

TULLY ARCHIVE

Accession Number: 10-17

PROVENANCE NOTE: See the Tully Archive Provenance Timeline within this Finding Aid for a detailed discussion of the history and background of this unique collection.

CONTENT NOTE: This collection is composed of three smaller collections: the Grace Tully Papers, the Marguerite A. (“Missy”) LeHand Papers, and the Franklin D. Roosevelt Papers. See the Series (Sub-Collection) Description page within this Finding Aid for more detailed content descriptions.

TITLING NOTE: The collection is titled the “Tully Archive” because, while there are three distinct collections within it, all of the materials were in the sole custody of Grace Tully from at least 1941 until her death in 1984, at which time the collection was transferred through numerous dealers and private owners until its ultimate donation to the Roosevelt Library. The title accurately reflects its unique provenance.

ARRANGEMENT NOTE: When the Tully Archive was acquired, there was no discernable original order because the collection had passed through several dealers, auction houses, and private owners prior to its donation to the Library. The materials had been rearranged and repackaged to enhance salability, not preserve original archival order. Archivists at the Roosevelt Library who organized the materials for research imposed a reasonable and accessible order to each sub-collection consistent with standard archival practices. In arranging the collection into its component sub-collections, if original ownership could not be clearly determined, the materials were deemed to belong in the Tully Papers.

QUANTITY: 6.552 cu. ft. (13 boxes)

The writings of Eleanor Roosevelt within this collection are subject to Mrs. Roosevelt’s literary estate. All other materials are subject to the United States Copyright law, 17 U.S.C. 101, et seq.

TULLY ARCHIVE PROVENANCE TIMELINE

- August 3, 1980—in a New York Times interview of Grace Tully on the occasion of her 80th birthday, Grace makes mention of having several dozen handwritten notes by FDR in her possession.
- August 27, 1980—Roosevelt Library Director William R. Emerson writes to Grace asking her to place the materials at the Library. Grace responds that she does not want to part with them at that time, but that “The Library will undoubtedly get them after my death or possibly before.”
- June 15, 1984—Grace Tully dies. She never married and had no children. The Archive passed into the hands of her surviving sister Paula Larrabee, who also worked in the Roosevelt White House.
- March 11, 1985—Library Director Emerson writes to Mrs. Larrabee and again expresses interest in obtaining Grace’s collection of Roosevelt materials. No further contact between the Library and Grace’s family took place after this.
- At this point, custody of the Archive grows murky. At some point it passed into the hands of two people (perhaps relatives, but this is unclear) who acted as caretakers for Mrs. Larrabee until her death. It is believed that the Archive passed from these individuals to a small auction house in Atlanta.
- April 2000—the Archive was placed up for sale through Guernsey Auction House in New York, New York.
- 2000-2002—it is believed that Glenn Horowitz Bookseller, New York, New York, acquired the Archive for approximately $3.5 million and began preparing it for resale. It was during an event at the Horowitz showroom in 2000 that current Roosevelt Library Director Cynthia Koch saw portions of the collection on display and suspected the true extent of the materials.
- In 2002, The Archive was purchased from Horowitz by Hollinger International Corporation for $8 million. Lord Conrad Black was CEO of Hollinger at the time and an avid collector of FDR-related materials. Lord Black is the author of the book, Franklin Delano Roosevelt: Champion of Freedom (Public Affairs, 2003).
- August 2004—the Roosevelt Library was notified that Hollinger and its successor Sun Times Media Group had placed the entire Tully Archive for sale at Christie’s in New York, New York. Christie’s planned to break the collection apart and sell it in lots. Christie’s graciously allowed members of the Roosevelt Library and National Archives staff to conduct a survey of the materials.
- Based on this survey, the National Archives determined that portions of it (but only portions) were clearly presidential materials that should have passed to the FDR Library in accordance with President Roosevelt’s directions prior to his death.
- Subsequent settlement discussions between the parties led to a joint letter agreement signed in 2005 and extended several times in which Sun Times Media Group/Hollinger International agreed to seek tax relief from Congress to facilitate the donation of the entire Tully Archive to the Roosevelt Library.

