Cotton---The Universal Fibre

George A. Sloan, President
The Cotton-Textile Institute

Cotton is the most important fibre known to man. In almost innumerable ways it is the fabric of fashion and of industry.

To Americans cotton is of immense economic interest because the United States supplies upwards of two-thirds the world’s supply of cotton each year. The production of the raw material, the manufacture and distribution of its myriad products provide the basis on which great American industries are established. The influence of this single agricultural product directly and indirectly upon the growth and progress of the nation has been so extensive as to give it large historical value.

We live in a world where cotton contributes something useful from our infancy until old age and death. Throughout life we wear cotton in some form. We live in environments made artistically agreeable by the use of cotton, we sleep in cotton, we travel on cotton, we are sheltered from sun and storm by cotton, we even eat the highly refined products of the once mysterious cotton seed.

By its lavish bounty Nature has destined COTTON for a large role in the everyday life and commerce of the world. In its centuries of usefulness it has influenced not only agriculture, industry and commerce but also the arts and the social and political life of the world. Its myriad uses probably have never been completely comprehended. In all its magic it may rightfully be called the universal fibre. Without it modern life would not have the comforts, conveniences, the artistry, the necessities which COTTON provides in so many useful ways.

The cotton cloth on which this menu is printed is one of the many products of the textile industry served by the Southern Railway System.
