SOVIETS TAKE IASI IN NEW OFFENSIVE

Twin Drives Launched Against Romania

LONDON, Aug. 22 (UP)—Two Soviet armies, launching twin offensives to drive Romania from the war, have seized the greatest rail link of Iasi and more than 250 other towns and settlements in a massive thrust that covered 90 miles toward Galati gap and the Ploesti oilfields, Marshal Joseph Stalin announced tonight.

At the same time, troops northeast of Warsaw cleared a 37-mile stretch of the southern bank of the Bug River as they swung into position to cut off the embattled capital to the north.

More than 25,000 Germans were killed and almost 13,000 were captured in the first three days of the twin offensives into Romania and Ressarabia, Moscow's communique revealed tonight.

The formidable Nazi bastion of Iasi, between the Prut and the Siret Rivers, fell beneath the onslaught of the 2d Ukrainian Army, commanded by Marshal Rodion Y. Malinovsky, together with the strongly fortified enemy defense bases of Targu Frumos, 27 miles west of Iasi, and Ungheni, 11 miles to the east.

More than 200 other towns and settlements were captured by the advancing 2nd Army as it broke through Nazi defenses on a 74-mile front and advanced 37 miles in three days of fierce fighting.

At the same time, the 3d Ukrainian Army under Gen. Ivan Konev, which had pushed forward 40 miles since

Twin Drives Launched Against Romania

LONDON, Aug. 22 (UP).—Two Soviet armies, launching twin offensives to drive Romania from the war, have captured the great rail hub of Iasi and more than 350 other towns and settlements in a mountainous, forested area south of Tulcea toward Galati, and the Ploesti oilfields. Marshal Joseph Stalin announced tonight.

At the same time, troops northeast of Warsaw cleared a 27-mile stretch of the southern bank of the Bug River as they swung into position to cut off the embattled capital to the north.

More than 25,000 Germans were killed and almost 13,000 were captured from the first three days of the twin offensives into Romania and Bessarabia. Moscow’s communiqué revealed tonight.

The formidable Nazi bastion of Iasi, between the Prut and the Sljet Rivers, fell beneath the onslaught of the 24 Ukrainian Army, commanded by Marshal Rodion Y. Malinovsky, together with the strongly fortified enemy defense bases of Tarhov Frumos, 27 miles west of Iasi, and Ungheni, 11 miles to the east.

More than 200 other towns and settlements were captured by the advancing 2nd Army as it broke through Nazi defenses on a 74-mile front and advanced 37 miles in three days of fierce fighting.

At the same time, the 8th Ukrainian Army under Gen. Eddy 1. Tolbkin smashed forward 45 miles into Bessarabia, in a breakthrough of Nazi positions along the southern bank of the lower Dnestr River, south of Tighina.

Breach Powerful Forts

Smashing through powerful fortifications, Tolbkin’s troops cut an 81-mile breach in the German lines and swept up more than 150 towns and settlements.

Among them were Causani, 14 miles southwest of Tighina; Leopol, 48 miles south southwest; Cimashia, 40 miles southwest and Tarulin, 40 miles south southwest.

At Tarulin, Tolbkin’s forces were only 74 miles northeast of Giuti, guarding the western end of the Galati gap between the Danube estuary and the Carpathian mountains—vital gateway to Ploesti and Bucharast.

The new Soviet triumphs, which marked the 11th and 12th major offensives launched by the Soviet high command since the summer campaign began into action June 25, were announced in two Orders of the Day issued by Marshal Stalin.

To mark the Soviet victories, Moscow’s 224 victory guns fired twin salutes of 20 adios each in the Soviet capital tonight.

Yank Drive Hits Toward Le Havre

French, Yanks 3 Mi. From Marseille; Battle for Toulon

ALLIED HEADQUARTERS, Rome, Aug. 22 (UP)—American and French troops today smashed to within three miles of Marseille on the east and brought the enemy's defensive escape corridor on the west under artillery fire as they drove that virtually surrounded the second city of France.

Racing along the Mediterranean coast, other French forces completed their drive south and captured a bridgehead against the trapped Nazi garrison inside the battered and battered walls of Toulon.

On the northeastern side of the southern French front which now embraces about 4,000 square miles, three American columns raced westward against crumbling enemy resistance toward the Rhone Valley region to the east of the city.

One smashed through the outskirts of Apt, 40 miles north of Marseille and 30 miles east of the Rhone port of Arles.

Another American column moving northward across the Rhone-Alpes in a drive pointed toward Lyon and Grenoble captured the road center of Villeneuve, 60 miles north of Toulon, and cut the last main highway leading toward to the Massif Central.