- July 2005—by agreement of the parties, the Tully Archives was packed and sealed by Roosevelt Library Supervisory Archivist Bob Clark and transported to the Roosevelt Library for safekeeping during the settlement discussions.
- March 31, 2009—Sun Times Media Group filed for Chapter 11 bankruptcy protection.
- October 8, 2009—the United States Bankruptcy Court approved the sale of Sun Times Media Group’s remaining assets, including the Tully Archive, to the Chicago Newspaper Liquidation Corp.
- February 1, 2010—President Barack Obama signed into law SB 692, sponsored in the Senate by Charles Schumer (D-NY) and in the House by Rep. Louise Slaughter (D-NY), facilitating the donation of the Tully Archive. The law provided for the waiver of the government’s claims to the papers provided that the owner made a gift of the entire collection to the National Archives and Records Administration.
- June 28, 2010—the United States Bankruptcy Court approved the donation of the Tully Archive to the National Archives and Records Administration by Chicago Newspaper Liquidation Corp.
- June 30, 2010—Chicago Newspaper Liquidation Corp. and the Archivist of the United States David S. Ferriero executed the Deed of Gift formally transferring ownership of the Tully Archive to the National Archives and Records Administration.

Grace Tully Biographical Timeline

- Born in Bayonne, New Jersey, August 9, 1900.
- Father died when young, and she and two sisters and brother were raised by devout Catholic mother.
- Attended parochial and convent schools before enrolling in secretarial school.
- Worked for Bishop (then later) Cardinal Patrick Hayes as secretary for ten years.
- Sought new employment with Democratic National Committee in 1928.
- Assigned to assist Eleanor Roosevelt who was organizing support for presidential nominee Al Smith.
- When FDR was nominated for Governor later that year, Grace went to work on Roosevelt's staff.
- Grace performed the dictation and typing duties that FDR's principal personal secretary Missy LeHand disliked.
- Grace served with FDR in Albany during his four years as Governor of New York.
- Moved to Washington in 1933 when FDR elected President. Roles of Tully and LeHand were by this time well defined and accepted. Grace performed dictation and typing, managed the President's mail, and served as primary files manager for the White House.
- After Missy LeHand suffered a stroke in 1941, Grace became FDR's primary personal secretary.
- Grace was in Warm Springs with FDR when he died on April 12, 1945.
- Grace thereafter became executive secretary of the Franklin D. Roosevelt Memorial Foundation.
- Prior to his death, FDR appointed Grace to a three person committee to serve as a steward of FDR's papers in preparation for their opening to researchers. The other members of the committee were Harry L. Hopkins and Samuel Rosenman.
- The papers committee was disbanded in the late 1940s after ownership of the FDR papers was confirmed in the United States government following the administration of Roosevelt's estate. The establishment of the committee was deemed a non-testamentary request by the President not binding on the Archivist of the United States.
- In 1955, Tully joined the staff of the Senate Democratic Policy Committee, working closely with then-Senate Majority leader Lyndon B. Johnson. She remained as an aide there until 1965.
- Grace Tully died on June 15, 1984 at George Washington University Hospital in Washington DC.
- She never married and had no children.

