as soon as you think he might have a free moment to read it.

Thank you for everything.

Yours,

Miss Grace Tully
Secretary to the President
The White House

Enclosures (2)
No date in the long history of freedom means more to liberty-loving men in all liberty-loving countries than the fifteenth day of December, 1791. On that day, one hundred and fifty years ago, a new nation, through an elected Congress, adopted a declaration of human rights which has influenced the thinking of all mankind from one end of the world to the other.

There is not a single Republic of this Hemisphere which has not adopted in its fundamental law the basic principles of freedom of man and freedom of mind enacted in the American Bill of Rights.

There is not a country, large or small, on this continent which has not felt the influence of that document, directly or indirectly.

Indeed, prior to the year 1933, the essential validity of the American Bill of Rights was accepted at least in principle. Even today, with the exception of Germany, Italy and Japan, the peoples of the world -- in all probability four-fifths of them -- support its principles, its teachings and its glorious results.
But, in the year 1933, there came to power in Germany a political clique which did not accept the declarations of the American Bill of human rights as valid: a small clique of ambitious and unscrupulous politicians whose announced and admitted platform was precisely the destruction of the rights that instrument declared. Indeed the entire program of these political and moral tigers was nothing more than the overthrow, throughout the earth, of the great revolution of human liberty of which our American Bill of Rights is the mother charter.

The truths which were self-evident to Thomas Jefferson — which have been self-evident to the six generations of Americans who followed him — were to these men hateful. The rights to life, liberty and the pursuit of happiness which seemed to Jefferson, and which seem to us, inalienable, were, to Hitler empty words which they proposed to cancel and his fellows, empty words to silence and destroy.

\[\text{\underline{To take the place of Jefferson's inalienable rights}}\]

The propositions they advanced were these:

That the individual human being has no rights in himself and by virtue of his humanity;

\[\text{\underline{The individual human being}}\] that he has no right to a soul of his own, or a mind of his own, or a tongue of his own, or a trade of his own; or even to live where he pleases or to marry the woman he loves;

that his only duty is the duty of obedience, not to his God, and not to his conscience, but to Adolf Hitler; and his only value is his value not as a man, but as a unit of the Nazi state.

To Hitler the ideal of the people, as we conceive

\[\text{\underline{people - the free, self-governing and responsible people}}\]

\[\text{\underline{incomprehensible}}\]

\[\text{\underline{The people, to Hitler, are "the masses" and the}}\] highest human idealism is, in his own words, that a man should wish to become "a dust particle" of the order "of force" which is to shape the universe.

To Hitler, the government, as we conceive the government, is an impossible conception. The government is not the servant and the instrument of the people but their absolute master and the dictator of their every act.

To Hitler the church, as we conceive the church, is a monstrosity to be destroyed by every means at his command. The Nazi church is the "National Church", "absolutely and exclusively in the service of but one doctrine, race and nation".

To Hitler, the freedom of men to think as they please and speak as they please and worship as they please is, of all things imaginable, most hateful and most desperately to be feared.

The issue of our time, the issue of the war in which we are engaged, is the issue forced upon the decent, self-respecting peoples of the earth by the aggressive dogmas of this attempted revival of barbarism; this proposed return to tyranny; this effort to impose again upon the peoples of the world doctrines of absolute obedience, and of dictatorial rule, and of the suppression of truth, and of the oppression

What we face is nothing more nor less than an attempt to cancel out to overthrow and destroy the great upsurge of human liberty of which the American Bill of Rights is the fundamental document; and to force the peoples of the earth, and among them the peoples of this continent, to abandon themselves to the impious-subjection of the absolute authority and despotic rule ment of the human spirit and the suppression of all human life.
from which the courage and the resolution and the sacrifices of their ancestors liberated them many, many years ago.

It is an attempt which could succeed only if those who have inherited the priceless gift of liberty had lost the manhood to preserve it. But we Americans know that the determination of this generation of our people to preserve liberty is as fixed and certain as the determination of that earlier generation which won them. We will not, under any threat, or in the face of any danger, surrender the guarantees of liberty our forefathers framed for us in our Bill of Rights.

We hold with all the passion of our hearts and minds to those commitments of the human spirit. We are solemnly determined that no power or combination of powers of this earth shall shake our hold upon them. We covenant with each other before all the world, that having taken up arms in the defense of liberty, we will not lay them down before the world is free for liberty.

