Statement of
William O'Dwyer
Executive Director, War Refugee Board.

If liberation is to mean anything to the scattered peoples of Europe who were freed by Germany's surrender, we must see to it that emergency aid -- enough and on time -- reaches them, until they can be finally resettled. The foreign relief agencies of the National War Fund are geared to do their part in that job. Support of the National War Fund, through generous contributions to local community war funds, will make it possible for these agencies to do their job well.

Suggested Statement for
Brigadier-General William O'Dwyer,
Executive Director, War Refugees Board

If liberation is to mean anything to the scattered remnants of Allied nationals who were freed by Germany's surrender, we must see to it that emergency aid — enough and on time — reaches them, until they can be resettled in their homelands. The foreign relief agencies of the National War Fund are geared to do their part in that job. Support of the National War Fund, through generous contributions to local community war funds, makes it possible for that job to be well done.

Dear Mr. Glauser:

Mr. Pehle has asked me to send you the following statement in response to your request for a statement for the National War Fund:

"It is part of the American tradition to help the helpless. From its own experience, the War Refugee Board knows that this tradition is being maintained through the program of the foreign relief and refugee agencies of the National War Fund. In the uncertain days ahead I feel sure that voluntary agencies will continue to be of supreme importance in meeting the needs of those who so desperately will require help."

(Signed) J. W. Pehle, Executive Director
War Refugee Board

Very sincerely yours,

As you suggested, Mr. Abrahamson and I have worked out the following statement for your approval:

Suggested Statement For
JOHN W. PUCH,
Executive Director, War Refugee Board

Helping the helpless is part of our American tradition. That they may survive, we must send them food. That they may hope again, we must provide refuge and guidance. We must restore health and self-sufficiency to these vast anonymous suffering people of our allies so that they may work for the rehabilitation of their homeland. In the foreign relief and refugee agencies of the National War Fund we have a network of human services which circle the globe and are geared to meet the increasing needs of the world's needy.
Your Gift at Work

AT HOME AND AROUND THE WORLD

Many of you, who have contributed to your community war fund for the National War Fund and its nineteen member agencies, see the results of your gift at work in the nearest USO, which may be no farther away than your railroad station.

But your gift is also at work in Stalag IIIB — Cassino — Bandar Shahpur — Tahiti — Kaisariani — and many other strange parts of the world.

These are far off places, but your gift is at work there, possibly serving someone you know, and certainly doing a humanitarian job.

That boy down the street who is now a prisoner of war may be having his spirit strengthened by the work of War Prisoners Aid in Stalag IIIB — a German prison camp.

A USO-Camp Shows unit is bringing a good laugh to a soldier in Cassino, perhaps the fellow who used to work next to you.

The neighbor's son, who went to sea with the merchant marine, may be at a United Seamen's Service center in Bandar Shahpur, Iran, resting up after a long trip.

Clothing may be furnished a refugee in Tahiti, or a Greek youngster fed at a soup kitchen in Kaisariani.

Your gift is aiding your own and your allies! Your generosity starts at home and goes around the world, following your own fighting forces and the peoples of your Allies who are in need.

The National War Fund, acting as your agent in this effective use of your money, expresses appreciation on behalf of the millions throughout the world who have been strengthened in their will to win.