PATCH REPORTED

"As we moved back in disorder in all except the capable 16th Infantry Group, Gen. George M. Patrick reported his French-American troops of the 10th Army to keep the enemy on the run.

"We have achieved a great victory," he said in an order of the day to his forces, many of whom have smashed forward as much as 100 miles since they stormed across the Mediterranean beaches eight days ago.

"The enemy no longer is a threat in our area is perplexed and stunned. Except for his coastal defense forces he has no reserves.

"The opportunity for success results is in front of us and we must use them to the utmost speed and effectiveness." A French column advancing westward between Toulon and Marseille rumbled five miles along highway east of the city and at one point advanced through a forest which had been cut off by the retreating Nazis.

AIX-EN-PROVENCE FALLS

Eleven miles north of Marseille the Americans topped the road and captured the town of Aix-En-Provence, largest town west of Italy, now held by the retreating Germans.

A 24-hour battle, fiercely resisting German fortified positions, ended Monday.

The swift drive to Apt put the Americans less than 30 miles east of the mountain slopes leading down into the Rhone valley, in the heart of which, would give them good cover and above room for that armor.

The new American Army had smashed 90 miles of Allied and Axis lines in the last main avenue of escape with several other other Reports.

Son Names Lyncher of Aged Negro Minister

By Federated Press

NEW ORLEANS, Aug. 22—Lynching a 60-year-old Negro minister March 31 because he hired a lawyer to defend his freed slave farm was revealed here in an affidavit sworn by Eldridge Simmons, son of the murdered man.

The affidavit was turned over to the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People, which has asked the NAACP to investigate the possibility that federal conspiracy statutes were violated.

The murdered man, the Rev. Isaac Simmons, hired a lawyer to protect his farm in Amite county, Miss., after it was run down there was still on his own.

The affidavit tells how a group of white men forced Eldridge Simmons into their car and drove to his father's house. Three of them remained in the car with car; three walked up to the father's house. Simmons said in the affidavit:

"Some time later, I saw the three men returning with my father. They were Noble Rider, Hopper Dawson, and another man... Noble Rider and the other man were walking on either side of my 60-year-old father, Isaac Simmons, while Dawson walked behind him kicking and punching him.

"When they reached the car, they made my father get in the front seat. They all got in the car. My father begged and prayed with them not to hurt him or me as they drove down the road. Two of them kept beating me as I sat in the back seat. Some distance down the road they stopped the car near a side road where there were lots of thickets. Let's take them down here, one of the white men said."
Dr. Tobias, Negro Republican, For FDR

Dr. Channing H. Tobias, member of the YWCA national board and influential Negro leader, yesterday announced his support for Franklin D. Roosevelt for re-election, in a letter to Sidney Hillman, Citizens' Political Action Committee chairman.

At the same time Tobias, a lifelong Republican, accepted membership in the committee which is conducting a nation-wide registration and vote drive in support of the election of Roosevelt, Truman, and a progressive Congress.

The Negro leader declared that he supports Roosevelt "because of his philosophy of government and the generally progressive course that he has followed for the past 12 years has increased the common man of every race, creed and color with a dignity and inspired him with a hope that he has never known before."

Tobias said that Roosevelt's policy is "right in every respect."

In accepting membership on the National Citizens' Political Action Committee, Tobias said: "I am proud and very glad to accept the immediate and long-term objectives of the committee and to sign on to work with it."

Tobias hailed President Roosevelt's direction of United Nations strategy and United Nations policy, "the people of this country feel that he has shown a true example in the face of all the enemies of the Negro race, he asserted.

Tobias said that the Negroes' future is "in the hands of the white people that govern this country" and that they should be "in every sense of the word a part of the Negro race."

Dangerous Partisanship

There is a dangerous and fantastic dead-end to which blind partisanship leads never so clearly indicated as in the most recent editorials of the N. Y. Herald Tribune on Thomas E. Dewey and the Dumbarton Oaks conference. A week ago, Dewey maliciously attacked the conference, and with it the immense achievements of the United States and our allies in laying the foundations of a world security conference. Sensing the national alarm with his tactics, Dewey produced his "expert" John Foster Dulles, and even tried to involve Wendell Willkie. Mr. Willkie's reactions were chilly, to say the least. But the Herald Tribune tries to make the most of it in an editorial yesterday which is a revelation of bankruptcy and partisanship between every line.