So help us God. Liberty is once again secure in the world. We live in it; for that security we pray; for that security we act. And forevermore.
FREE AMERICANS:

No date in the long history of freedom means more to liberty-loving men in all liberty-loving countries than the fifteenth day of December, 1791. On that day, one hundred and fifty years ago, a new nation, through an elected Congress, adopted a declaration of human rights which has influenced the thinking of all mankind from one end of the world to the other.

There is not a single Republic of this Hemisphere which has not adopted in its fundamental law the basic principles of freedom of man and freedom of mind enacted in the American Bill of Rights.

There is not a country, large or small, on this continent and in this world which has not felt the influence of that document, directly or indirectly.

Indeed, prior to the year 1933, the essential validity of the American Bill of Rights was accepted everywhere at least in principle. Even today, with the exception of Germany, Italy and Japan, the peoples of the whole world -- in all probability four-fifths of them -- support its principles, its teachings and its glorious results.

But, in the year 1933, there came to power in Germany a political clique which did not accept the declarations of the American Bill of human rights as valid: a small clique of ambitious and unscrupulous politicians whose announced and admitted platform was precisely the destruction of the rights that instrument declared. Indeed the entire program and goal of these political and moral tigers was nothing more than the overthrow, throughout the earth, of the great revolution of human liberty of which our American Bill of Rights is the mother charter.

The truths which were self-evident to Thomas Jefferson -- which have been self-evident to the six generations of Americans who followed him -- were to these men hateful. The rights to life, liberty and the pursuit of happiness which seemed (to Jefferson) to the Founders of the Republic, and which seem to us, inalienable, were, to Hitler and his fellows, empty words which they proposed to cancel forever.

The propositions they advanced to take the place of Jefferson’s inalienable rights were these:

That the individual human being has no rights (whatever) whatsoever in himself and by virtue of his humanity;

That the individual human being has no right to a soul of his own, or a mind of his own, or a tongue of his own, or a trade of his own; or even to live where he pleases or to marry the woman he loves;

That his only duty is the duty of obedience, not to his God, (and) not to his conscience, but to Adolf Hitler; and that his only value is his value, not as a man, but as a unit of the Nazi state.

To Hitler the ideal of the people, as we conceive it -- the free, self-governing and responsible people -- is incomprehensible. The people, to Hitler, are "the masses" and the highest human idealism is, in his own words, that a man should wish to become "a dust particle" of the order "of force" which is to shape (the) his universe.

To Hitler, the government, as we conceive it, is an impossible conception. The government to him is not the servant and the instrument of the people but their absolute master and the dictator of their every act.
To Hitler the church, as we conceive it, is a monstrosity to be destroyed by every means at his command. The Nazi church is to be the "National Church", a pagan church, "absolutely and exclusively in the service of but one doctrine, one race, (and) one nation".

To Hitler, the freedom of men to think as they please and speak as they please and worship as they please is, of all things imaginable, most hateful and most desperately to be feared.

The issue of our time, the issue of the war in which we are engaged, is the issue forced upon the decent, self-respecting peoples of the earth by the aggressive dogmas of this attempted revival of barbarism; this proposed return to tyranny; this effort to impose again upon the peoples of the world doctrines of absolute obedience, (and) of dictatorial rule, (and) of the suppression of truth, (and) of the oppression of conscience, which the free nations of the earth have long ago rejected.

What we face is nothing more nor less than an attempt to overthrow and to cancel out the great upsurge of human liberty of which the American Bill of Rights is the fundamental document: to force the peoples of the earth, and among them the peoples of this continent and this nation, to accept again the absolute authority and despotic rule from which the courage and the resolution and the sacrifices of their ancestors liberated them many, many years ago.

It is an attempt, an attempt which could succeed only if those who have inherited the gift of liberty had lost the manhood to preserve it. But we Americans know that the determination of this generation of our people -- our generation -- to preserve liberty is as fixed and certain as the determination of that (earlier) early generation of Americans to win it.

We will not, under any threat, or in the face of any danger, surrender the guarantees of liberty our forefathers framed for us in our Bill of Rights.

We hold with all the passion of our hearts and minds to those commitments of the human spirit.

We are solemnly determined that no power or combination of powers of this earth shall shake our hold upon them.

We covenant with each other before all the world, that having taken up arms in the defense of liberty, we will not lay them down before liberty is once again secure in the world we live in. For that security we pray; for that security we act -- now and evermore.