Marguerite A. (“Missy”) LeHand Biographical Timeline

- Marguerite A. LeHand, known as Missy, was born in Potsdam, New York on September 13, 1898, and grew up in Somerville, Massachusetts.
- Graduated from high school in 1917.
- Held several clerical and secretarial jobs before going to work for the Democratic National Committee headquarters during the 1920 campaign.
- After the defeat of the 1920 Democratic ticket, including his own as the vice presidential nominee, Franklin D. Roosevelt, hired Missy as his personal secretary.
- Was working for FDR at the time he was stricken with polio in 1921.
- After FDR purchased property in Warm Springs, Georgia, Missy traveled with FDR and served as both personal secretary and hostess because Eleanor Roosevelt disliked Warm Springs.
- After FDR was elected Governor of New York, Missy continued to serve as sometime hostess in Albany in Mrs. Roosevelt’s absence.
- Upon FDR’s election to the presidency, Missy accompanied the Roosevelts to Washington and moved into the White House as did adviser Louis McHenry Howe.
- Missy was principal personal secretary (“PS”) to the President, and she would meet with FDR in the morning as he took breakfast in bed, read the newspapers with him, and prepare for the day’s schedule.
- In addition to her official duties, Missy held power of attorney for FDR and managed his bank accounts, including paying his bills by check.
- Missy was considered a valued member of the inner circle, and her opinion on matters of state and of politics was sought and considered. She was “one of the boys” and would gather with the rest of FDR’s close advisers and listen to election returns, participate in regular card games, and attend FDR’s daily afternoon cocktail hours.
- Missy was hardworking and devoted to FDR and her job, rarely taking an afternoon off and even more rarely taking a vacation.
- While her relationship with Eleanor Roosevelt could be strained over the division of labor and confusion of roles, Mrs. Roosevelt treated Missy like a friend and relative.
- Missy suffered a debilitating stroke in 1941 after 21 years of loyal service to FDR. She was hospitalized for several months, then continued her convalescence in Warm Springs and then in Massachusetts.
- Missy LeHand died on July 31, 1944. She never married and had no children. According to the terms of her 1935 Testamentary Instructions, Grace Tully oversaw the administration of her estate and was instructed to dispose of Missy’s papers, which is how it is believed that the LeHand Papers became part of the Tully Archive.

SERIES (SUB-COLLECTION) DESCRIPTIONS

Grace Tully Papers (Boxes 1-9): This collection includes an extensive series of personal correspondence between Grace Tully, Franklin and Eleanor Roosevelt, other members of the Roosevelt Administration and White House staff, friends and family. A recurring name throughout the correspondence is Paula Tully/Paula Larrabee. Paula was Grace's sister who also worked in the White House. Of particular interest in the correspondence files are letters from Eleanor Roosevelt revealing the extent to which Grace assisted Mrs. Roosevelt in her day-to-day activities. There also is correspondence exchanged between Grace and Lyndon B. and Lady Bird Johnson that casts light on Grace's life after the Roosevelt years. The collection also contains a series of writings by Grace Tully, including draft notes and chapters for her book FDR: My Boss as well as unpublished reminiscences of FDR. Finally, there is an extensive series of memorabilia, including copies of FDR speech texts inscribed by the President to Grace, copies of White House press releases, a set of official Logs of the President's Trips, inauguration memorabilia, and colorful menus from railroad trips Grace took with the President.

Marguerite A. ("Missy") LeHand Papers (Box 10): This collection is composed primarily of personal correspondence files. Of particular importance are personal letters Missy received from diplomatic figures abroad at the outbreak of and in the early years of the war, including Amb. Joseph P. Kennedy in London, Amb. William C. Bullitt in Paris, and Carmel Offie, Bullitt's assistant in Paris. Also interesting are the letters from FDR's mother Sara Delano Roosevelt. The collection also includes Missy's 1935 Testamentary Instructions as well as a draft article about her experiences working in the White House with FDR.

Franklin D. Roosevelt Papers (Boxes 11-13): This collection can truly be described as a "first draft of history." As FDR's personal secretaries, both Missy LeHand and Grace Tully took dictation, drafted correspondence, and worked on the President's speech drafts. As a result, the two women handled drafts of correspondence, handwritten notes or chits from FDR that would have been typed into memorandum form, and first and intermediate drafts of speeches and messages. This collection contains all of this variety of material and is primarily composed of documents that normally would have been filed in FDR's own papers in the White House that came to the Library after his death. For reasons lost to history, this material remained in the custody of his secretaries and became part of the Tully Archive instead of being filed within FDR's own papers.