As the Tribune editors pretend to see it, Dewey is the man to unite different sections of American opinion. His invitation to Willkie is seen in two terms. And "the" Dewey continues along these lines (the editorial is very fify) the Tribune foresees a great future for him. On the other hand, while it cannot deny the Administration's achievements in foreign policy, the Tribune claims that the President labors under "disadvantages," alleging his difficulties with Congress, "weakness" and all the rest of the usual GOP campaign oratory.

If Dewey really intended to unite all sections—of Republican opinion alone—without genuine foreign policy, why did he not approach Mr. Willkie before his unscrupulous attack on the Dumbarton Oaks meeting? Why didn't he ascertain the truth of the Administration's position on the small matters in hand? This is really a change of heart in Dewey? Nothing of the kind.

He remains as always the puppet of Herbert Hoover, the darling of the Chicago Tribune, the steady henchman of the Hearst press. His attempt to deceive the nation with the Dulles-Hull meeting is only a maneuver, a cover-up for his effort to strike the Dumbarton Oaks meeting as a sham.

Positive endorsements of Cordell Hull's excellent remark to the Dumbarton Oaks conference are now in order. Genuine, whole-hearted support for the nation's foreign policy as ably developed by the President is our real need today.

Dewey Path Leads to a Dole

Governor Dewey's message to the New York State AFL convention calling for "not dopes but jobs for all" may be regarded in Republican circles as smart demagogy to sway votes from unthinking people, but labor thinkers and workers for it. Candidate Dewey will have his proof when the convention acts on the side he has need.

Between the Lines

Mr. John Foster Brains

by Joseph Starobin

For almost ten years now, the Republicans have had a world of fun with the term "brain trust." Everyone is familiar with the typical Hearst cartoon of a professor with a wheelchair, whisker, horn-rimmed glasses, clopped off on an open-air tour. Democratic leaders, however, have never had this kind of fun. Theirs has been the opposite.

On the one hand, the only disadvantage of the Democratic party is its alleged "lack of spine," of "baldness" and "short spectacles" according to the Hearst press. On the other hand, the Republicans have real brains to show and to use, and they are protected by the fact that they are not like the "brain trust."

The Republicans, therefore, should have no such fun, either, for if the world organization does not have the "brain trust," then it will not have any brains at all. The world organization must have brains in order to be a real organization, and it will have no brains if it does not have brains at all.

If the world organization is to be a real organization, it must have the brains to make it one. If it does not have the brains to make it one, then it will be no organization at all. And if it is no organization, then it is not useful, any more than a piece of wood is useful.

The world organization must have brains to make it a real organization, and it will not have brains if it does not have brains in the first place. And if it does not have brains in the first place, then it will not have brains at all.
For almost ten years now, the Republicans have had a world of fun with the term "brain trust." Everyone is familiar with the typical Hearst cartoon of a professor with a mustache, horn-rimmed glasses, and solemn expression. It was from this tradition that the term was derived. Nevertheless, it is no longer the custom to refer to the brain trust of a political campaign. In the campaign proper, the term is replaced by "advisers," "counselors," or some other euphemism.

But in the presidential campaign, the term "brain trust" is still in use. The reason is that the President is running for re-election, and he cannot afford to have a group of experts, all of whom are likely to be hostile to his policies, advising him. Therefore, he has appointed a group of people who are likely to be sympathetic to his policies, and who are willing to work for him. This group is known as the "brain trust."

Let's Face It

AN ARTICLE by Ruth Cristen in last Sunday's New York Times magazine ef-· fectively demonstrates the myth that the people of the United States repudiated the League of Nations after the last war.

The writer quotes extensively from the writings and speeches of the chief foes of the League to prove that the bulk of the American people wanted the League, or some form of international organization, but that they were thwarted by a tiny band of wittless men in the United States Senate.

What is interesting about the article is not the thesis of the League's defectiveness, but the absolutely complete ignorance of the people on this vital question.

The article quotes from a book written by Ralph E. Albert, who also wrote
"The League of Nations and Its Opponents." Albert states that the League of Nations was "the greatest experiment in international cooperation ever attempted." He goes on to say that the League was
"the most complete and unified organization that has ever been formed for the purpose of making the world safe for democracy." He also states that the League was
"a step in the right direction toward preventing war and promoting peace."

League was not a success because it was not strong enough to enforce its decisions.

Tricolor in Belgrade Rises as Gunfire Fades
By ALDO FORTE

OVERLOOKING BELGRADE, Haute Savoie, France, Aug. 22 (UP) — Standing on a wooden bridge spanning the Rhone River, I saw the new French flag of liberation being hoisted over the prefecture of Belgrade at noon today.