*****
Suggestions for the draft of a Proclamation designating the 15th day of December as Bill of Rights Day

Whereas a Joint Resolution of Congress, approved August 21, 1941, authorizes and requests the President of the United States "to issue a proclamation designating December 15, 1941 as Bill of Rights Day, calling upon officials of the Government to display the flag of the United States on all Government buildings on that day, and inviting the people of the United States to observe the day with appropriate ceremonies and prayer"

Now, therefore, I, Franklin D. Roosevelt, President of the United States of America, acting under and by virtue of the authority conferred upon me by the said Joint Resolution, do hereby designate December 15, 1941 as Bill of Rights Day, and call upon officials of the Government, and upon the people of the United States, to observe the day by displaying the flag of the United States on public buildings and by meeting together for such prayers and such ceremonies as may seem to them appropriate.

The first ten amendments, the great American charter of personal liberty and human dignity, became a part of the Constitution of the United States on the 15th day of December 1791. It is fitting that the anniversary of its adoption should be remembered by the nation which, for one hundred and fifty years, has enjoyed the immeasurable privileges which that charter guaranteed: the privileges of freedom of religion, freedom of speech, freedom of the press, freedom of assembly and the free right to petition the government for redress of grievances. It is especially fitting that this anniversary should be remembered and observed by those institutions of a democratic people which owe their very existence to the guarantees of the Bill of Rights: the free schools, the free churches, the labor unions, the religious and educational and civic orgations of all kinds which, without the guarantee of the Bill of Rights, could never have existed; which sicken and disappear whenever, in any country, these rights are curtailed or withdrawn.

The 15th day of December, 1941, is therefore set apart as a day of mobilization for freedom and for human rights, a day of commemoration of the democratic and peaceful action by which these rights were gained, and a day of reassessment of their present meaning and their living worth. Those who have long enjoyed such privileges as we enjoy forget in time that men have died to win them. They come in time to take these rights for granted and to think of their protection as assured. We, however, who have seen these privileges lost in other continents and countries, can now appreciate those conceives of their meaning to the people who enjoyed them once and now no longer can. We understand in some measure what their loss can mean. And by that understanding we have come to a clearer conception of their worth to us, and to a stronger and more unalterable determination that they shall not be lost or weakened or curtailed.

It is to give public expression and outward form to that understanding and that determination that we are about to set the fifteenth day of December is set apart for the commemoration of the adoption of the Bill of Rights and its principles and practice.
BILL OF RIGHTS DAY

BY THE PRESIDENT OF THE UNITED STATES OF AMERICA

A PROCLAMATION

WHEREAS the civil rights and liberties guaranteed by our Constitution are the lifeblood of American democracy; and

WHEREAS the guarantee of such rights and liberties was firmly welded into our charter of government by the adoption of the Bill of Rights on December 15, 1791; and

WHEREAS experience has proved once again that liberty must be guarded with unswerving vigilance, and when challenged must be defended with unyielding courage and determination; and

WHEREAS we realize now more clearly than ever that freedom and liberty imply not only privileges but also responsibilities; and

WHEREAS our country is taking decisive measures to safeguard our heritage of freedom and liberty; and

WHEREAS the joint resolution of Congress, approved August 21, 1941, entitled "To provide for the proper observance of the one hundred and fiftieth anniversary of the adoption of the first ten amendments to the Constitution, known as the Bill of Rights", provides:

"That the President of the United States is authorized and requested to issue a proclamation designating December 15, 1941, as Bill of Rights Day, calling upon officials of the Government to display the flag of the United States on all Government buildings on that day, and inviting the people of the United States to observe the day with appropriate ceremonies and prayer."

NOW, THEREFORE, I, FRANKLIN D. ROOSEVELT, President of the United States of America, do hereby designate December 15, 1941, as Bill of Rights Day.

And I call upon the officials of the Government to have the flag of the United States displayed on all Government buildings on that day; and I invite and urge the people of the United States to observe that day with appropriate ceremonies and prayer at their homes, in schools, and in places of congregation and of worship.

IN WITNESS WHEREOF, I have hereunto set my hand and caused the seal of the United States of America to be affixed.

DONE at the City of Washington this ___ day of in the year of our Lord nineteen hundred and forty-one, and of the Independence of the United States of America the one hundred and sixty-sixth.

