My dear Miss Lehand:

If the President is not entirely swamped with work, will you please give him the enclosed letter?

I say this because I know how valuable his time is, and you will know whether or not it is best to take up his time reading it.

Naturally, of course, I do not expect any answer.

The President said he would call on me if I could do anything for him, and I could get him anytime through you, but I shall never take up his time unless it is something I can do for him.

My very best to you and congratulations to all of you down there for keeping in such good condition. ^

Very sincerely yours,

R. E. Byrd