Maquis, armed with mortars and 77 mm. guns, set off from the Germans in other sectors, had captured the village in three days of bitter fighting. It had been the hardest for the Maquis to break in the department, and even as the flag of liberation was being run up, I could hear the last scattering of machine guns in the outskirts.

The eyes of the Alpine were con¬ ditioned to the gray of the Maquis whenever they made any move. A convoy of 300 men, the last of the great Italian Army, passed out of the battle zone

He said the men already west wearing the red, white and blue of France in their uniforms, and the girls tricolor ribbons in their hair. The streets still were bristling with half-burned barbed wire posts.

Later, the entire town participated in the funerals of four residents killed by the SB troops before withdrawing.

Legion of Honor—Tricolor in Belgrade Rises as Gunfire Fades

OVERLOOKING BELGRADE, Serbia, Yugoslavia, Aug. 22 (UPI)—Standing on a small wooden bridge spanning the Sava River, I saw the new French flag of liberation being hoisted over the fortress of Belgrade at noon today. The flag, which had been set up by the French Foreign Ministry, was raised on a tall flagpole. The crowd, estimated to be over 10,000 people, clustered around the bridge, and many carried French flags.

Recalls Errors Of Versailles

The mistakes of Versailles must be taken into account in any future war. The French armistice with Germany, signed by the representatives of both countries at Versailles on June 28, 1919, is a turning point in the history of the world. It was a moment of triumph for the Allies, who had defeated Germany in the great war of 1914-1918.

U.S. Military Mission Established in Yenan

THE FIRST AMERICAN MILITARY MISSION has been established in Yenan, capital of China’s Communist-held region of the Yangtze Valley. It is expected to be a training center for Chinese soldiers and a base for American military personnel.

The mission was established in response to the request of the Chinese government, which has been seeking American military assistance in its war against the Nationalists. The mission will be led by a team of American military officers and will include a small number of American soldiers.

The mission is expected to provide training in a wide range of military skills, including field tactics, weapons handling, and military strategy. It is also expected to provide logistical support to the Chinese military, including the supply of weapons and equipment.

The mission is a significant step in the strengthening of the relationship between the United States and China. It is hoped that this relationship will continue to grow, and that the United States will continue to provide military assistance to China in its war against the Nationalists.
Begin ‘Scare’ for Million Lost School Kids

By LOLA PAINE

Last year, 1,500,000 students from the nation’s high schools are expected to drop out of school and that is a basis for the campaign to keep them in school.

This is a crisis that is the basis of the Go-to-School drive that is being launched by the Children’s Bureau of the U.S. Department of Labor and the U.S. Office of Education, working cooperatively with the American Commission on School Information.

In the 19-25 year old group, 1,500,000 students are expected to drop out of school and that is a basis for the campaign to keep them in school.

Paul V. McNulty, War Manpower Commissioner:

Many of you have spent your summer vacation on farms, in stores, and factories helping with the war effort. But the struggle is far from over. We must continue to do our part.

The opening of school this fall is vital to the future of our children and our country.

Katherine F. Lenoort, Children’s Bureau, U.S. Dept. of Labor:

We have the greatest cause to do so ever. We are in the middle of the struggle for a better world.

Groups Aid School Drive

The Go-to-School drive launched this week by the Children's Bureau of the Office of Education is receiving widespread support from State, local, and civic organizations. The State and City Boards of Education, the Teachers' Organizations, and the National Y. W. C. A. for Social Service are among the groups supporting the drive.

Superintendent John E. Wade of the City Board of Education said that the drive made in recent years has kept high school students attending college, and that their studies will be renewed with this year.

The Teachers' Union has also thrown its wholehearted support into the drive, and, as a result of this, the drive is expected to be successful this year.

L.A.S. President William Green has endorsed the drive and asked all A.P. L. B. A. bodies to cooperate fully.

Young people have left school for a variety of reasons, chief among them being the desire to make money, to contribute to the war effort, and to help others. A prominent among the reasons is the desire to get a job and stay in the job they can get.

L.A.S. President William Green has endorsed the drive and asked all A.P. L. B. A. bodies to cooperate fully.

To improve the opportunities for stable postwar advancement are lost, health is often ruined, and millions of dollars are being spent on the youth's future education.

Owen’s Ambition to Pitch Leaves Leo Cold

Bill Mardo

I wanna be a pitcher... the old familiar cry of nearly every kid from the time he first fingers the seams of a baseball. But if we correctly recall those sandlot days, the guy who would always tote the rubber was somebody with a whistle on his fast ball, and the poor duck who wanted to pitch would amble dejectedly to the outfield and hope that not too many balls would come his way, and if they did, please God make them low and easy to catch.