By the President:

Secretary of State.
Office of the Attorney General
Washington, D.C.
November 25, 1941.

Through Division of the Federal Register.

The President,
The White House.

My dear Mr. President:

I am herewith transmitting a revised draft of a proposed proclamation entitled "Bill of Rights Day", together with a form of warrant authorizing and directing the Secretary of State to cause the seal of the United States to be affixed to the proclamation.

The proposed proclamation, presented by the Secretary of State and forwarded for my consideration by the Assistant Director of the Bureau of the Budget under date of November 24, 1941, has been considerably revised as to language, particularly the language of the preamble, but no change has been made in the general purpose or intent. As revised, the proposed proclamation has my approval as to form and legality.

Respectfully,

[Signature]
Attorney General.
My dear Mr. Attorney General:

Hereewith is a proposed Executive Proclamation, presented by the Secretary of State, designating December 15, 1941 as Bill of Rights Day.

The proposed proclamation is to be issued pursuant to the Joint Resolution approved on August 21, 1941, "To provide for the proper observance of the one hundred and fiftieth anniversary of the adoption of the first ten amendments to the Constitution, known as the Bill of Rights".

This proclamation has my approval.

Very truly yours,

(Signed) John E. Blandford, Jr.
Assistant Director.

The Honorable,

The Attorney General.

Enclosures.
In reply refer to RP. November 18, 1941

My dear Mr. Smith:

In accordance with the provisions of Executive Order No. 7298 approved February 18, 1936 I enclose for your consideration a draft of a proposed proclamation regarding the observance of December 15, 1941 as Bill of Rights Day. If the draft proclamation meets with your approval, it is requested that it be referred to the Attorney General for his consideration and, if he approves it, transmitted to the Director of the Division of the Federal Register, The National Archives, for appropriate action.

I also enclose the warrant to be signed by the President authorizing and directing me to cause the seal of the United States to be affixed to the proclamation regarding Bill of Rights Day.

Sincerely yours,

Enclosures:

1. Draft of proclamation (original and 6 copies).
2. Warrant.

The Honorable Harold D. Smith, Director, Bureau of the Budget.
Suggestions for the draft of a Proclamation designating the 15th day of December as Bill of Rights Day

Whereas a Joint Resolution of Congress, approved August 21, 1941, authorizes and requests the President of the United States "to issue a proclamation designating December 15, 1941 as Bill of Rights Day, calling upon officials of the Government to display the flag of the United States on all Government buildings on that day, and inviting the people of the United States to observe the day with appropriate ceremonies and prayer"

Now, therefore, I, Franklin D. Roosevelt, President of the United States of America, acting under and by virtue of the authority conferred upon me by the said Joint Resolution do hereby designate December 15, 1941 as Bill of Rights Day and do call upon officials of the Government, and upon the people of the United States, to observe the day by displaying the flag of the United States on public buildings and by meeting together for such prayers and such ceremonies as may seem to them appropriate.

The first ten amendments, the great American charter of personal liberty and human dignity, became a part of the Constitution of the United States on the 15th day of December 1791. It is fitting that the anniversary of its adoption should be remembered by the nation which, for one hundred and fifty years, has enjoyed the immeasurable privileges which that charter guaranteed: the privileges of freedom of religion, freedom of speech, freedom of the press, freedom of assembly and the free right to petition the government for redress of grievances. It is especially fitting that this anniversary should be remembered and observed by those institutions of a democratic people which owe their very existence to the guarantees of the Bill of Rights: the free schools, the free churches, the labor unions, the religious and educational and civic organizations of all kinds which, without the guarantee of the Bill of Rights, could never have existed; which sicken and disappear whenever, in any country, these rights are curtailed or withdrawn.

The 15th day of December, 1941, is therefore set apart as a day of mobilization for freedom and for human rights, a day for the commemoration of the democratic and peaceful action by which these rights were gained and for the reassessment of their present meaning and their living worth. Those who have long enjoyed such privileges as we enjoy forget in time that men have died to win them. They come in time to take these rights for granted and to think of their protection as assured. We, however, who have seen such privileges lost in other continents and countries have some conception of their meaning to the people who enjoyed them once and now no longer can. We understand in some measure what their loss can mean. And by that understanding we have come to a clearer conception of their worth to us, and to a stronger and more unalterable determination that they shall not here be lost or weakened or curtailed.

It is to give public expression and outward form to that understanding and that determination that the fifteenth day of December is set apart for the commemoration of the adoption of the Bill of Rights and a national rededication to its principles and practice.
No date in the long history of freedom means more to liberty-loving men in all liberty-loving countries than the fifteenth day of December, 1791. On that day, one hundred and fifty years ago, a new nation, through an elected Congress, adopted a declaration of human rights which has influenced the thinking of all mankind from one end of the world to the other.

There is not a single Republic of this Hemisphere which has not adopted in its fundamental law the basic principles of freedom of man and freedom of mind enacted in the American Bill of Rights.

There is not a country, large or small, on this continent, which has not felt the influence of that document, directly or indirectly.
Indeed, prior to the year 1933, the essential validity of the American Bill of Rights was accepted at least in principle. Even today, with the exception of Germany, Italy and Japan, the peoples of the world -- in all probability four-fifths of them -- support its principles, its teachings and its glorious results.

But, in the year 1933, there came to power in Germany a political clique which did not accept the declarations of the American Bill of human rights as valid; a small clique of ambitious and unscrupulous politicians whose announced and admitted platform was precisely the destruction of the rights that instrument declared. Indeed the entire program and goal of these political and moral tigers was nothing more than the overthrow, throughout the earth, of the great revolution of human liberty of which our American Bill of Rights is the mother charter.

The truths which were self-evident to Thomas Jefferson -- which have been self-evident to the six generations of Americans who followed him -- were to these men hateful.
The rights to life, liberty and the pursuit of happiness which seemed to Jefferson, and which seem to us, inalienable, were, to Hitler and his fellows, empty words which they proposed to cancel forever.

The propositions they advanced to take the place of Jefferson's inalienable rights were these:

That the individual human being has no rights whatever in himself and by virtue of his humanity;

that the individual human being has no right to a soul of his own, or a mind of his own, or a tongue of his own, or a trade of his own; or even to live where he pleases or to marry the whom he loves;

that his only duty is the duty of obedience, not to his God, and not to his conscience, but to Adolf Hitler; and that his only value is his value, not as a man, but as a unit of the Nazi state.
To Hitler the ideal of the people, as we conceive it -- the free, self-governing and responsible people -- is incomprehesible. The people, to Hitler, are "the masses" and the highest human idealism is, in his own words, that a man should wish to become "a dust particle" of the order "of force" which is to shape the universe.

To Hitler, the government, as we conceive it -- is an impossible conception. The government to him is not the servant and the instrument of the people but their absolute master and the dictator of their every act.

To Hitler the church, as we conceive it, is a monstrosity to be destroyed by every means at his command. The Nazi church is to be the "National Church", "absolutely and exclussively in the service of but one doctrine, race and nation".

To Hitler, the freedom of men to think as they please and speak as they please and worship as they please is, of all things imaginable, most hateful and most desperately to be feared.
The issue of our time, the issue of the war in which we are engaged, is the issue forced upon the decent, self-respecting peoples of the earth by the aggressive dogmas of this attempted revival of barbarism; this proposed return to tyranny; this effort to impose again upon the peoples of the world doctrines of absolute obedience, and of dictatorial rule, and of the suppression of truth, and of the oppression of conscience, which the free nations of the earth have long ago rejected.

What we face is nothing more nor less than an attempt to overthrow and to cancel out the great upsurge of human liberty of which the American Bill of Rights is the fundamental document: to force the peoples of the earth, and among them the peoples of this continent, to accept again the absolute authority and despotic rule from which the courage and the resolution and the sacrifices of their ancestors liberated them many, many years ago.
It is an attempt which could succeed only if those who have inherited the gift of liberty had lost the manhood to preserve it. But we Americans know that the determination of this generation of our people to preserve liberty is as fixed and certain as the determination of that earlier generation of Americans to win it.

We will not, under any threat, or in the face of any danger, surrender the guarantees of liberty our forefathers framed for us in our Bill of Rights.

We hold with all the passion of our hearts and minds to those commitments of the human spirit.

We are solemnly determined that no power or combination of powers of this earth shall shake our hold upon them.

We covenant with each other before all the world, that having taken up arms in the defense of liberty, we will not lay down before liberty is once again secure in the world we live in. For that security we pray; for that security we act -- now and evermore.