Big League baseball has been chief fealty of players who've held positions they've never really wanted, and the history of the American pastime bears out a number of notable examples.

Bebe Ruth was a sensational southpaw who used to bust up his own batstems with a butcher knife, and it wasn't until years after he broke into the game that somebody realized he was worth a hell of a lot more playing every day in the outfield, rather than twice a week on the mound.

Bucky Walters was an average third baseman who secretly aspired to pitch. Well, he got that chance one day, and his shocking talents have been sparking the National League for many years now.

And now we have the most recent example of a big leaguer who'd long felt very much like the regular berth and try his hand at hurling. Yankee, none other than Mickey Owen, wants to toss away his shin guards and mask and handle the other end of the sixty-foot stretch from the mound to homeplate.

Surprisingly enough, the timberlike Dodger backstop might make a successful pitcher, if what his teammates say is true. A Dodger player who's watched Mickey over the years says that he's got the stuff when he has his heart set on a fast ball.

Owen's Ambition to Pitch Leaves Leo Cold

I wanna be a pitcher... the old familiar cry of nearly every kid from the time he first flowers the seams of a baseball. But if we reorient those sandlot days, the guy who would more than likely be somebody with a whirl at his fast one, and the poor duck who wanted to pitch would ambitiously throw to the outfield and have that much fun, we come his way, and if they did, God please make them low and easy to catch.

Big League baseball has been clocked full of players where they're held down positions they're never really wanted. The skim of this game also includes quite a number of stars who made a switch midway or late into the field.

Babe Ruth was a sensational southpaw who used to bust up his own ballgame. A good ball, and it wasn't until years after he broke into the game that somebody realized he was worth a hell of a lot more playing every day in the outfield, rather than twice a week on the mound.

Durocher was an average third baseman, who secretly desired to pitch. Well, he got that chance one day, and his churning talents have only increased the last few years now.

And now we have the most recent example of a big league who's like very much to form his regular berth and try his hand at hitting. Yes, none other than Mickey Owen wants to toss away his uniform and kick around the other end of the fifty-foot stretch from the mound to home plate.

Surprisingly enough, the typhoon Dodek has not made a successful pitcher, if what his teammates say is true. Dorek players who've watched Mickey work from a hill say that he's got quite a hop on his hand, a fair curve, and good control. Good control, that should interest Gardner, immensely, there's only one Brooklyn pitcher who can possibly fill the place he belongs, and that's Curt Davis.

But Dorek's lack of giving Owen any encouragement is another point, for Mickey in undoubtedly one of the three best receivers in the league, and his hit last night marked his 9th home run this season. Currently batting .310, he averaged his .300 mark for the spring, but his hard-hitting rampage continues as he's on the spot to thoroughly deflects the whole thing. The Dodgers are so far behind, it wouldn't make any real difference if Leo let Owen for the hill—sooner or later, when there's not enough people around. Dorek might be pleasantly surprised.

And after all, we must think of next year, won't we?

Blaze of Enemy From Mountain Top

By ALBERT V. RAYKELT

With the Chinese in their spring campaign to drive the enemy forces west of the Salween, Aug. 30 (Delaclay) — three tanks and a few guns were captured by American and Chinese engineers, who then were able to use them against the enemy positions, and the Chinese troops continued their advance.

The American and Chinese position was held by the Chinese engineers, who had to deal with the enemy's heavy artillery from the surrounding mountains, as well as with the enemy's machine guns on the surrounding hills. The Chinese also had to deal with the enemy's anti-aircraft guns, which were effective in bombarding the Chinese positions from the air.

Dear Mr. Platt:

It will be the tendency of filmdom in the postwar period to whom it up and glorify sex. Filmdom has done quite a service to the nation during the war by producing excellent war films of our own and our allies' war efforts. Filmdom proved itself a professional at war. To continue the good work, our film executives will have to realize that the danger of fascism will not be eliminated by a military defeat of the Axis.

The seeds of fascism will go underground in Europe, while trying to agitate on our continent. Watch Argentina. Watch our own native fascists trying to come to the top in the postwar period. It will be necessary for the film industry to produce movies showing how the fascists have taken advantage of the dislocations of our last postwar period; movies revealing around reconstruction themes in the countries of our allies; movies on hatred between Indians, Jews, and Greeks; movies about American means spreading disunity, as villains, journalistic comedies built upon characteristic characters.

All these films should have comedy and innuendo in them regarding how easy it is to build. Also educational starts for the advancement of an international cooperative spirit. A postwar world too much from filmdom. Not Hollywood.