* * * * * * *
June 1933

[Handwritten text not clearly legible]
1029 - 62-36
P 10
8 2
H
C A
Manuscript free
CAUTION: The following address of the President, to be broadcast in connection with the celebration of the 150th Anniversary of the adoption of the Bill of Rights, must be held in confidence until released.

NOTE: Release to editions of all newspapers appearing on the streets NOT EARLIER THAN 10:40 E.S.T., December 15, 1941. The same release of the text of the address also applies to radio announcers and news commentators.

CARE MUST BE EXERCISED TO PREVENT PREMATURE PUBLICATION.

STEPHEN EARLY
Secretary to the President

Free Americans:

No date in the long history of freedom means more to liberty-loving men in all liberty-loving countries than the fifteenth day of December, 1791. On that day, one hundred and fifty years ago, a new nation, through an elected Congress, adopted a declaration of human rights which has influenced the thinking of all mankind from one end of the world to the other.

There is not a single Republic of this Hemisphere which has not adopted in its fundamental law the basic principles of freedom of man and freedom of mind enacted in the American Bill of Rights.

There is not a country, large or small, on this continent which has not felt the influence of that document, directly or indirectly.

Indeed, prior to the year 1933, the essential validity of the American Bill of Rights was accepted at least in principle. Even today, with the exception of Germany, Italy and Japan, the peoples of the world - in all probability four-fifths of them - support its principles, its teachings and its glorious results.
But, in the year 1933, there came to power in Germany a political clique which did not accept the declarations of the American Bill of human rights as valid; a small clique of ambitious and unscrupulous politicians whose announced and admitted platform was precisely the destruction of the rights that instrument declared. Indeed the entire program and goal of these political and moral tigers was nothing more than the overthrow, throughout the earth, of the great revolution of human liberty of which our American Bill of Rights is the mother charter.

The truths which were self-evident to Thomas Jefferson - which have been self-evident to the six generations of Americans who followed him - were to these men hateful. The rights to life, liberty and the pursuit of happiness which seemed to Jefferson, and which seem to us, inalienable, were, to Hitler and his followers, empty words which they proposed to cancel forever.

The propositions they advanced to take the place of Jefferson's inalienable rights were these:

1. That the individual human being has no rights whatever in himself and by virtue of his humanity;

2. That the individual human being has no right to a soul of his own, or a mind of his own, or a tongue of his own, or a trade of his own; or even to live where he please or to marry the woman he loves;

3. That his only duty is the duty of obedience, not to his God, and not to his conscience, but to Adolf Hitler; and that his only value is his value, not as a man, but as a unit of the Nazi state.

To Hitler the ideal of the people, as we conceive it - the free, self-governing and responsible people - is incomprehensible. The people, to Hitler, are "the masses" and the highest human idealism is, in his own words, that a man should wish to become "a dust particle of the order "of force" which is to shape the universe."

To Hitler, the government, as we conceive it, is an impossible conception. The government to him is not the servant and the instrument of the people but their absolute master and the dictator of their every act.

To Hitler the church, as we conceive it, is a monstrosity to be destroyed by every means at his command. The "K"-d church is to be the "National Church." Absolutely and exclusively in the service of but one doctrine, a "reconquered nation."

To Hitler, the freedom of man to think as heplease and speak as he please and worship as he please is, of all things imaginable, most hateful and most desperately to be feared.
The issue of our time, the issue of the war in which we are engaged, is the issue forced upon the decent, self-respecting peoples of the earth by the aggressive dogmas of this attempted revival of barbarism; this proposed return to tyranny; this effort to impose again upon the peoples of the world doctrines of absolute obedience, (and) of dictatorial rule, (and) of the suppression of truth, (and) of the oppression of conscience, which the free nations of the earth have long ago rejected.

What we face is nothing more nor less than an attempt to overthrow and to cancel out the great upsurge of human liberty of which the American Bill of Rights is the fundamental document; to force the peoples of the earth, and among them the peoples of this continent, to accept again the absolute authority and despotic rule from which the courage and the resolution and the sacrifices of their ancestors liberated them many, many years ago.

It is an attempt, which could succeed only if those who have inherited the gift of liberty had lost the manhood to preserve it. But we Americans know that the determination of this generation of our people to preserve liberty is as fixed and certain as the determination of that earlier generation of Americans to win it.

We will not, under any threat, or in the face of any danger, surrender the guarantees of liberty our forefathers framed for us in our Bill of Rights.

We hold with all the passion of our hearts and minds to those commitments of the human spirit.

We are solemnly determined that no power or combination of powers of this earth shall shake our hold upon them.

We covenant with each other before all the world, that having taken up arms in the defense of liberty, we will not lay them down before liberty is once again secure in the world we live in. For that security we pray; for that security we act — now and evermore.
No date in the long history of freedom means more to liberty-loving men in all liberty-loving countries than the fifteenth day of December, 1791. On that day, one hundred and fifty years ago, a new nation, through an elected Congress, adopted a declaration of human rights which has influenced the thinking of all mankind from one end of the world to the other.

There is not a single Republic of this Hemisphere which has not adopted in its fundamental law the basic principles of freedom of man and freedom of mind enunciated in the American Bill of Rights.

There is not a country, large or small, on this continent which has not felt the influence of that document, directly or indirectly.

Indeed, prior to the year 1933, the essential validity of the American Bill of Rights was accepted at least in principle. Even today, with the exception of Germany, Italy and Japan, the peoples of the world - in all probability four-fifths of them - support its principles, its teachings and its glorious results.

But, in the year 1933, there came to power in Germany a political clique which did not accept the declarations of the American Bill of human rights as valid: a small clique of ambitious and unscrupulous politicians whose announced and admitted platform was precisely the destruction of the rights that instrument declared. Indeed the entire program and goal of these political and moral tigers was nothing more than the overthrow, throughout the earth, of the great revolution of human liberty of which our American Bill of Rights is the mother charter.

The truths which were self-evident to Thomas Jefferson - which have been self-evident to the six generations of Americans who followed him - were to these men hateful. The rights to life, liberty and the pursuit of happiness which seemed to Jefferson, and which seem to us, inalienable, were, to Hitler and his fellow empty words which they proposed to cancel forever.

The propositions they advanced to take the place of Jefferson's inalienable rights were these: That the individual human being has no rights whatever in himself and by virtue of his humanity;

That the individual human being has no right to a soul of his own, or a mind of his own, or a tongue of his own, or a trade of his own; or even to live where he pleased or to marry the woman he loves;

That his only duty is the duty of obedience, not to his God, and not to his conscience, but to Adolf Hitler; and that his only value is his value, not as a man, but as a unit of the Nazi state.
To Hitler the ideal of the people, as we conceive it - the free, self-governing and responsible people - is incomprehensible. The people, to Hitler, are "the masses" and the highest human idealism is, in his own words, that a man should wish to become "a dust particle" of the order "of force" which is to shape the universe.

To Hitler the government, as we conceive it, is an impossible conception. The government to him is not the servant and the instrument of the people but their absolute master and the dictator of their every act.

To Hitler the church, as we conceive it, is a monstrosity to be destroyed by every means at his command. The Nazi church is to be the "National Church", "absolutely and exclusively in the service of but one doctrine, race and nation".

To Hitler, the freedom of men to think as they please and speak as they please and worship as they please is, of all things imaginable, most hateful and most desperately to be feared.

The issue of our time, the issue of the war in which we are engaged, is the issue forced upon the decent, self-respecting peoples of the earth by the aggressive dogmas of this attempted revival of barbarism; this proposed return to tyranny; this effort to impose again upon the peoples of the world doctrines of absolute obedience, and of dictatorial rule, and of the suppression of truth, and of the suppression of conscience, which the free nations of the earth have long ago rejected.

What we face is nothing more nor less than an attempt to overthrow and to cancel out the great upsurge of human liberty of which the American Bill of Rights is the fundamental document: to force the peoples of the earth, and among them the peoples of this continent, to accept again the absolute authority and despotic rule from which the courage and the resolution and the sacrifices of their ancestors liberated them many, many years ago.

It is an attempt which could succeed only if those who have inherited the gift of liberty had lost the manhood to preserve it.
But we Americans know that the determination of this generation of our people to preserve liberty is as fixed and certain as the determination of that earlier generation of Americans to win it.

We will not, under any threat, or in the face of any danger, surrender the guarantees of liberty our forfathers framed for us in our Bill of Rights.

We hold with all the passion of our hearts and minds to those commitments of the human spirit.

We are solemnly determined that no power or combination of powers of this earth shall shake our hold upon them.

We covenant with each other before all the world, that having taken up arms in the defense of liberty, we will not lay them down before liberty is once again secure in the world we live in. For that security we pray; for that security we act - now and evermore.